DU BCL's council session tomorrow

of Bangladesh Chhatra League (BCL) will hold its council session tomorrow to elect new

The council session is being held after four years. The last session was held in July 1994 in which a three-member committee was formed.

The three-member committee comprising a president, a general secretary and an organising secretary ran the DU unit BCL for the last four years. No full-fledged committee of the unit was formed so far. This time BCL activists are expecting a full-fledged committee.

"This time we want a fullfledged committee of the DU unit of BCL," said an activist.

Meanwhile, councils of all hall units have been completed without any major untoward incident except the one at the Sir A F Rahman Hall where some "dissatisfied" activists ransacked the council venue after announcement of the committee by DU unit president of BCL Bahadur Bepari.

From Staff Correspondent SYLHET, Oct 12: Twenty-five students, who began hunger strike yesterday morning at the Shahjalal University of Science and Technology broke their fast this afternoon after assurance from the VC that their demands will be met.

The students under the banner of All Party Students Unity had been pressing for scrapping of the committee which was formed to probe the untoward incident that took place on the campus on September 6.

Kamaluddin steps aside from FBCCI election

Vice-president candidate and Chittagong Chamber president Kamaluddin Ahmed for the October 15 FBCCI election has withdrawn from the race yesterday, reports UNB.

M A Munim, backed by Sylhet Chamber, is the lone candidate for the post to be elected unopposed from the chambers

Explaining the reason to FBCCI Election Board for his withdrawal, Kamaluddin said he preferred to avoid countrywide election campaign that entails time and energy which are needed more for the flood ravaged economy.

colleges and madrasahs had been turned into flood shelters during the deluge. The district's total population is 11,88387.

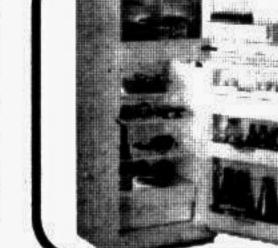

A total of 81 people and 1745 cattlehead died during the two month-long flood. Of the 307 km roads and highways affected by the flood, 165 km were damaged totally. Seven bridges and culverts were damaged totally and 297 were damaged partially.

The flood also damaged four educational institutions totally and 704 partially. The number of damaged trees is 1,74,752.

Munshiganj is one of the worst flood hit districts. As the district is surrounded by three major rivers - the Padma, Meghna and Dhaleshwari vast areas went under water.

All the six thanas — Munshigani Sadar, Tongibari, Sirajdikhan. Lohojang, Srinagar and Gazaria - have been affected by the flood. The number of affected unions is 67, covering an area of 841 square km. The flood also affected standing crops on around 50,000 acres of land in the district. There are several hundred rice mills, cold storages and knitting mills producing nylon yarn and fishing net in the district. As the flood water rose unusually, these became inoperative. About 50,000 workers of these rice mills and cold storages became jobless.

Bangabandhu Murder Case

Neither ML nor Indemnity Ordn can protect killers: SPP

Neither the martial law nor the Indemnity Ordinance can protect the killers of Bangabandhu, the Special Public Prosecutor told the court in the Bangabandhu Murder Case, reports UNB.

Brushing aside the defence argument, Advocate Serajul Hug yesterday said that neither the martial law proclamation nor the Indemnity Ordinance made any provision to protect the killers of Bangabandhu and

On the second day of his closing argument, the prosecution counsel said the Constitution was not abrogated when Khandaker Mushtaq Ahmed promulgated martial law on August 20, 1975 giving effect from August 15. About the judgement of a

Pakistan court in the Dooso case cited by defence that martial law is a legal legislation, he said the difference between the martial law promulgated by Gen Ayub Khan in 1958 and the one in 1975 was that Ayub Khan's martial law had annulled the constitution, but this did not happen in Bangladesh. Huq said the judgement in the Dooso case was based on the 1958 martial law, and moreover, that judgement was later overruled by another Pakistani court in the Asma Jilani case.

