Morgan makes

Wales proud

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept 20:
Cheered on by parents and grandparents, Keily Morgan gave Wales their first ever badminton gold medal when she defeated Aparna Popat of India to take the Commonwealth to take the Commonwealth Games women's singles title today, reports Reuters.

Morgan, the top seed, carried the burden of golden hopes well as she held off a determined fightback by the Indian, who had taken her to three games in the team contest preliminaries some 10 days before and ousted the second seed Julia Mann of England in a remarkable semi-

Morgan, who won in straight games 13-10, 11-5, has been having sessions with a Welsh Sports Council psychologist and uses special tapes to help her relax.

Earlier, top seeds Simon Archer and Joanne Goode retained the mixed doubles title for England with a crushing 15-2, 15-5 win over their unseeded teammates Nathan Robertson and Joanne Davies in a match that lasted only 36 minutes.

Michelle's double delight

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept 20: Australia's Michelle Martin became the first player to win two Commonwealth Games squash titles today debut when she added the mixed doubles to her women's singles triumph, reports AFP.

Martin and Craig Rowland beat top-seeded English pair Simon Parke and Suzanne Horner 15-4, 15-7.

The Australians established a dominance from the third point when Horner accidentally impeded Martin's backswing. was hit by the racket and conceded a penalty point.

The Aussies were soon 9-2 and 11-3 up, gaining another penalty point when Parke's shot hit Martin, who had been unable to get out of the way because she was impeded by Horner.

With the two women several times struggling to give each other a clear view of the ball, the catalogue of English mishaps continued.

The final point of the first game saw Horner inadvertently hit the ball straight at Parke, but for a while in the second game the English were able to stay on terms.

Horner began to play better, but the Australians made another surge after being disappointed by a let decision at 7-6 which they thought should have been another penalty point.

Horner was again hit by Martin's backswing, but the referee decided the English woman had been making every effort to get out of the way. Rowland's loud protest made no difference. The score moved rapidly from 7-6 to 11-6, with Martin sound with her driving along the forehand wall and dangerous with drops, and Rowland creating plenty of openings from the backhand side.

Tyson must offer more proof he's normal

LAS VEGAS, Sept 20 (Reuters/AP): The Nevada State Athletics Commission on Saturday

voted 5-0 to continue the hearing regarding the relicensing of Mike Tyson for two weeks pending further psychiatric evaluation of the former world heavyweight cham-

The vote ended 6-1/2 hours of testimony by a parade of at-torneys and physicians but, unexpectedly little by Tyson him-

"Nothing in my life is private," said Tyson, agreeing to the two stipulations made by the NSAC, one that Tyson undergo evaluation by an independent psychiatrist and two, that he wave normal doctor patient confidentiallity privilege and that all records made during that evaluation by public record.

The commission will pick three psychiatrists and Tyson will be able to choose one of them for an examination expected within a week or so. If the boxer is found mentally fit to fight again, the commissioners are expected to approve his

Another hearing was scheduled for Oct 3.

"If they say he's normal and can fight again, then we have the responsibility to maybe, probably, license him to fight again," commission chairman Dr Elias Ghanem said.

Tyson was at times agitated and hostile but ultimately contrite in front of the commission that banned him from boxing in its state — and virtually the entire United States - on July 9, 1997, after he bit Evander Holyfield's ears in a heavyweight title bout.

Tyson once again apologised and said the ban has left him all but broke. He promised he was a changed man and would never misbehave again.

"Trust me, this won't happen anymore," he said. "I believed I was bigger than the sport. I realise now I'm Mike Tyson the athlete. It brought me down to earth a great deal.

The commissioners, however, want an outside source to determine whether Tyson is ready to return to the sport he once dominated.

"I believe a medically assisted solution is the fairest solution to this matter," Ghanem said. "We owe it to Mr Tyson. Anything less, in my opinion, would be wrong."

