

Impressive Imran!
 LAHORE, Mar 5: Pakistani Test debutant Imran Nazir stood well-placed for a good career Thursday, barely a month after he landed himself in trouble with the police here, reports AFP.
 The 17-year-old hit an impressive 64 in the third Asian Test Championship match against Sri Lanka.
 "I thought the world was finished for me when I was detained in a police station but I was given enough courage by my elders and now I am happy that I have started by international career with success," Nazir told the news agency.
 He did not show the nervousness of a teenager and played his shots with confidence.
 Nazir was released on bail after being detained for allegedly possessing an unlicensed pistol, enabling him to play against South African under-19.
 He fired 136 and 43 not out in the junior Tests and followed with scores of 95 not out, 59 and 102 in the three limited-over games.
 "The lad has confidence and can go places if he keeps his determination intact," Pakistan junior team coach, former Test star Mohsin Khan said.
 Nazir termed the pistol incident a "trauma" and said more jealous person had planted the weapon in his bag.
 Pakistani captain Wasim Akram said of Nazir: "He is really a talented player and his bonus point is his fielding."
 "The boy has shots but he needs to improve the movement of his feet," former batting great of England Geoff Boycott said.
 "I want to play more and more for my country and create batting records. I know it will be tough but I will do my best," Nazir said.

Srinath fit
 MUMBAI, Mar 5: "I have completely recovered from the sore shin and an eager to play in the Asian Test Championship final at Dhaka," India's pace spearhead Jagavallu Srinath announced here yesterday, reports PTI.
 Talking to reporters after the formal launching of his three-year tie-up with United Television (UTV) Sports, the gangling Karnataka pace ace said the brief rest from the hard grind of international cricket has done him a world of good.
 "I wanted the rest as I thought it (shin soreness) was becoming chronic," the my sore-born Srinath, who was rested for India's last league match in the Asian Test series against Sri Lanka at Colombo, said.
 Srinath, who bagged a superb eight for 86 in the second innings of the Asia Test series match against Pakistan at Eden Gardens to complete the first ten-wicket haul of his career, rated his career-best second innings figures of 6 for 21 against South Africa at Ahmedabad in the 1996 series as his better effort.
 "The spell at Ahmedabad fetched India a victory and I rate that better than the Calcutta effort," Srinath said when queried on how he rated the two performances.

Barrera-Lloyd bout Mar 27
 LONDON, Mar 5: Marco Antonio Barrera of Mexico is to defend his WBO super-bantamweight title against Englishman Paul Lloyd at Derby on March 27, the promoters announced Thursday, reports AFP.
 The bout will be on the same card as an all-British WBO cruiserweight title bout between Carl Thompson and Johnny Nelson.
 It will be Lloyd's second attempt at a world title after he was stopped in the second round by American Tim Austin when he fought for the IBF bantamweight crown in March last year.
 Since then, Lloyd has successfully defended his British and Commonwealth crown against derelict doercherty and also won the vacant European bantamweight title with a 12th-round stoppage of Italian Luigi Mancini. He has a 19-4 record.
 Barrera, who had held the title previously, beat England's Richie Wenton for the vacant title in Atlantic City in October last year. His record shows 47 wins against two defeats.

Duran upbeat
 BUENOS AIRES, Mar 5: The rescheduled bout between legendary Panamanian boxer Roberdy Duran and Argentinian Omar Gonzalez was billed as "a question of honour" by organisers Thursday following the farcical events that led to the postponement of the first match last month, reports AFP.
 Originally billed as "the legend continues," the fight, to be held at the seaside city of Mar Del Plata, was called off when former world champion Duran scaled in at the weigh-in at 83 kilograms, 6 kg over the 77-kg weight limit.
 Journalists laughed throughout the weigh-in and the once proud Duran had to contend with jibes that the bout should have been called the "farce at the seaside." His nickname, "hands of stone" was also parodied as "(double) chin of stone."
 This time around Duran, 47, says he is ready.
 "I am much better prepared than the other time," he said. "I am sure I will win, although I think it will be a good battle."
 "I am perfectly well, I have been working for some days and the weight will be no problem. They humiliated me like a delinquent and because of that I will fight all the harder in the ring."

