Reform programmes to be pulled out of 'orphan status'

Speakers tell Nat'l Forum of SAPRI

By Staff Correspondent

The concluding session of the First National Forum of Structural Adjustment Participatory Review Initiative (SAPRI) underlined the need for a home-grown reform agenda to accelerate development.

Speakers at the three-day national forum stressed on pulling current reform programmes from what they termed the 'orphan' status. The forum began on Tuesday at the city's CIRDAP auditorium.

In five sessions, the Forum recorded voices of cross-section of civil society on key adjustment issues, and designated issues in participatory fashion for the forthcoming research phase, designed to evaluate structural adjustment policies.

Participants from across the country including representatives from entities such as labour unions, small farmers, women's organisation, environmental and professional groups as well as present and former ministers, officials from government and World Bank contributed to the programme.

The National Forum of SAPRI Bangladesh was held to set the agenda of the review exercise on structural adjustment policies. The SAPRI is a global tripartite exercise involving a network of civil society organisations, the governments and the World Bank.

Former and present ministers attending the colloquium found the economic reform package imposed on the country by the two Bretton Woods Institutions, the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

Recognising the voices raised by the participants on the lack of acceptance for taking responsibility of the reform agenda, Dr Mahiuddin Khan Alamgir, State Minister for Planning, attributed the orphan status of the economic reform to three main reasons. First, the reform package was not appropriate since the process was not initiated indigenously. The second reason could be that the implementing government had signed the adjustment package with reluctance, he said and added that "we were compelled to accept the reform agenda because those had been signed earlier. But we are gathering our strength to oppose the forced re-

With SAPRI Bangladesh's Convenor Prof. Rehman Sobhan in the chair, the wrap-up session was addressed by. among others, Zakia Akhtar Chowdhury, Secretary to the Prime Minister, Dr Lyn Squire, Director, Development Policy, Fred Temple, Andrew Mason and John Sinclair of the World Bank. Khushi Kabir and Tony Avirgan spoke on behalf of SAPRI National Steering Committee and global SAPRI Secretariat respectively.

The session began with Dr

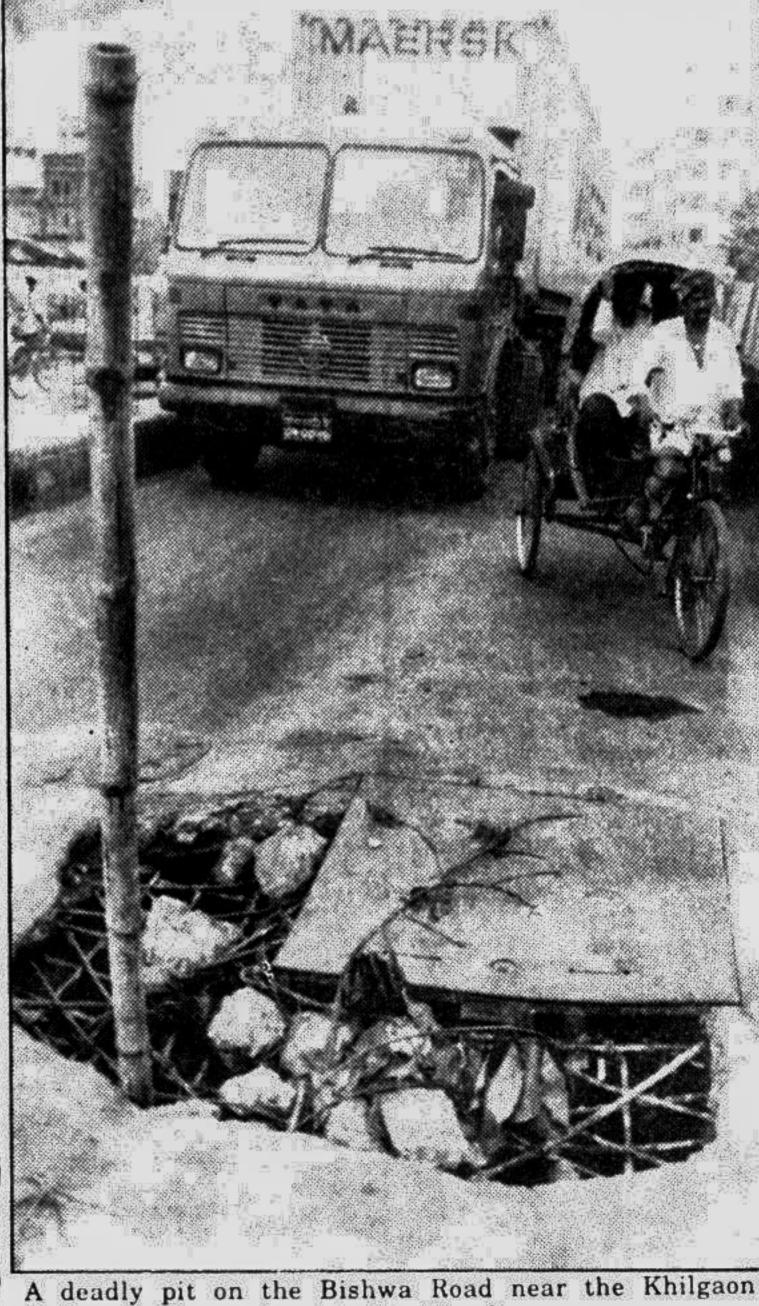

Debapriya Bhattacharya, Study Director, SAPRI Bangladesh placing a summary of the deliberations made in previous four sessions. He informed that commitment of the stakeholders, accountability and indigenous capability to develop a Bangladesh agenda is required in quest of a homegrown reform The participants urged the World Bank to adjust structurally in order to recognise the contextual realities of its member governments. They also expressed that higher accountability of the bank was required regarding the programme be it a success or fail-

Dr Bhattacharya also informed that the participants were of the opinion that the World Bank should make a more level-playing global order, aimed at lowering the unequal structure between the North and the South.

The key hypotheses confirmed by the forum for field research were first, whether the industrial capacity and employment experienced a growth following the introduction of structural adjustment policies (SAP) and second, whether the profitability of the crop sector has increased subsequently to the reform measures implemented under the SAP. It has to be tested if the users' cost of the quality education and health care services were reduced due to changes brought about by the SAP.

The issues accepted in the forum are poverty alleviation. corruption and violence, gender impact, and environmental consequences.
