Ashish Khondaker

ALKING to Ashish Khandakar of the Environmen-Lal Theatre group and his colleagues about his play "Mohammed Amin" which was staged last evening around the dry pond at the Department of Fine Arts DU, one learnt that this was about the internal conflicts of a typical Bangladeshi village. It has its feurial lords's haplessness, death in the family, a second marriage, repeated rapes, a pointless 'panchayat' where the victim is flailed for having concieved out of marriage-even though the rapist had forced himself on her repeatedly -- gossip and tattle. The play depicts how life goes on despite the overwhelming pains and frustrations.

by Fayza Haq

Ashish explains, in between his prepatory preoccupations for for the evening, that the play has a straightforward plot that has attained "an epic height" due to its universal appeal. He adds, "Mohammed Amin is just not the protagonist, his spiritual battles stand for the soul pitch of all struggling humanity. The physical and material losses of the supporting characters are spiritual impairments. Amin is a part of nature that surrounds him and speaks forthrightly, which few do either in our villages or cities. He symbolises truth and persistance found in the common man.

Ashish adds, "All thecharcters are victimised by an ele-bours aware of the romantic goings-on and gets the disapproval of Boro Abba and Rabiya (a neighbour) as well as Manwar, who is a writer of legal documents. They debate about giving Rukhsana in marriage to Kosor Ali .

Meanwhile, Monwar suspects his wife as she can bear no child and other young men enjoy chatting with her from time to time. While this is on, Parveen the youngest daughter residing the house(and who is dumb, symbolsing the limitations of women when it comes to have their way.) is raped by Khoiber, the black sheep of the family. There is the usual "panchayat" with all its routine false allegations and crude acts of violence. Here again Ashish Khandakar takes up a stand for the feminists all over the world and not just the downtrodden. However, her brother adds." Key shey jey zamamer kuar Paani Kory tory soyey, Bishash ke Kotl kory arek Bishashhintar jonom dey . Bol ma bol."

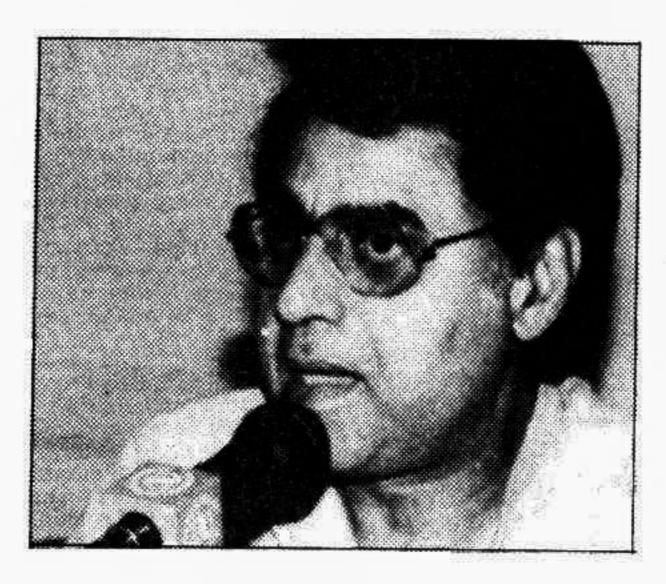

Added to the agression is the pain of the young slightly retarded boy Bodho, as the school-master brother marries a young woman, the same age as his son. When Bodho comes up with his resentment. "Ae beyey ami mani na", the father comes up with the solution of setting up a soap business for him in the village as a pathetic piece of consolation. Bodho turns around and accuses his father of being a "Batpar! Taut!

To offset the gloom in the play ther is the comic relief of the poet, the village drunkards, one being the bodyguard of the feudal lord Boro Bhi, the "munshi' who is an eternal flirt, and the barber who chats, gossips and carries tales from one place to another.

The performers include Mohammed Amin, Sayedul Islam, Motiul Alam Chowdhury, Alamgir Hosaain, Sahidul Tabassum, Binoy Kumar Barman, Kishore Chakroborty. Sumon Vhowmik, Kil Rawshan, Akhtaruzzaman, Adar Abul Hossain, Mahmudul Hasan. Rafiqul islam. Gholam Shafique, Halima Khan, Pairs, Afroj Farjana, and Mithun.

Like all the Environmental Theatre productions, this was laudable and certainly worth watching.

Press Conference of Jagjit Singh

T AGJIT Singh's visit to Bangladesh is a dream come . U true for many music lovers. Jagjit is not only the ghazal maestro, but also the hero of many to-be singers. To hear him sing live is the chance of a lifetime for many. So much so, that the tickets, which are being sold at Tk 2000, are almost sold

At a press conference held Monday night, he expressed his pleasure of singing in Bangladesh. Given the right kind of song and music, he also said that he would sing for Bangla film songs. It can be

by Nadine Murshid

mentioned here that he had previously sung Bangla songs in an album. Much to the surprise of many, he could also speak and understand Bangla, though not very well.