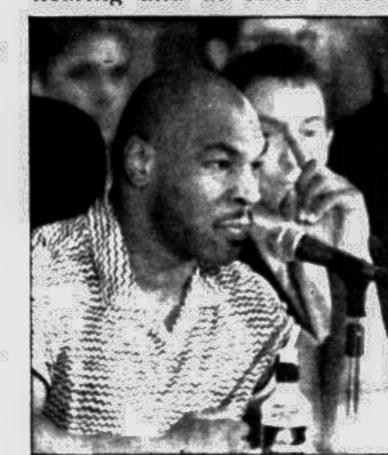

Tyson's lawyer, Dale Kinsella, told the commission that the boxer has lost 50 million dollars to 65 million dollars because of the ban. The former heavyweight champ's advisers say his money troubles may force him to fight overseas if the commission rejects his application.

Tyson's character was also a key issue. When commissioner Lorenzo Fertitta asked the boxer why he always seemed to be getting in trouble, Tyson

"I'm belligerent sometimes when I'm provoked. I'm tired of people trying to take advantage of me, trying to bully me around and antagonize me. It's been pervasive for so many years that I'm a bad seed."

Tyson is accused of assaulting two men following a minor traffic accident involving his wife's Rolls-Royce in a Washington, DC, suburb. A preliminary hearing is set for Oct 2. But because the matter is pending. Kinsella said Tyson would not answer questions about it.

Tyson, who arrived on a red motorcycle wearing a leather jacket and jeans, sounded annoyed at times during the hearing and at other times buried his head in his hands as if he were disgusted. At one point he said he was being "humiliated.

He entered the meeting room surrounded by bodyguards and an entourage of about a dozen people.

On a hill next to the building where the hearing was conducted stood a green, 3-metre (10-foot) sign that said: "Mike Tyson Is Still Our Hero." Six protesters from the feminist group the National Organisation for Women demonstrated outside the building.

Kinsella opened the proceedings by reading a letter from Tyson to Ghanem.

"I acknowledge that I made a mistake and again I apologise for it," the fighter said in the letter. "I assure you this kind of behaviour will not repeat itself. Let's put this behind us and allow boxing to be what it should be, the best sport in the world."

Tyson sat at a table in front of the commissioners as his lawyer read the letter. Sitting with Tyson were his wife, Monica, and other lawyers and advisers. The audience included celebrities such as basketball stars Magic Johnson and Karl Malone.

Kinsella told the commission that Tyson has suffered "financially, massively" in the 14 months he hasn't been allowed to fight. The boxer has surrounded himself with a new set of advisers and lawyers, Kinsella said, meaning he's no longer associated with promoter Don King and others

Tyson feels cheated him. "He has significantly changed his life, the lawyer

Kinsella presented a chart to the commissioners that showed Tyson received just 5.2 million dollars of the 30 million dollars he was supposed to earn from the last Holyfield fight. Most of it was lost to taxes King's take, and a 3 million dollar fine for biting the cham-

In addition, the Internal Revenue Service, the US federal government's tax collection agency, has placed a 13 million dollar lien on Tyson for unpaid taxes, and the boxer is facing an 8 million dollar judgment to former trainer Kevin Rooney from a civil lawsuit, which is being appealed.

During the discussion of Tyson's finances, the boxer interrupted the commissioners. saying. "My life is on trial, so to speak. I'm not going to allow other people to have nice things and my kids to starve. You've got to understand I care about my kids."

Commissioner Luther Mack then asked him how many contracts he had signed in his career, and Tyson snapped, "Do you really think I know, sir? Do you know any fighter who can actually say that?

Mack said he wasn't trying to humiliate him. "You are humiliating me. Tyson said.

Later, psychologist Norton Roitman, who examined Tyson last month, told the commissioners that the fighter has changed and has a bright future. He said Tyson is "sort of desperate to feel touched and loved." As the Tyson camp ended its case before the commission, the boxer gave one final statement. Norman Bates is a serial murder character from the Alfried Hitchcock film Psycho.

