LONDON, Oct 13: Triple jumper Jonathan Edwards was named athlete-of-the-year on Monday by the European Athletic Association, reports AFP.

Edwards, who captured a gold medal at this summer's European Championships in Budapest, received 611 votes ahead of second placed Colin Jackson (536) and third-placed Steve Backley (445).

The panel of judges made up of journalists, European federations and events organisers also put Iwan Thomas — who was seventh with 244 votes into the top 10.

French sprinter Christine Arron, the 100 metres European record holder and gold medal list at Budapest, received 903 votes to win the female athleteof-the-year honour.

Ireland's Sonia O'Sullivan (860) was second and Germany's Heike Drechsler (686) third with heptathlete Denise Lewis (72) the only Briton to finish in the top 10.

Freeman took to sports out of frustration?

SYDNEY, Oct 13: World champion Cathy Freeman may have driven herself to athletic success to help overcome two childhood cases of sexual abuse. an aboriginal counsellor says reports AFP.

"It's about self-worth. Cathy has put all of her energy into sport," said Sue Featherstone. "When you're really in pain and trauma, people often look into themselves and over-achieve. Cathy has used part of her anger to focus on what she does best."

The 25-year-old Freeman, who won a silver medal in the 1996 Atlanta Olympic 400 metres and gold in the 1997 World Championships in Athens, reveals in a biography to be released this week that a family friend sexually abused her when she was 14.

She says a man entered her bedroom, molested her with his hands and placed her hand on his genitals.

Tyson wants the hearing as soon as possible because he wants a comeback fight, likely here on December 5, if he gets his licence reinstated by the same panel that banished him Commission, reports AFP.

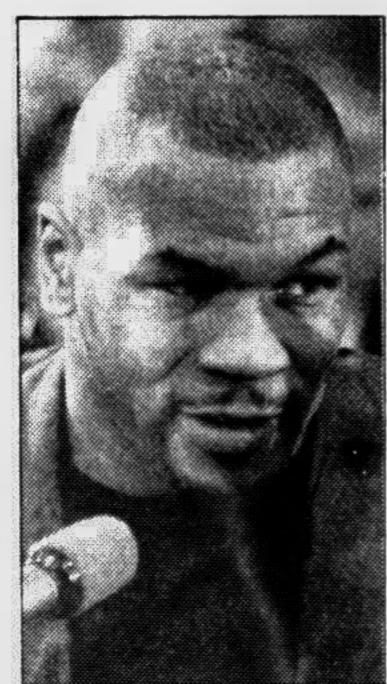

The public will get the chance to decide for itself on 15 months ago.

Lawyers for Tyson are still seeking an out of court settlement to assault charges Tyson faces from the aftermath of an auto accident in suburban Washington. That hearing is also set for next Monday.

Jimmerson said he believes a deal will be struck but Tyson will answer commission questions about the incident.

If ex-champion Tyson is reinstated, he figures to be prominent in the world heavyweight title picture once again now that a deal has been set in London to match Evander Holyfield and Lennox Lewis in a unification bout.

That fight, between World Boxing Association and International Boxing Federation champion Holyfield of the United States and Britain's Lewis, the World Boxing Council champion, is set for here in February or March.

Earlier Monday, Tyson lost a fight to keep the records out of

A divided Nevada Supreme Court refused to block a lower court's order that allows the documents to be made public once they are given to the athletic commission.

Though the court rejected the motion to keep the records secret, two of the five justices questioned why all the details of Tyson's psychological tests had to be revealed.

"Today's majority ruling unfairly and needlessly puts Mr Tyson in a dilemma: He may choose, to his great personal and financial loss, to withdraw his application, or he must risk the embarrassment that may result from the unlawful release of confidential matters," Justice Charles Springer said in dissent.

But Justice Miriam Shearing, siding with the majority, said that Tyson was seeking a privileged license to box, and that the commission has no authority to edit the reports to keep embarrassing details out of public view.

Tyson issued a statement which indicated he was not happy the reports were released, but that he would do anything necessary to get licensed again.

"On numerous occasions I have apologised for my actions in the ring versus Evander Holyfield," Tyson said. "I am willing to do whatever the Nevada Athletic Commission wants me to do in order to regain my license to fight."

Tyson and his advisers wanted to meet the deadline so next Monday's hearing could go on as scheduled because they want Tyson to have a comeback fight in December if he gets his license back.

Sampras starts smoothly

VIENNA, Oct 13: A weary Pete Sampras, bidding to stay at number one until the end of the year, cruised into the second round of the CA-Trophy on Monday with a 6-2, 7-5 win over Slovak qualifier Jan Kroslak, reports Reuters.

After chasing out to Wayne Ferreira in the first round at Basle last week, Sampras obtained a wild card for Vienna to try to keep Patrick Rafter and Marcelo Rios at bay in the rankings.

If he manages to cling to the top spot at the end of December, the American will become the first player to hold the number one position for six consecutive

However, if Sampras loses in an early round and world number two Rafter wins in Vienna, then the two would battle for the top ranking in Lyon next World number three Rios could also fight for the Spot if Sampras has an early exit at Vienna's Stadthalle Arena, provided the Chilean wins in Singapore this week.

"If I want to stay at the top then I have to play more," said Sampras, who asked and got the wild card for Vienna from Boris Becker last Thursday.

"It was a little uncomfortable to ask for it. Boris felt it was more important for me to play. I am very thankful to him. I don't think I would have asked any other player."