Mastercard, FIFA renew deal
 ZURICH, Mar 5: Mastercard International on Tuesday signed an agreement with the world soccer body FIFA to renew its sponsorship deal for the World Cup competition, reports Reuters.
 FIFA and Mastercard officials declined to discuss financial details of the arrangement. But one source familiar with the deal said Mastercard is paying about 40 million dollars to be a sponsor, almost double the 23 million dollars paid last year.
 The company also plans to devote some 135 million dollars to the event over the four-year period leading up to the 2002 World Cup, the source said.
 FIFA president Sepp Blatter told a news conference that two of the 12 top sponsors of the 1998 competition General Motors Corp (GM), N Andars Inc — had decided not to renew, but six others were already committed and he expected to add 14 top sponsors for the 2002 World Cup.

English counties get nick-names

LONDON, March 5 (Reuters/Internet): In a move likely to generate a shial of angry letters from the shires, English cricket authorities released on Friday a list of nicknames for county teams in the new Sunday league.
 Division one will feature the Essex Eagles and the Lancashire Lightning while the Durham Dynamos and the Somerset Sabres will fight for promotion from the second.
 The only team among the 18 counties to escape a sobriquet is Kent, whose name has yet to be decided.
 The new competition, which replaces the one-division Sunday league, was announced at a news conference by the chairman of the English and Wales Cricket Board (ECB) Ian MacLaurin.
 Speaking little more than two months before the World Cup opens at Lord's, MacLaurin said the new league was necessary to lift England's standards in the one-day game.
 "The National Cricket League is essential to our plans," he said. Gambling with the unpredictable English climate, the English and Wales Cricket Board plans 20 floodlit matches and squad numbers will be introduced for the players.
 "Day-night matches attract new spectators," MacLaurin said.
 In line with the proposed new county structure, two divisions have been introduced with nine teams in each section. Three teams will be promoted and relegated each season.
 Matches will be played over 45 overs rather than 40 moving closer to the standard 50 overs used in one-day internationals.
 The league will be sponsored by insurance group CGU, which will pump 6.3 million pounds sterling (9.7 million dollars) into the competition over the next four years.
 A collection of leading England internationals, dressed in the new National League kit, were introduced by former England captain David Gower, who made a wry reference to the cold, grey London day which he said was perfect for pre-season training.
 Gower had not been a prominent advocate of net training in his playing days, as Surrey Lions and England batsman Graham Thorpe pointed out when asked how his preparations were going for the forthcoming one-day tournament in Sharjah.
 The best performance, though, came from Darren Gough who struggled to keep a straight face as he described how the Yorkshire Phoenix were named after the legendary bird who rose from the Ashes once every 500 years.
 Hopefully, Gough quickly added, one-day success would come sooner for Yorkshire.

