

Ronaldo's dad thanked Carlos

MADRID, Sept 16: Real Madrid's Brazilian star Roberto Carlos on Tuesday revealed that the father of Brazilian teammate Ronaldo had thanked him for saving his sons' lives before the World Cup final, when Ronaldo suffered convulsions, reports AFP.

"Ronaldo's father thanked me for saving his sons life, as we were sharing the same room as he knew I was the first one to become aware of the situation," Roberto Carlos told a sports daily.

He added that Brazilian teammate Giovanni, who plays his club football with Real's rivals Barcelona, was wrong to have accused him of harming Ronaldo by revealing the problems the star had before the July 13 final against France, which a subdued Brazil lost 3-0.

Hingis to play in Leipzig

LEIPZIG, Germany, Sept 16 (AP/Internet): World number one Martina Hingis has entered the $450,000 Leipzig women's tennis tournament in November, organisers said on Wednesday.

Tournament director Henner Ziegfeld said Hingis, who was beaten by Lindsay Davenport in the US Open final on Saturday, had confirmed she would play in the event from November 2 to 8.

The tournament was originally due to take place from September 28 to October 4 but was delayed to avoid a clash with the Grand Slam Cup in Munich.

Dengue fever under control

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept 16: The three Commonwealth Games dengue fever victims remained in hospital today but there was relief that the illness did not appear to be spreading, reports Reuters.

A fourth casualty of Kuala Lumpur's draining tropical heat, Indian cricketer Amay Khurasia, who collapsed on the field from heat exhaustion during a match on Tuesday, was released from hospital.

He was on his way home with the rest of the Indian team after their elimination from the Games.

Come on Australia, give the others a go

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept 16 (Reuters/Internet): Aussie, Aussie, Aussie, Aussie, Aussie. What is this? Koala Lumpur?

The Australians were at it again in the Commonwealth Games on Tuesday. They swept all five swimming gold medals for the second time in four days. Sydney schoolboy Ian Thorpe earned himself two more renditions of his national anthem, Advance Australia Fair.

There were medals in the cycling, in shooting and a captain's century by Steve Waugh to rescue his team in a critical cricket match against India.

There were medals in gymnastics, cycling, shooting and even tennis bowling.

On Sunday, two women shooters won the gold that saw Australia overtake England at the top of the all-time medal tally of a spectacle that began 68 years ago as the Empire Games.

Australians have been on song since the whole range of Commonwealth sports in Kuala Lumpur and no one can question the team spirit that has seen the Land from Down Under soar ever higher atop the medals table.

But enough already. Isn't it getting a bit boring? Is the record not getting scratched?

Wasn't this meant to be an international sports event? The question could even be asked: don't the over-achieving Australians risk killing the goose that lays the big golden egg?

In the run-up to the Sydney 2000 Olympics, no effort or expense has been spared to nurture young talent in the sunny sports-mad nation of 18 million people.

Australian training programmes, particularly in swimming, are among the very best in the world and the youngsters have been far exceeding their targets in competition.

Australia has won 17 of 20 swimming gold medals in the first four days of competition. Thorpe, still just 15, has won four, shared in one world record and come within a fingertip of breaking the oldest world mark in men's swimming.

After four days of competition, Australia has 28 golds, against Canada's eight and England's five.

That's hardly giving the others a fair go.

And the gold rush is not over yet, although the start of the athletics programme on Wednesday should allow some of the other teams a look in.

Australia look likely to beat their record of 87 golds from Victoria, Canada, four years ago and the magic three-figure total could be in reach -- although the team refuses to talk targets.

Perry Crosswhite, head of the Australian Commonwealth Games Association, reminded the athletes before they arrived in Kuala Lumpur that winners were not always popular.

"We say to them, you're here to win with style and humility and to lose with grace," he said.

So far, Australia's winners have followed instructions.

"They're enjoying themselves, but I don't think that Australian athletes are being anything but gracious in competition. I'm very proud of them," Crosswhite said on Tuesday.

He rejects any suggestion the Australians might be doing a bit too well, suggesting the onus is on other nations to lift their game.

"What are we supposed to do -- tell them not to win? It's a matter for the other nations in the Commonwealth to deal with."

The other teams are dealing with it as best they can, trying to motivate their current champions to beat the world-class Australians while cultivating the athletes of the future.

"They certainly have a budget I would envy," said John Thresher, president of Athletics Canada. "For example, they took some 60 athletes to the world junior championships in Annecy, France. We took 12... it's a model we would like to aim for."

The English are wearing their best stiff upper lips. "They were not unduly concerned," said spokeswoman Caroline Searle, reckoning on a come back in the athletics.

