Progress of $192m rural road project work satisfactory: WB

The World Bank has described the work of 192.40 million US dollar second rural roads and market project as satisfactory, official sources told BSS yesterday.
The project was launched in early 1997 to help increase rural employment and incomes by establishing an improved, sustainable rural transport and trading infrastructure.
"All the monitoring indicators show progress as per targets and the overall quality of works, management and progress achieved by the project is very satisfactory," said the World Bank in its project status report.
The project status report, which contains progress of various ongoing developments, was released recently.
The report said the implementation of the five-year project funded by government and the World Bank made good progress since the last supervision mission (November 1997) in reducing the lag in implementation and disbursement.
This situation occurred early in the project due to delays in land acquisition, participation procedures and second generation special accounts.
It is expected that by the end of the current fiscal year the World Bank disbursement lag will be reduced to about 25 per cent compared to the original disbursement scheduled of 21 million US dollar instead of 27 million, the report said.

It also said this gap is expected to be reduced further during the next year.
However, the report pointed out that the work of feeder roads, rehabilitation of river jetties and structure on rural roads is progressing despite disbursement lag.
The field visits showed impressive growth in traffic and in starting of bus services for the first time, after completion of road works, the report said.