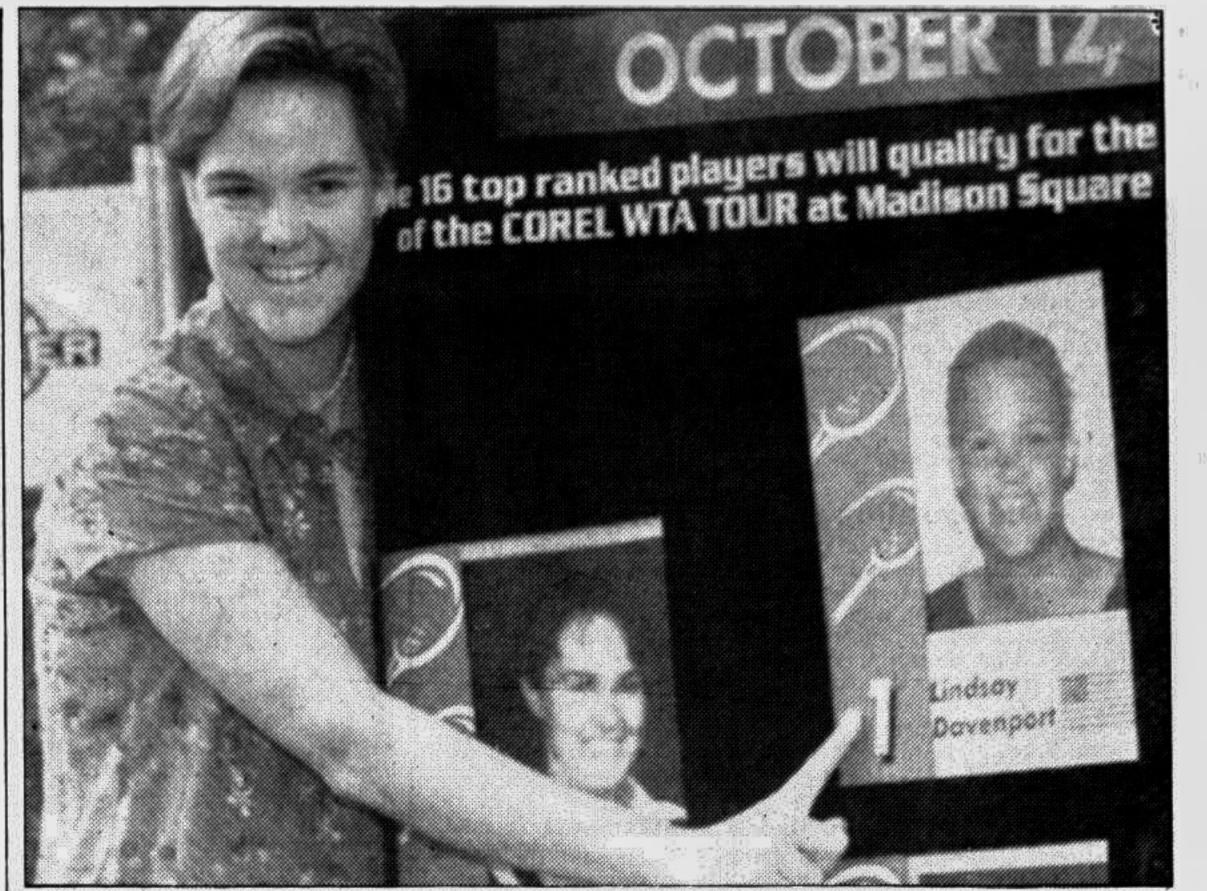

"The field is really strong here and everyone is hungry to play," Sampras said about the tournament which boasts seven top 10 players, including the year's four Grand Slam victors. "It will be a difficult task, I haven't been as consistent as in previous years, I didn't feel fresh at the start of the year. I

The 27-year-old failed to take a 12th Grand Slam title this year and has only won three tournaments since the Australian Open in January. Monday's match was his second since losing to Rafter in the semifinal of the US Open.

"All I had to do today was play solid tennis," he said. " hope my form gets better as the tournament advances."

Hope for Hopman Cup

lia, Oct 13 (Reuters/Internet): Newly-crowned world number one Lindsay Davenport and the woman she displaced, Martina Hingis, will both play at next year's Hopman Cup, tournament director Paul McNamee announced on Tuesday.

Davenport will partner Jan-Michael Gambill to represent the United States while Hingis and Ivo Heuberger will play for Switzerland in the mixed team event.

"It's really a coup for the tournament to have the number one and number two female players in the world," McNamee

"We've two of the top six men. with more to come, and it's shaping up as the best field ever.

We're very excited." Davenport, 22, ended Hingis' 18-month stretch as the world's top-ranked woman last week at the Filderstadt Grand Prix in Germany.

Several other big names, including Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, Carlos Moya, Karol Kucera and Jonas Bjorkman have already signed up for the tournament, which is one of the major lead-up events to the Australian Open.

The tournament will be held between January 3-9. The full field will be announced next week, McNamee said. Meanwhile, Davenport began her new role as top tennis woman on Monday by taking the day off.

"My first day at number one and I just took it easy," said Davenport. "Today I didn't feel like hitting a ball.

"People have been congratulating me but I haven't had any special calls from the president or anything like that." The start of the Davenport era, which officially began with the release of the world rankings Monday morning, was uneventful as the modest 22-yearold American eased into her reign and the defence of her European indoor championship title with a first round bye.

Davenport will spend her first week as number one playing in the backyard of Hingis. How long Davenport, who joined one of sport's most exclusive clubs when she became just the eighth woman since 1975 to claim the number one ranking, can hold on to top spot is open to debate. But the hard work starts in Zurich with the defence of the title that provided the launching pad for her rise to glory. I feel my rise to the top started here and coming into this tournament I want to defend my title and try not to think about the rankings," said Davenport, winner of five tournaments this year. "Making it to number one was never an obsession of mine."