Batistuta boost for F'tina

ROME, March 5 (Reuters/Internet): Gabriel Batistuta, out with a knee injury for the past month, could watch Fiorentina's vital top-of-the-table clash with Parma from the substitutes' bench on Sunday.
 The Argentine captain, who twisted knee ligaments in a 0-0 draw with AC Milan four weeks ago, has made a miraculous recovery. He played 20 minutes in a practice match on Friday and even scored a goal.
 "The miracle has happened because he desperately wanted to get better," said manager Giovanni Trapattoni. "What amazes me is the total absence of fear."
 Although the Fiorentina manager is unlikely to risk playing Batistuta before next week's Italian Cup semifinal second leg with Bologna, Trapattoni said merely the sight of their inspirational captain sitting on the sidelines would give his players "a psychological boost."
 Until Batistuta was carried off at the Artemio Franchi on February 7, the striker had scored 18 goals in 20 matches.
 Without him, Fiorentina have taken just two points in three matches, scored one league goal and lost the first division leadership they had held since November.
 They are now equal second with Parma on 44 points and the result of Sunday's clash will decide which of the two sides will go on to challenge league leaders Lazio in the championship run-in.
 With Lazio four points in front and expected to make light work of third-from-bottom Salernitana at the Olympic stadium on Sunday, neither Parma nor Fiorentina can afford to settle for a draw.
 When the two sides last met at the Tardini stadium on November 1, a brace of goals from Argentine Hernan Crespo started Parma on a run of impressive home victories over their direct title rivals Juventus, Inter and AC Milan.
 But their title chances now depend on achieving those same results away from home; over the last 10 weeks of the Serie A season Parma travel to Inter, AC Milan and Lazio.
 Parma manager Alberto Malesani places so much importance on the outcome of the game with Fiorentina that he controversially rested several first-team players for Tuesday's UEFA Cup quarter-final in Bordeaux.
 Only after Bordeaux had stormed into a 2-0 lead did the coach remedy his mistake and send on first-choice strikers Enrico Chiesa and Hernan Crespo, who claimed a vital away goal late in the second half.
 Malesani's decision has revealed deep splits between the players and the coach within the Parma camp. We had expected a different line-up," said Francesca Tanzi, sister of club president Stefano Tanzi and a member of the board of directors.
 According to one report in Gazzetta dello Sport, a substitute pleaded with one club official to make Malesani change the line-up when Parma were trailing Bordeaux.
 Just two weeks ago, star striker Chiesa publicly lambasted his boss after he was inexplicably dropped for a home match with Venezia. Italy midfielder Dino Baggio is reportedly not on speaking terms with the coach.
 Despite a stormy relationship with his players, Malesani's side, together with Lazio, are the in-form team in Serie A after taking 10 points from their last four matches.
 After last week's victory over Perugia, the coach said his team had finally recovered from the psychological blow of a 3-1 home defeat to Lazio — inspired by Roberto Mancini's superb backheel goal — last January.
 "We have finally got that goal out of our minds. It is only right that we too can think of the title now," said Malesani.
 On Sunday, Fiorentina will be determined to prove Parma's coach wrong for the second time in a week.

GABRIEL BATISTUTA

J-League special no more

TOKYO, Mar 5: Japan's professional soccer league kicks off on Saturday lacking the big-name superstars of yesteryear but with officials quietly confident the worst is over regarding an alarming slump in attendances and income reports Reuters.
 When the J-League began in 1993, boasting World Cup heroes such as Zico, Gary Lineker and Pierre Littbarski, soccer suddenly became all the rage in the land of the home run.
 The players were worshipped like pop stars and became overnight sensations — some of them overnight millionaires — while the stadiums were packed with shrieking schoolgirls. In the first year alone, fans bought over 3.6 billion yen (29 billion dollars) worth of merchandise. In 1994, the average attendance for league games was 19,598, and the following year the aggregate number of fans topped six million for the first time.
 Then the football bubble burst, the schoolgirls stayed at home to feed their tamagotchi virtual pets and the corporate cash started running out as the economy slumped into recession.
 The average league gate in 1997 was down to 10,131, and total sales of J-League goods was just 473 million yen.
 Companies began to cut their losses and this led to the demise last season of the Yokohama Flügels, who had won the Asian Super Cup in 1995 with Brazilian World Cup midfielders Zinho and Cesar Sampaio on their team.
 Last season, on the back of World Cup fever following Japan's qualification for France, the average attendance rose from the 1997 low to 11,982, suggesting the market had finally bottomed out.
 "If you sit down and think calmly, we now have a normal situation," says Stakehiko Sano, of the J-League's planning department.
 "The first few years were something crazy, like the bubble economy, and the players were not just footballers, they were icons. But anyone could tell you that the people who have left the game did not like soccer in the first place. The high school girls, college girls, men in their 40s and 50s who love beer and baseball... they are all gone."
 Two years ago, people started shouting that the J-League was in crisis. We have had our troubles and still do, but the popularity among teens and men in their 20s and 30s is still strong. If the young generation lose interest, that is really a crisis."
 Sano said the revenue from merchandise and attendances were loosely linked, and markets were now restricted to the home towns of the respective clubs.
 "At the beginning, people who lived in Tokyo bought merchandise of Nagoya Grampus Eight, and people who lived in Fukuoka bought the merchandise of Kashima Antlers. There was no logic to that: They just wanted to be associated with the best players or with the J-League in general."

