Elliott keeps reminding

SYDNEY, Nov 26 (Reuters/ Internet): Discarded Test opener Matthew Elliott smashed an unbeaten century in the Sheffield Shield on Thursday.

The left-hander blasted 144 not out, his fourth century of the season, as Victoria reached 248 for one against South Australia on the first day in Melbourne.

The only wicket to fall was opener Jason Arnberger. He went for 80 after adding 189 for the first wicket with Elliott.

Elliott lost his place in the Australian Test team to Michael Slater at the start of 1998 despite scoring two centuries and averaging 55.50 on the 1997 Ashes tour of England.

He has scored 510 runs at an average of 127.50 in the current Sheffield Shield season to lift Victoria top.

Elliott concedes he is unlikely to win a recall because of the form of Australia's current openers, Slater and Mark Taylor.

"I'm at the point where I couldn't care less about test selection," he said. "I'm really enjoying playing for Victoria because we've got something good going this season."

Tasmania made light work of Queensland's strong batting line-up to dismiss the visitors for just 212 in Hobart.

Gerard Denton took four for 55 while Andrew Symonds and wicketkeeper Wade Seccombe both scored 48 for Queensland.

Tasmania were 20-1 at the close.

The match between New South Wales and reigning Shield champions Western Australia in Sydney was delayed because of rain.

NSW reaching 69 without loss in the 34 overs bowled.

English louts back with a vengeance!

LONDON, Nov 26 (Reuters/ Internet): British police warned on Wednesday that soccer hooligans are back with a vengeance -- smashing pubs, attacking trains and stabbing opponents.

"The signs are not encouraging," said Bryan Drew of the National Criminal Intelligence Service which monitors what has been dubbed "The British disease".

"This season, the ugly face of football hooliganism has continued to make its very unwelcome presence felt," he said in a statement reviewing 22 outbreaks of violence.

Drew said soccer hooligans had become much more sophisticated -- using mobile phones, dispatch riders and pagers to get their gangs organised.

Pete sails thru', Andre pulls out

HANOVER, Germany, Nov 26 (Reuters/ Internet): After beating Carlos Moya 6-3, 6-3 Wednesday, Pete Sampras said he was unaware that he had clinched a place in the semifinals of the ATP World Championship.

He's playing too well to worry about it.

"That's nice to hear," Sampras said after being told he had reached the final four. "It's certainly a good feeling to be here over the weekend."

Not feeling so good was Andre Agassi, who withdrew from the tournament because of a back injury.

Agassi quit in the third set of his match against Alex Corretja on Wednesday. Britain's Greg Rusedski will replace him in the round-robin draw.

Sampras is seeking to become the first man to finish No. 1 in the world for six years in a row. He shares the record with Jimmy Connors.

Marcelo Rios, the only player who can threaten Sampras, trails by 33 points in the computer rankings and has to do better than Sampras in the season-ending championship that brings together the top eight players of the year.

But Rios, who was not scheduled to play Wednesday, lost his first match to Tim Henman and is battling a back injury. He now has to win his next two round-robin matches to reach the semifinals and stay in the chase.

The eight players are split into two groups and Sampras and Rios cannot meet until the semifinals.

Sampras was certainly good enough to beat Moya in only 62 minutes, with the help of 13 aces. Moya, the French Open champion who is now 1-1, had beaten Sampras in a group match last year but Sampras went on to win the $3.5 million event for the fourth time.

On Tuesday, Sampras was equally impressive in beating Yevgeny Kafelnikov in straight sets.

"It's not easy to play well like I have been today and yesterday. I was coming into today's match pretty confident," Sampras said. "I wanted to make sure I was coming in a little bit more than last year, chipping and charging, trying to put as much pressure on him as possible.

"Last year, I must admit, I felt a little flat. This year, with the ranking up for grabs, I just made a concerted effort to come here a little bit early and prepare as best as I can.

While Sampras moved on, Agassi moved out. He quit his opening match against Corretja with the Spaniard leading 5-7, 6-3, 2-1.

Agassi was practising with Corretja on Monday when he fell and hurt his back, and had been receiving shots and other treatment since then.

"It was definitely painful even this morning in my warm-up. I needed to give it a go, at least try to keep the points short," Agassi said. "But I hit a swinging volley and when I twisted it was just like somebody stuck a knife in me. Pretty soon it got quite pointless."

Rusedski will play Rios on Thursday. Corretja plays Henman and Sampras meets Karol Kucera.

Kafelnikov beat Kucera 6-7 (3-7), 6-3, 6-2 in the last match Wednesday and improved to 1-1. Kucera dropped to 0-2.

Agassi, who won the event in 1990, surged back No. 4 this year after falling as low as No. 141 at the same time last year. But he has not done well at major tournaments this season.

"The year has been great for me in many respects, but the great tournaments have been pretty disappointing," Agassi said. "I've worked really hard and had to grind week after week to get myself in position, only to struggle when I got into position."

