City roads pose serious threat to vehicles, pedestrians

By AS M Nurunnabi

After the recent floods, most of the city roads damaged by them presented a dismal picture. Though a beginning has been made for repairing some of the roads, they still pose a serious threat both to the vehicles and the pedestrians. Even before the floods which began about two months ago, the city roads were not, by and large, in good shape, particularly in the low-lying areas. When such roads went under water during the floods, the then existing cracks degenerated into deep furrows and holes. The outer asphalt layer in many of the roads peeled off in many places, and what with the cracks, furrows and holes, many of such roads became unfit for movement of vehicles. Even in the areas which were not submerged by flood water, the roads suffered from waterlogging — a continuous nagging problem for the city when there are heavy downpours.

It was understood that the Dhaka City Corporation (DCC) made an allocation of Taka 20 crore for repairing the damaged roads. Obviously this amount may turn out to be quite inadequate as the work of repairing the roads makes some progress because of the magnitude of the work involved. However, it can hardly be overemphasised that those roads which suffered greater mutilation on account of the floods and are now a driver's nightmare, should be attended to first on a priority

Though it is common knowledge that roads are damaged during floods, and are expected to be repaired as soon as possible, it has been the sad experience of the citizenry that the DCC authorities are, most of the times, lukewarm in their response to the public demand. A greater alacrity on their part in tackling such situations is expected in the interest of easing the civic life of the city. Of vital importance is the question of maintaining the quality of construction of the roads. It has been a consistent story that despite millions of taka spent each hear, the city roads present no sign of durable improvement. In fact, roads in rotten condition have been the usual picture. Except for a few important roads, excessive bumps, depressions and potholes characterise the city's road network. On such roads. comfortable ride is impossible and sometimes it is hazardous. Under these conditions it is not possible for vehicles to move at a desirable speed with the added impediment of slow-moving rickshaws with their locustlike growth. The nation pays a heavy price on this account. It suffers incalculable loss in lost man-hour and unnecessary fuel consumption.

Such situation is not found in similar cities in the developing countries. There, roads carry more traffic and considerably heavier vehicles and trucks than our city roads. Yet the roads in those countries are smoother and more durable. The reason seems to be that these roads are designed and constructed with appropriate standards and technology to last longer than the Dhaka city

The poor quality of work in construction of roads in Dhaka city is reportedly, in a large measure, due to the work awarding system of the DCC. The normal practice here is to award the work order to the lowest bidder. There lies the rub. Certain contractors in their bid to win a particular work order quotes a price much lower than the estimated cost of the work. The contract awarding authority does not seem to

Since the contractors are in business for profit, they keep a safe margin of profit for themselves by using dubious quality materials and work procedure and, as some allege, with a cer-tain percentage of kickback for those who supervise their work. It may appear even from casual observation how quality is sacrificed on the score of lowest tender system. It is felt by observers that there should be certain parameters for evaluating the tendered bids for work in order to ensure proper quality of construction work to be undertaken. Any departure from the evaluated standard of work even it involves comparatively a little higher outlay should not be allowed and the supervising staff should be under strict surveillance that they, under temptation of a margin of lucre. should not yield in the matter of ensuring proper quality of Another frequent excuse is that due to shortage of funds, roads can not be built according to the specifications, which account for their lower longevity.

In the opinion of knowledgeable quarters, there is urgent need for reviewing the contacting system and to introduce a strict system of quality control, as in other countries, where a performance contract system with insistence on strict implementation of the given specification is generally followed. There should be an end to the practice of sloppiest work with shoddiest materials in road construction. This is in the greater public interest so that the present outlay for repairing post-flood damages of city roads with its possible augmentation may not go down the drain, as ever before.

Help new generation know true history of Liberation War

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina yesterday called upon all, especially the teachers and guardians, to put their best efforts to facilitate the new generation to know the glorious history of the Independence and War of Liberation, reports UNB.

Right-arm seamer Elworthy, playing only his sixth one-day international, drew the first blood. Bowling a teasing line, he claimed three of the Sri Lankan top order -- Kaluwitharana, Jayasuriya and batting maestro batsman Aravinda de Silva -- in his three successive overs. Elworthy finished with three for 21 in his four overs. He was ably supported by off-spinner Symcox, who took three wickets for 27.

The day-night match got off to a delayed start due to overnight rain and light drizzle in the morning. The rain damaged the outfield, specially the bowler's run-up at the VIP end.

A massive work by the dedicated groundsmen and volunteers finally made possible at least a truncated match, much to the delight of the full-house crowd at the big bowl. Some of the 'early bird' fans had braved the tain and waited for more than nine hours, which drew showers of praise from World-Tel commentators.

Earlier, South Africa's impressive total was built around brilliant Kallis knock coming in defiance of the inclement weather. He hammered his third one-day century playing only 91 balls, the quickest of the tournament so far.

Coming into bat at number five with South Africa reeling at 3/57, the stockily-built righthander set the stadium alight with a flurry of shots all around. Kallis, who was particularly harsh on off-spinner Muralitharan, smote five sixes, so far the highest in an individual innings in the tournament, and as many fours in his flawless innings The Middlesex all-rounder held the South African innings together after Cullinan departed after a 43-ball 30. He shared 81 runs for the fifth wicket with skipper Hansie Cronje, who scored a workmanlike 20 Despite wickets falling at the other end at regular intervals, Kallis was generally wellsupported by the lower middleorder to throttle the Proteas to a commanding total.

Among the Sri Lankan bowlers, leg-spinner Upul Chandana and left-arm seamer Nuwan Zoysa took two wickets each. Muralitharan returned most expensive with figures of one for 48 in his six overs.

Kallis was the obvious choice for the man-of-thematch award.

South Africa may have won the rain-ruled match, but the real voctors were the two sporting captains who agreed to continue play and the marvellous crowd that kept waiting.

It is "illogical" to say that Arafat will quit because of health problems since he was fully fit during negotiations with the Israelis at the Wye Plantation, Asfour told The Associated Press.

Arafat has been variously reported to be suffering from Parkinson's disease and depression, and is often seen on TV looking pale and tired, his lower lip trembling and his hands shaking.

This is not the first time reports of his imminent resignation have appeared in the Arab press.