Lazio's Marcelo Salas being greeted by Attilio Lombardo after the Chilean scored a goal against Panathinaikos of Greece in the European Cup Winners' Cup on March 4.

To raise Calypso spirits

UNDATED, Mar 5 (Reuters/Internet): West Indies have turned to a cartoon crustacean to revive their cricket fortunes.
 Clarence the Walt Disney-designed crab has been adopted by the West Indies Cricket Board (WICB) to inspire more children to become involved in the game.
 "He's small, he's lovable and he's here to get kids in the West Indies more involved in cricket," the WICB said.
 The West Indies, who lost the Test series 5-0 and the one-day internationals 6-1 on their recent tour to South Africa, have also adopted a new Calypso anthem to create a sense of unity among the Caribbean people.
 The WICB said Clarence would make his television debut during the Test series between the West Indies and Australia starting in Port-of-Spain this Friday.
 "Clarence will celebrate on-screen whenever a West Indian batsman hits a four or a bowler takes a wicket, thus drawing the children closer to the game," the WICB said.
 Clarence, developed by the WICB at the Walt Disney studios, will be used as a "kids' mascot" to anchor the WICB's marketing and development programme for under-10s in the Caribbean.
 The popularity of cartoons in this age group is evidenced by the phenomenal success and worldwide recognition of... famous characters such as Mickey Mouse, Bugs Bunny and Donald Duck," the WICB said.
 The anthem, written by Trinidad and Tobago Calypso composer David Rudder, was released ahead of the first Test after an initiative started by the WICB almost two years ago.
 Adapted from a recording entitled "Rally Round the West Indies," an unofficial anthem of Caribbean cricket fans for many years, the new anthem is to be played at WICB events and will be used by West Indies teams wherever they play.
 Rudder believes the anthem could help create a sense of unity among the Caribbean people and also hopes it will be a source of inspiration to the cricket team.

Bierhoff blames teammates

MILAN, Mar 5: AC Milan's German striker Oliver Bierhoff claimed on Thursday that a lack of support from his teammates was to blame for his goal shortage this season, reports AFP.
 Bierhoff, who hit the headlines with his golden goal in the final of Euro '96 at Wembley, was the Serie A's top scorer last season with Udinese, scoring 27 times in 32 matches.
 But since joining Milan, his scoring rate has slipped to 11 goals in 23 games, and the lack of goals, at a time when his new club are trying to challenge for the league title, has not gone unnoticed by the team's critics.
 "It's true, I haven't scored many," Bierhoff said. "But there are a number of reasons for that — my ankle injury, the way the team plays and the lack of assistance from my teammates. I want more crosses."
 The German scored 40 per cent of his goals from headers last season, but has struggled to find the same service he received at Udinese, where new Milan coach Alberto Zaccheroni built the team around him.
 "At Udinese, we'd known each other for three years, the team was more united," he said. "There was just one thought in their heads, let's give the ball to Bierhoff and he'll sort things out."
 "Here, I don't feel people have that same faith in me."
 He went on: "The lack of co-operation could be down to players' egos, but it's difficult to ask the others to all play for me. It would be better if they thought of it another way — that helping me is helping the team."
 At Udinese (Paolo) Poggi and (Marcelo) Amoroso both scored goals, even though they were playing for me. My teammates here have to understand that."
 Bierhoff, however, is confident he can come through this latest test of character.
 "Apart from the season that I played for Ascoli, I've also been through some really bad times with the national side when I was in competition with (Ulf) Kirsten, even though I was scoring important goals."
 "But in the end," he said, "I won."

