President Shahabuddin Ahmed yesterday said despite resource constraints Bangladesh must try to establish high speed optical (fibre) link for getting access into Information Superhighway, reports BSS.

"Bangladesh doesn't have any physical link to the world of Information Superhighway and our access to the Internet is limited by the maximum bandwidth offered by Virtual Small Aperture Terminal (VSAT)", he said.

President Shahabuddin Ahmed was inaugurating a three-day 'International Conference on Computer and Information Technology' at the auditorium of Bangladesh University of Engineering and Technology (BUET).

He said establishment of high speed optical link to the Information Superhighway will not only ensure higher speed, but it will also help increase the overseas trade and commerce of the country.

Computers, which are now being used in almost every sphere of life from simple household uses to highly automated production lines, also play a vital role in decision-making activities," the President said.

opment of the Internet Technology and Information Superhighway. The world of information is now a finger tip away, he observed.

Stressing introduction of new laws, the President said necessary laws must be framed in order to prevent abusive use of Internet facilities.

He said proper copyright laws must be enacted to protect the Information Technology developers.

exploiting the vast potentials of information technology.

Wishing success of the conference, the President said the presence of distinguished foreign academicians and researchers will give Bangladeshi academicians, information technology professionals and students an opportunity to evaluate their work in broader international perspective.