As the 1975 martial law proclamation kept the Constitution in force, so the murder of the President (Bangabandhu) was not protected, he argued.

The proclamation of 1975 did not make any regulation or rules in conflict with Article 31 (right to protection of law) and Article 32 (protection of right to life and personal liberty) of the constitution. As such these constitutional provisions were alive before and from the time the proclamation was made, he said citing a judgement of the Supreme Court of Bangladesh. "It can be safely argued that tion empower any person the Hug submitted that although martial law is supra constitutional, yet the martial law in 1975 itself kept alive the Articles 31 and 32.

"So, the killing of Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujib and his family members was not authorised or protected by the proclamation ... Articles 31 and 32 remained intact even though the martial law was in force." the prosecutor told the court. Moreover, he mentioned, in the proclamation it was said that with the mercy of Almighty Allah and the blessings of the people, he (Mushtaq) has taken over the power of the government. "But nowhere the killing of the President was mentioned. This proclamation does not cover the murder as Mushtag had taken over power with the mercy of Allah and the blessings of people, he argued. Citing another judgement

Hug said even the proceedings of martial law court were not immune to interference. Mush tag, himself convicted by a martial law court, was later acguitted by the Supreme Court. About a defence argument that the August 15 killings enjoyed protection of the Indemnity Ordinance, he said: "Indemnity Ordinance was another fraud done by Mushtaq Ahmed. In the ordinance, nowhere it was specifically expressed that killings were protected.

"Any act is not every act." Huq argued saying that the words "any act, matter or thing done or step taken" do not specifically mention that the killing of a person is specifically protected by these words. "Rights under Articles 31 and 32 cannot be taken away except by express legislation.

the court, a condition was added to the ordinance that anyone wanting to get protection by this ordinance will require to take a certificate. But the accused did not take any such cer tificate from President Mush tag, he said.

"As the certificate was a condition of the ordinance to get protection, they (killers) will not get any benefit," he argued.

He further told the court that the Indemnity (Repeal) Act has categorically said that such a law (indemnity) never existed and the Appellate Division also upheld that.

Mushtag felt the necessity of Indemnity Ordinance in September, 1975 after realising that the martial law proclamation announced a month back will not cover the killings, but did not dare to mention in the ordinance that murder o Bangabandhu will be protected. Hug said.

He submitted that the 5th Amendment to the Constitution, which gave a blanket cover to martial law, was ruled out by the Supreme Court in the 8th Amendment case. Huq said the Appellate Division in the 8th amendment case held that no amendment can be inserted in the Constitution against the spirit, basic structure and the principles of Rule of Law" as set out in the preamble of the Constitution.

"So, from this judgement, we can say you just cannot include anything in the Constitution. Concluding his argument on the points of martial law and Indemnity Ordinance, he said: The prosecution case stands unaffected by the proclamation and the Indemnity Ordinance. Rather, the argument of the defence on this point is unaccept able and has no legal validity.

Action against DU teacher hailed

By DU Correspondent

Teachers and students of Dhaka University yesterday welcomed a Syndicate decision to retire a professor of the university for giving high scores to undeserving students in exchange of money.

The DU Syndicate on Saturday decided to send Prof AHM Mahbubul Alam of Economics Department into retirement after recommendation from a tribunal it set up to try the teacher. Hailing the decision, Vice-president of the Dhaka University Teachers' Association (DUTA) Prof RIM Aminur Rasheed said that the university authorities had taken the decision rightfully, following proper procedures.

It was earlier decided at a general meeting of the DUTA that the particular teacher should be sacked if the allegation brought against him is proved, DUTA Vice-president

The university authorities investigated the allegation as per rules laid down in the Dhaka University Order 1973 and took action accordingly as he was proved guilty, Rasheed Welcoming the decision

Prof. Asaduzzaman, Dean of the Faculty of Social Science, said "This is a good beginning. "The people who are destroying the image of the university by adopting such unfair means should be punished," he said. Prof. Asaduzzaman said an independent investigation should be carried out to find out whether there are more such incidents in the university.