Nigeria, Ghana in final

ACCRA, Mar 5: Hosts Ghana will meet favourites Nigeria in the African Nations' Youth Cup final after beating Zambia and Cameroon respectively on Thursday, reports Reuters.
 Ghana beat Zambia 3-1 while Nigeria beat Cameroon 2-1. The final takes place in Accra on Sunday.
 All five teams have qualified for the World U-20 Championships in Nigeria in April — Nigeria as hosts and Ghana, Cameroon and Zambia as semi-finalists here — and will be joined by Mali who beat Guinea 4-1 in a play-off on Wednesday.

Gazza's grand total

LONDON, Mar 5: Middlesbrough's former England midfielder Paul Gascoigne was Thursday given a one-match suspension and fined 2,000 pounds by the Football Association after reaching 11 bookings this season, reports AFP.

Tore Andre Flo of Chelsea (R) and Tom Henning of Valerenga battle for the ball during their European Cup Winners' Cup quarterfinal final leg at Stamford Bridge on March 4.

Chelsea, Lazio on target

LONDON, Mar 5: Holders Chelsea and Italian league leaders Lazio stayed on course to provide what would be a great finale to the European Cup Winners' Cup when they both scored impressive quarterfinal first leg wins on Thursday, reports Reuters.
 Chelsea brushed aside a poor Valerenga team from Norway 3-0 in a largely one-sided match at Stamford Bridge, while Lazio, who lost last season's UEFA Cup final to Inter Milan, kept their sights firmly fixed on a second successive European final with an emphatic 4-0 victory over Panionios of Athens in Greece.
 Lokomotiv Moscow also took a huge step towards the last four with a 3-0 home win over Maccabi Haifa, the first Israeli team ever to reach a European quarterfinal.
 Their hero was Georgian striker Zaza Dzhanashia who scored a second half hat-trick which included a 40-metre shot the Israeli 'keeper could not control.
 The other tie ended more evenly balanced with Spanish side Real Mallorca now holding the home advantage after securing a 0-0 draw against Verteks Varazdin in Croatia.
 Chelsea, who are bidding to become the first — and last — team in the 39-year history of the Cup Winners' Cup to retain the trophy — were far too strong for Valerenga who have not played a competitive match since November because of the Norwegian winter break.
 With the Cup Winners' Cup ending this season as part of the re-organisation of European club soccer, Chelsea are desperate to retain the trophy when the final is staged at Villa Park in Birmingham on May 19.
 They ripped aside some flimsy Valerenga defending when Nigerian Celestine Babayaro scored with a near-post shot after only nine minutes and virtually secured the tie with a second from Gianfranco Zola after 30 minutes. Dennis Wise all but steered them into the last four with a third in the closing minutes.
 Chilean Marcelo Salas was behind most of Lazio's attacking moves in their destruction of Panionios — even though he didn't score himself.
 Lazio went ahead after only three minutes when Dejan Stankovic scored the opener. Greek defender Athanasios Gazis turned a Salas shot into his own net after 14 minutes by which time the tie was effectively over.
 Stankovic (60th) and Pavel Nedved (63rd) wrapped up the victory which means Panionios would have to score one of the greatest comebacks in European history to reach the last four.