S Arabia pulls out of Asiad

BANGKOK, Nov 26: Saudi Arabia's abrupt withdrawal from the Asian Games left organisers scrambling Thursday to change schedules and Thai diplomats mulling a decade of relations strained by jewel theft and the murder of diplomats, reports AP.

Bhichai Rattakul, deputy prime minister and president of the Bangkok Asian Games Organising Committee, asked the Foreign Ministry to urge the Saudi government to reconsider withdrawing its 105-strong team to the Games, which open December 6.

"We're not sure if this is related to the Saudi jewel scandal," Bhichai told Thai radio. "But regardless, we should not mix sports with politics."

In a letter to the Thai prime minister's office, reported Thursday by Bangkok newspapers, Saudi sports authorities cited the looming Muslim holy month of Ramadan and national centenary celebrations as reasons for suddenly pulling out.

But suspicion immediately arose that the real reason was the continued strain in relations since a Thai janitor stole precious jewelry from the palace of a Saudi prince in 1989 and fled home.

Thai police recovered the jewels and returned them, but many were fakes — leading the Saudis to conclude that corrupt officers and members of Thailand's power elite kept the loot. The real jewels have never been recovered.

Tensions were aggravated in 1990 and 1991, when three Saudi diplomats were murdered in Bangkok. In retaliation, the Saudis barred new Thai guest workers and refused to renew the visas of the thousands already in the desert kingdom. The killings remain unsolved.

Saudi Arabia has said relations would only be normalised when the two cases were solved.

Kobsak Chutikul, a foreign ministry spokesman, said it would be understandable if Saudi Arabia pulls out because of Ramadan fasting.

Botha Tyson's next foe?

NEW YORK, Nov 26 (Reuters): Usually a heavyweight unification bout would define the careers of both fighters.

But the winner of the Evander Holyfield-Lennox Lewis fight next March in Madison Square Garden for the undisputed title may still be defined by the man who has captivated the sport for more than 10 years.

That man, of course, is Mike Tyson, the owner of a remarkable best-selling brand of malevolence that fascinates people, not just boxing fans, all over the world.

Tyson recently received a license to box in Nevada, after it had been revoked for more than a year as the result of biting off a piece of Holyfield's ear in their June 1997 fight.

Tyson is expected to fight South African Frank Botha in January in Las Vegas, and after disposing of him, as expected, he will be ready to make a lot of people a lot of money and headlines.

If Holyfield, who holds the World Boxing Association and International Boxing Federation titles, beats Lewis, than Holyfield has a decision to make: Will he retire and go down as one of the great undisputed champions, or will his taste for money push him into a lucrative third fight with Tyson?

The betting among many boxing people is that Holyfield will fight Tyson again.

If Lewis, holder of the World Boxing Council title and an enigma to many boxing fans, beats Holyfield, it sets the Briton up for his biggest payday ever against Tyson and a chance to escape the questions about his heart and abilities that have plague him throughout his career.

"Lewis needs this fight for legitimacy in the eyes of the sports fan. Then he can demand a big payday against Tyson," said Donald Tremblay, a spokesman for main events, Lewis's promoter.

"If Holyfield beats Lewis then he (Holyfield) can retire for historical reasons." But if he does fight again, "He has no reason to fight anyone other than Tyson," Tremblay said.

Negotiations for Holyfield-Lewis have been off and on for at least two years as promoter Don King, who has options on staging Holyfield's fights, and main events and Lewis's British connection bickered and lobbied the media in bid to gain the advantage.

The talks heated up after Lewis beat promising Shannon Briggs last March and the public was getting tired of the lack of quality opponents, Tremblay said.

For their Madison Square Garden fight, Holyfield will receive about 20 million dollars and Lewis in the neighbourhood of 9 million dollars. A fight with Tyson would be worth much more for both fighters.

A fight of Holyfield-Lewis proportions usually would be considered a natural for either Las Vegas or Atlantic City with the backing of money from casinos, which hope to make up the site free from gambling losses by high-rollers.

But Madison Square Garden recently decided, Tremblay said. To become big players in boxing again and are prepared to take a loss in hosting Holyfield-Lewis.

The Garden is said to be paying around 8 million dollars for the fight. It is believed that Caesars Palace in Las Vegas and Toronto's Skydome had also bid to host the fight.

The fear by some boxing people is that with so much invested in the site free ticket prices will be high, with some estimates putting ringside seat prices at 1,500 US dollar and the cheap seats in the fafters going for 2090 US dollar.

Santos in semis

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov 26 (Reuters/ Internet): Santos reached the Brazilian championship semifinals after winning yet another bad-tempered encounter with Sport Recife.

The third and final leg of the quarter-final tie, won 3-0 by Santos, featured a series of ugly fouls, players faking injury, arguments between players and constant ranting from the coaches on the touch-line.

Viola scored twice in Wednesday's final match to take his tally to 19 in the championship and set up a semifinal with Corinthians, who beat Gremio 1-0 to win by six points to three.

There was a row between directors before Wednesday's match when Sport officials complained at the places they were allocated and demanded seats in the VIP box.