Tyson's application in Nevada comes two months after he applied in eastern state of New Jersey, which was seen as an attempt to get around the

If Tyson gets his license back he could fight again in the United States before the end of the year. Rejection would mean another year on the sidelines at least in Nevada and the states that honour its suspension and threaten a career that was fading even before he bit Holy-

2008 Olympics KL's next target

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept 20: Following its successful staging of the Commonwealth Games, Malaysia will bid to become host of the 2008 Olympics, Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad said Sunday, reports

"I doubt whether we can succeed, but we will make a bid anyway," the national news agency Bernama quoted Mahathir as telling reporters after visiting the Commonwealth Games main press centre.

He noted the greater difficulties in playing host to the Olympics, which had 11,000 athletes at Atlanta in 1996, compared to those of the Commonwealth Games, which had about 5,000 here and slightly more than half the number of

For one thing, Mahathir said, Malaysia needed to have a fairly good number of athletes to compete against world-class sportsmen. International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch made a similar point when he visited the Commonwealth Games here earlier.

Mayer-Vorfelder

re-elected FRANKFURT, Sept 20: With German soccer in turmoil since the country's dismal World Cup performance, Gerhard Mayer-Vorfelder Saturday was reelected to the post of chairman of the Bundesliga governing committee, reports AP.

But VfB Stuttgart's president may not hold the job very long amidst growing pressure to change the position from honorary to a full-time paid posi-

"Professionals have to be led by professionals," said Bayern Munich's influential Franz Beckenbauer, who last week blasted the committee as a "laughingstock."

Mayer-Vorfelder, just one of two survivors amidst a shakeup of the 12-member committee, refused to answer the question if he would stay in his position if it becomes a full-time job. "We're reached the limits of what's possible with an honorary position, but I'll answer that question when its necessary," he said. Since the public outrage that followed three-time champion Germany's early ousting in the quarterfinals at the World Cup in France, almost all its soccer structures have come under fire. Head coach Berti Vogts fell victim to leading soccer figures and the media's demands for a shakeup after German players at the World Cup proved to be deficit both in ball-handling skills and tactics. The Bundesliga governing committee, with representatives from all 36 first and second division clubs holding an annual meeting, also demanded more independence from the DFB, the umbrella organization that runs soccer inside the country down to amateurs and youth leagues.

Holyfield holds on to crown

19 (Reuters/ Internet): Evander Holyfield strugagainst

lightly-regarded Vaughn Bean before taking charge with a controversial 10th-round knockdown Saturday as he retained his International Boxing Federation heavyweight title by unanimous decision.

Holyfield, surging into action after a lethargic stretch in the middle rounds, put Bean to the floor for the first time in the challenger's career late in the 10th round. Two right uppercuts jarred

Bean and the champion followed with a left to the side of the head that had him wobbly. With Bean struggling to hold on, Holyfield turned and threw him into the ropes. As Bean bounced off, bent low, referee Brian Garry began to step in, but Holyfield hit the challenger with a whipping right to the temple that put him down. Bean bravely survived the round and withstood more fierce Holyfield combinations in the 11th before slugging it out with the champion in the last round of a surprisingly competitive fight before a crowd of more than 40,000 at the Georgia One judge scored it 116-111, with the other two cards giving the bout to Holyfield 117-110. The victory improved Holyfield's record to 36-3. Bean, who I had only once before in his career fought past the seventh round, dropped to 31-2.

"I wasn't overconfident," insisted Holyfield, who had looked so brilliant in twice beating Mike Tyson and stopping Michael Moorer in his last three bouts. "I was fighting a guy who was inspired.

"The man fought a good fight. You have to give the man credit. He came to fight.

Bean, who at 5-foot-11 (1.80m) was 3-1/2 inches shorter than Holyfield but outweighed the champion by 14 pounds (6.5 kg) at 231 (105 kg).

Premiership may introduce TV reterees

LONDON, Sept 20: A proposed shake-up in the way the English Premiership is referred could lead to the introduction of television replays for controversial goals, the league said, reports AFP.

Professional referring is another key part of the proposals which received warm backing from Manchester United boss Alex Ferguson.