From Inter to FA Cup

LONDON, Mar 5 (AP): After beating Inter Milan in the Champions' League, Manchester United face another team brimming with Italians and World Cup stars.
 The two teams, which lie first and second in the Premier League standings meet in the quarterfinals of the FA Cup on the same Old Trafford ground Sunday where the Reds outplayed Inter and gained a 2-0 first leg victory Wednesday.
 Instead of Roberto Baggio, Youri Djorkaeff and Diego Simeone, United confront Gianfranco Zola, Roberto Di Matteo and French World Cup winner Marcel Desailly. Another French World Cup star, Frank Leboeuf, is missing from the Chelsea lineup because of suspension.
 With Chelsea also in action in the Cup Winners' Cup this week, both managers will be forgiven for resting some of their stars for the FA Cup game.
 Vialli, who is suspended still has Uruguayan midfielder Gustavo Poyet and Italian striker Pierluigi Casiraghi sidelined with long term injuries although he now has Norwegian World Cup striker Tore Andre Flo back to partner Zola in attack. But Nigerian wingback Celestine Babayaro is another missing through suspension.
 United manager Alex Ferguson has Dutch defender Jaap Stam suspended but holds the edge in terms of choice. He can call on Norwegian forward Ole Gunnar Solskjaer to team up with Dwight Yorke and Andy Cole in a strikeforce which has hit 58 goals this season.
 The United-Chelsea meeting is the most eye-catching game of the round. The others are: Newcastle vs Everton, also on Sunday, defending champions Arsenal against Derby and Division One Barnsley against Tottenham both on Saturday.
 Third in the Premier League, Arsenal can still emulate last season's league and FA Cup double and have an erratic Derby standing in their way at Highbury.
 French World Cup midfielder Emmanuel Petit is struggling to recover from an injury but coach Arsene Wenger likely will field his other big overseas stars, Dutch forwards Dennis Bergkamp and Marc Overmars, Frenchman Patrick Vieira and in-form striker Nicolas Anelka against the Rams.

CROSSWORD By Eugene Sheffer
 ACROSS
 1 Was 36 Bar 2 Corral 20 Conk out
 5 Unoriginal 37 Dots on the 4 First verb
 9 Type 40 Aspect 42 Lizzie 22 Prelim to 12 Mad 43 Common 44 Borden's 23 Block a
 13 Verdi 44 Party 45 Borden's 24 Sombre-
 14 Born 46 Party 46 Borden's 25 Ban-
 15 Explain 47 Photo 47 Borden's 26 Ban-
 17 Photo 48 Party 48 Borden's 27 Waste no
 18 Perhaps 49 Approach 49 Borden's 28 Paradise
 19 Iowa city 50 Acknowledged 50 Borden's 29 Supreme
 20 Perfect 51 Fast flyer 51 Borden's 30 Penman-
 21 Makes 52 Missing 52 Borden's 31 Penman-
 24 Kojak's 53 Noire 53 Borden's 32 Actress
 25 A couple 54 Lister 54 Borden's 33 Chat
 26 Noncommittal 55 Successor 55 Borden's 34 Pitch
 30 Corner- 56 Response 56 Borden's 35 Craze
 31 Ralph of 57 The 57 Borden's 36 1945
 32 Altar 58 Machine 58 Borden's 37 Losers
 33 Slot 59 Symbols 59 Borden's 38 Ollie's pal
 35 Bees' 60 Answer 60 Borden's 39 The Way
 Solution time: 24 mins.
 BUILE ASP AHAB
 OPERATOR TOME
 GASOLINE OPEN
 KIT FAMINE
 ASSET MIMI
 CHAN TAXICAB
 TAM FRIED MOP
 MEDIAN MONIA
 ACNE YUKION
 DALLAS COL
 EXIT AMORETITO
 ELMO COCKTAIL
 MEAN TEIA APED
 Yesterday's answer
 8-18

CRYPTOQUIP
 XIO DIOUE EOUX DBUU
 BH BUVBHBD BH BHHOBU
 VBHOBU
 Yesterday's Cryptquip: IT'S NO BIG SECRET THAT CHEERLEADERS LIKE DRINKING ROOT BEER.
 Today's Cryptquip clue: V equals M
 The Cryptquip is a substitution cipher in which one letter stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words and words using an apostrophe give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is by trial and error.