Millennium bug Philippine govt starts fixing computers

MANILA, Oct 25: The Philippine government has started to fix government computer systems to protect them from the potentially disastrous impact of the "millennium bug" in the year 2000, officials said Sunday, says AP.

Because of limited funds and time, however, repairs initially could cover only computers moustries, telecommunications and transportation, healthcare and insurance, said presidential consultant Ambale Aguiluz IV.

Other computers would be fixed as soon as funds, possibly some donated by private companies, become available, Aguiluz said in a statement.

The bug could cause computers that are set to read only the last two digits of a year to malfunction when the calendar changes to 2000. Those that aren't fixed may not be able to sort dates, calculate transactions or perform other opera-

The devastating flood this year damaged crops on 1,695 hectares of land totally and 2,793 hectares partially in the district and the loss was estimated at Tk 8.46 crore.

Bogra

Another report from Bogra says: The distribution of agriculture loan has been continued in the district through the four state-owned banks.

Peanut farming prospect bright in Pabna

ISWARDI, Oct 25: Prospects of peanut cultivation on the vast char lands in various rivers of Pabna district appear brighter than ever, says APB.

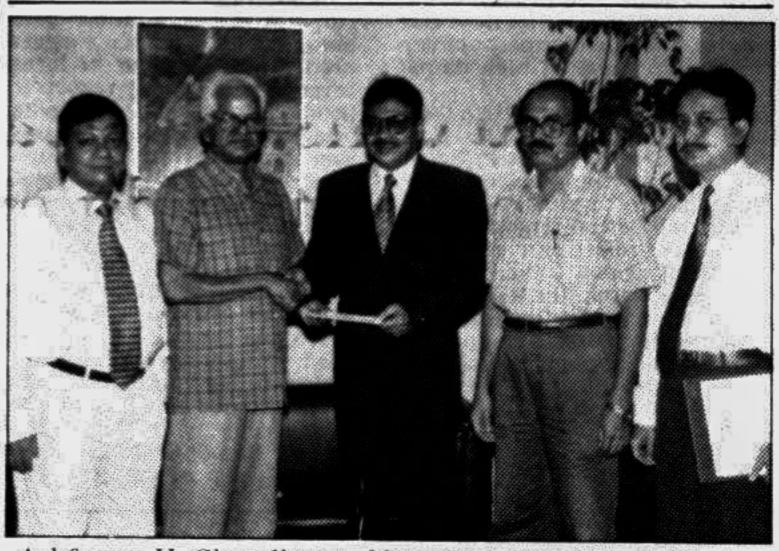

Peasants said they can hope to reap a rich harvest and meet the demand of edible oil in the district, if agricultural credits were provided on easy terms and arrangements made for cultivation of the crop in a planned manner.

Local farmers, however, complained that no initiative has so far been taken to inspire them to take to cultivation of peanuts.

"One advantage of cultivating peanuts is that variation in rainfall and natural calamities usually do not affect its production," said one of them, adding the per acre yield of the item is generally greater than any other oil-seed.

Besides, the leaves and the plant itself can be used as cattlefeed and the shell of the popular food used in the production of hardboards.

"The best time to cultivate peanuts is during the Rabi season and its cultivation in the hot, humid climate and sandy soil can help yield expected level of output", said an agriculture expert.
