

India with WC in mind

NEW DELHI, Oct 20 (India Abroad News Service): There was never any doubt that Mohammad Azharuddin would continue as the captain of the Indian cricket team for the next two international engagements.

The chairman of the selection committee, Ajit Wadekar himself said that the meeting earlier this week was a mere formality. In fact, Azharuddin has his sights pitched on next year's World Cup in England. Leading India on that assignment has acted like a fire in the belly and a goad to the mind ever since he was removed first as captain after the last regular tour of England in 1997 and then briefly as a player.

Azharuddin made no secret of his feeling that both decisions were bad, if not motivated. However, instead of sulking he set about rehabilitating himself as only he can, and the results in terms of his personal form were predictably spectacular. Besides, he was reinstated as captain last season when the pressures of leadership started telling on Sachin Tendulkar's own batting.

But the question Indian cricket fans are now asking is whether personal batting form can compensate for lack of team success. That point was brought home bitterly after the humiliating defeat inside four days by Zimbabwe in the one-off Test match on the short tour of that country which ended last week.

The fact that India have not won a Test match abroad since 1986 is hardly a statistical input to be proud of. Of course, public attention has now shifted back to one-dayers, and in any case India are now supposed to be gearing up for the World Cup.

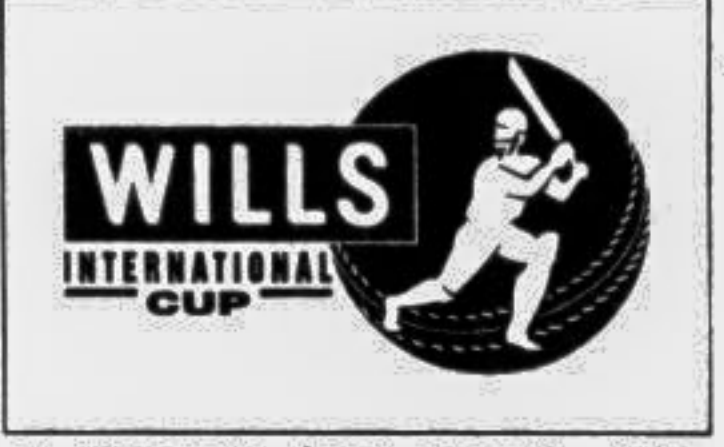

But neither the immediate past record nor the immediate challenges ahead holds out much of a pleasing prospect. That, of course, pertains to matches abroad. But then, the World Cup will be held in the coldest and wettest part of the English summer next year. As of now, a curtain-raiser for the World Cup is coming up in Bangladesh.

The Willis Cup, involving all nine Test playing countries, will be held in Dhaka from October 24 to November 1. This has been dubbed a mini World Cup because of the reduced scale, but that could become all the more dangerous for a team like India in its state of morale.

Raghu Nath Rau

for one defeat will mean an ignominious exit.

After all, every team is expected to be at full strength there. The mini World Cup will be followed by the hasty annual ritual of a Sharjah tournament. This time India will be spared the ordeal of facing Pakistan. That must be considered a big mercy after the 1-4 humiliation at Toronto last month. The other teams in this edition of the Sharjah circuit will be Sri Lanka and Zimbabwe.

However, unless the political situation dictates otherwise, it will not be long before India have to confront Pakistan again, and that, too, at home. According to the cricket calendar, Pakistan are to tour India for a regular three-Test tour early next year. There are, of course, many ifs and buts about such an undertaking, which, if it materialises, will be the first such venture after more than a decade.

Before the Indians can think of that they have to take on New Zealand in New Zealand, again in a regular tour, towards the end of this year. The Kiwis may be no world-beaters, but every team acknowledges that they are formidable customers at home.

The immediate attention will naturally be focused on the mini World Cup. There was considerable interest to start with on whether the event would come off at all in view of the flood situation in Bangladesh. But the rains have abated since, and the government is pulling all the stops to make sure that it will be a grand show.

The showpiece for the occasion will be the floodlit Bangladesh Stadium. India's first match will be against Australia on October 28. That can hardly be a happy augury since it was Australia which proved the hurdle which could not be crossed by Ajay Jadhava's side on the ill-fated trip for the Commonwealth Games.

Of course, unlike on that occasion India will be at full strength. But then, so will Australia be, and they will be going to Bangladesh after a rejuvenating tour of Pakistan.

The mini World Cup is the brain-child of the first Indian chairman of the ICC, Jagmohan Dalmiya. He has conceived it as a fund-raising event to enhance the coffers of the world body so as to spread the game among as many countries as possible around the world.

That is why Bangladesh was chosen as the venue even though they themselves cannot participate in it. Thanks first to Sharjah and then to Toronto, there is nothing new about that concept now. Dalmiya's interest in the project is self-explanatory. It was thanks to the associate members of the ICC that he gained the chairmanship after a bitterly fought election which was even postponed by a year with England and Australia, as founder members, wanted to exercise veto rights.