C'wealth hockey Mixed day for India

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept 16: India's men trounced Trinidad and Tobago 8-0 but their women lost 4-0 to the Australians Wednesday in the field hockey competition of the Commonwealth Games, reports AP.

With the ball rarely leaving Indian sticks, star forward Dhanraj Pillay, Baljit Singh and P Laxmanan scored two goals each while V Selvaraj and Gagan Ajit Singh had one each in the Group A match.

The previously unbeaten Indian women, however, were no match for the Australians, who now top Group A and are favourites to win the gold medal.

For Australia, striker Shelley Andrews scored in the 10th and 62nd minutes and Katrina Powell in the 12th and 22nd.

The Indian women might have lost by a wider margin had a second-half goal been allowed. The umpires appeared not to realise that the ball went through a hole in the middle of the goal netting and Australian pleas and protests went in vain.

The Australian women already had won their first three games by a total of 29 goals to none, against Scotland, Malaysia and Jamaica.

They had earned 49 penalty corners to one (unconverted) and rained 102 shots on goal to just seven against them.

They have just one easy group match against Trinidad and Tobago Thursday before Saturday's semifinal.

In Group B, New Zealand moved closer to a semifinal berth by edging Canada 2-1.

Canada scored first when skipper Lauree Koepke flicked the ball in off a short corner rebound in the 23rd minute.

Mandy Smith scored the equaliser and Robbie Matthews put in the winner in the 40th minute.

India's shooting ace Jaspal Rana (R) looks in admiration at his gun after winning the gold along with partner Ashok Pandit (L) in the pairs centre fire pistol event of the Commonwealth Games on September 15.

Intra-Aussie rivalry

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept 16 (AP): World champion Grant Hackett coasted to the head of a stellar 1,500-metre freestyle field Wednesday for a final that could be the best in history.

Hackett will have to overcome the Kieren Perkins factor to win Thursday's final, where six of the eight swimmers appear capable of cracking 15 minutes.

The most under that barrier in one race has been three, and that was more than seven years ago at the 1991 World Championships in Perth.

Germany's Jorg Hofmann set the then world record, edging Perkins, while another German, Stefan Pfeiffer, also beat 15 minutes.

Perkins, who has won the past two Olympic titles and plans to chase a third in Sydney in 2000, holds the world record at the 14:41.66 he recorded at the 1994 Commonwealth Games.

But Perkins' campaign has been set back by illness, both before leaving home and on arrival in Kuala Lumpur. Perkins swam 15:34.75 in Wednesday's heats, qualifying sixth. He was unable to hide his disappointment when asked if he still thought he could break 15 minutes.

"Before this morning (coach) John Carey thought I could still do it, but I'll have to speak to him about what he thinks after that," Perkins said after his first international 1,500-metre swim since the Atlanta Olympics.

"That was a hard swim for me but then I always hurt in the first race of the meet, so it's difficult for me to know if it's a first-up swim or I truly am in trouble."

Perkins' rivals have seen him play dead before. At the Atlanta Olympics, he made the final by just 23 seconds and mauled fellow Australian Daniel Kowalski from lane eight to win in 14:56.40. Kowalski will also be in Thursday's field.

Hackett became the second fastest Australian when he won the world title this year in 14:51.19.

The 1,500-metre event holds a special place for Australians, and the final is expected to be the most watched 15 minutes of television in the country this year.

That popularity has everything to do with Perkins. Australia's most bankable athlete outside of golfer Greg Norman and US Open tennis champion Pat Rafter.

Hackett admitted he was once rattled by Perkins, but says he's over it now. He also has been in good form, getting the 400-metre silver medal behind Ian Thorpe on Tuesday.

"When you get up on the blocks next to someone like Kieren Perkins it's easy to get excited, there's such a buildup about it," Hackett said. "Once I would have been nervous but now? Not really. I've got used to seeing him and when I get on the blocks I've just got seven competitors."

Olympic bronze medalist Graeme Smith of Scotland qualified second fastest by setting the pace for Hackett in their heat Tuesday.

England's Ian Wilson was third and he too is in striking distance of 15 minutes with a best of 15:03.72. South Africa's Ryk Neethling is the sixth swimmer who believes he is capable of breaking the barrier.

Hackett has a barrier of his own to chase.

"I think you'll need a 14.50 but my goal is to do a personal best and get into the 14:40s. It would be great."

Shearer puts transfer talk to rest

LONDON, Sept 16 (Reuters/Internet): England captain Alan Shearer tried to quash speculation he could be about to leave premier league club Newcastle United.

The centre forward was responding to an appeal from fans for him to clarify his position following reports that Aston Villa had opened talks with Newcastle over a possible 16 million pounds ($26.7 million) transfer.