Now, three associate members take part in the World Cup proper, after coming through the ICC Trophy. Next year in England, Bangladesh, Kenya and Scotland will be taking part from this category.

Another Dalmiya gift to Bangladesh is the award to them of official status for all their one-day matches. This will hold good even if they fail to make it to the World Cup proper.

Dalmiya has some other schemes up his sleeves. For one, he would have all umpiring decisions except law referred to the third umpire watching proceedings on television. That evoked howls of protest, and the proposal has been put on hold.

For another, Dalmiya has come up with a scheme for a World Championship of Test cricket. Points will be allotted on various counts and then tallied up. This, too, is still under the consideration of the ICC members. Dalmiya also wants to have competitive international cricket in as many places as possible. One obvious target is the USA, for the argument is that cricket can easily follow soccer, which had a World Cup staged there. Whether or not Americans can be made to understand the game, money is obviously a major attraction.

However, the future of such plans will obviously hinge on how the Bangladesh mini World Cup fares. It is not Bangladesh's prestige alone which will be at stake.

'WC co-hosts a mistake'

PARIS, Oct 20 (Reuters/Internet): Former FIFA chief Joao Havelange has blamed Europe's soccer authorities for forcing him to award the 2002 World Cup finals jointly to Japan and South Korea.

"It's an error. Which will be the governing currency? Who will be responsible for security?" Havelange was quoted as saying by the bi-weekly magazine France Football on Tuesday.

"The decision was put forward by the Europeans to upset me," said the 84-year-old Brazilian, who handed the reins of the world game's governing body to his former general secretary Sepp Blatter in June.

"But a president never loses. When I understood what they were plotting, I presented the proposition myself so as not to be put in a difficult position," he said.

"I'm not a dictator, I'm simply more intelligent than them, excuse me."

The two Asian countries started out as rivals to stage the first finals of the next century but FIFA, under Havelange, ended up handing them the tournament jointly.

"The teams won't be able to turn up in different cities as was the case in France this year," Havelange said. "So it's a step backwards."

Asked what mistakes he had made Havelange, FIFA president for 24 years, said: "None. I worked very hard. There was no money (at FIFA), now there is. There was no headquarters, now there is."

"There were hardly any competitions and now there are. Fair play didn't exist, and now it exists. Refereeing has changed, and now it's better. I find that everything was done well. Excuse my frankness."

Spartak Inter's next hurdle

MILAN, Oct 20: Three days after suffering one of their worst defeats in the club's history, Inter Milan return to face the home fans here in a crucial Champions League tie, reports AFP.

Crushed 5-3 by Lazio in the Serie A on Sunday, Inter have to save their reputation and possibly also the job of coach Gigi Simoni against a Spartak Moscow side who have won both games so far in Group C.

Much will depend on Ronaldo's contribution to the cause, struggling with knee tendon trouble. The Brazilian hasn't played since he cracked home a match-winning penalty against Fiorentina on September 20.

But he is ready for at least 45 minutes' worth on Wednesday night.

"I've been called up for the game against Spartak, so it's possible that I'll play," he said. "But I don't think I can last for a whole match. We'll have to see if I get to play for one half."

"I know I'll be coming back at a difficult time, but I just hope I can help Inter, Spartak are a first-rate team and they have very good players, but we have to win at all costs."

Inter will be without Roberto Baggio, who has yet to recover from knee tendon trouble of his own while defender Francesco Colaninno, a member of the disastrous defensive trio against Lazio, is suspended.

Aside from Ronaldo, Inter's hopes in attack will rest on the 20-year-old shoulders of Nicola Ventola.

The young striker came on as a substitute and scored twice towards the end of Sunday's debacle, making a 5-1 scoreline more respectable. But his first taste of European football ended in disappointment last month.

Ventola missed a string of chances against Sturm Graz and Inter were only rescued by Youri Djorkaeff's winner in the fourth minute of injury-time, just seven seconds before the final whistle.

Inter cannot afford to leave it that late this time, and Simoni knows he will have to ring a few changes.

Midfielder Diego Simeone, who was sent off for stamping on Fernando Couto on Sunday night, will probably be picked but told firmly to watch his temper.

The Argentinian apologised on Monday. But made it clear that his team would be back.

Aside from a talented squad, Simoni will also have history on his side here - Inter have never lost a European Cup tie at home and Wednesday's will be their 26th.

But the Russians will be looking to a more meaningful set of figures: That Spartak and Inter both recently found their selves 1-0 down to Cup holders Real Madrid, but that Spartak went on to win 2-1 and Inter lost 2-0.

Petr sent packing

OSTRAVA, Czech Republic, Oct 20: Top seed and home favourite Petr Korda crashed out the 1 million US dollar Czech indoor tennis tournament on Monday, losing in the first round to 18-year-old Russian Marat Safin, reports Reuters.

The Australian Open champion, ranked fifth in the world, was beaten 6-4, 6-2.

Safin broke Korda's serve in the third game of the first set and in the fifth game of the second, returning the Czech's serve with ease.