When asked, he said that everyone has a beautiful voice. It is practice and endurance that makes a person a singer. "Everyone has a good voice, but you have to train it for a particular trade. Your voice can't be my voice, but that doesn't mean that you cannot be a singer."

"How do you feel when you don't sing with Chitra?" he was asked, to which he said, and very boldly so, "I feel free", after which everyone broke into peals of laughter. Then, he explained. "I have to keep at the same level as the other singer. I have to consider his handicap and his capability. When I'm alone, I can fly," Then someone mentioned him singing with the Sufi pop group, Junoon, "Junoon has no right to be in this business, they cannot sing" was Jagjit's reply. Personal vendetta? Actual dislike? Hard to tell, but what was obvious is too obvious to mention! This created quite a stir among the audience, and rightfully so. There were obviously some big fans of Junoon present. After that, reporters kept asking the same questions, over and over again. 'Do you plan to make an album in bangla?' Do you want to make an album in Bangla? What is the best thing about singing in Bangla? and so on. Quite irritating, and definitely embarrassing, but what to do?

Subsequently, tea was served, which was finished in minutes, might I add? As it happened, the ones who waited for the mad rush to subside were disappointed, but not as disappointed as leaving without the tickets, because the ones who grabbed more, got more! The true faces of journalists could be seen as they screamed and made chaos while collecting tickets. Sad but true, this reporter came back emptyhanded.

A rowdy evening, with lots of pushing and grabbing and screaming and badmouthing (thankfully this reporter was not among them) it was definitely not an evening to remember (organizers, please take note). What can be remembered is Jagjit Singh himself and his gentlemanly ways.

Elements of Innocence and Simplicity

simplicity and innocence of HILDREN cannot match up with the taste or liking of the grown-up people. In the dramatic-realm pervaded with the sordid realities of life their artistic craftsmanship ceases to exist. With a man of rude nature, they don't feel inclined to exchange greetings. Gifted with celestial simplicity, joy and pleasure they always gravitate towards the flow of life that is care-free, simple and not overladen with human-intricacy. Keeping it in by Mahfuz Ali mind if any one writes and stages plays, working in harmony with children's fascination, his endeavour proves effective. Such was the dramatic representation on 13th March, the consecutive tenth day of the national shishu-kishore theatre festival.

The festival began, as in other days, at 4-30 PM in a musical atmosphere. And there gleamed before the eyes of the spectators dramatic representations of three theatre-troupes namely, "Huthay Khori Shishu-Kishore Natya Goshti Tongi" "Unondom Natya Dhaka" and "Ubol Tabol Shishu Sangatan Rajbari". And the plays staged by them were "Shishu Sorgo". "Duck Ghor" and "Onirbun".

The play entitled "Shishu Sorgo deals with the divine children. God is manifested in children's simplicity. To kill their interest means to destroy the godly interest. A group of boys as well as girls habitually play in the house of a giant. That giant suddenly restricted the movement of children. As it did so, its house became shorn of the charm and beauty of nature. All the trees growing around the residence of the giant became fruitless and flowerless. The bird's singing was unheard. The giant could not fathom out the mystery behind it. The fairies told the giant "you in killing the interest of the children have destroyed the godly interest. Nature will not shed down its blessing upon you until you will feel repented of your wrong's doing." Then the giant could have a vigorous understanding of the blunderous mistake he made, allowed the free movement of children in it ownership to them. In the play entitled "Duck Ghor" spectators discover the emergence of a child. Since the child was sick, he was not allowed to steal out of his residence at the suggestion of the physician. He longed for the vastness of nature. And he wished to become one with them. But he was precluded from moving freely. In the play "Duck Ghor" the child made an

and finally handed over its encounter with a milk-man and expressed a desire to become one with him. Secondly he made another encounter with a post man and grew fascinated to his duty, saying "Had I been a post man like you".! Then he made an encounter with the daughter of a gardener. What ever naturally came across his imagination, he uncovered. The spectators really enjoyed the way he waited for the letter of the king. Thus the child greatly contributed to reflecting the elements of innocence and simplicity on the stage of the public library auditorium. Progressive artists of our country arranged the national shishu kishore theatre festival in 1995 being motivated by the objectives of expanding the mental as well as cultural growth of children. In an interview with The Daily Star Leewakoth Ali Lucky, convenor of the National Shishu-Kishore Theatre Festival emphatically said, "We are pledge-bound to bring up the children of our country so that they can play an important role in the national and international cultural arena." Since 1995 the festival is held three times. Truly the shishu-kishore theatre festival 99 brings an index to an immense probability of children's gradual development, implying the truth "Child is the father of man".

A spectacular sight of little actors on the stage of the Public Library auditorium, shaped up as house for dramatic representations on the occasion of the National Shishu-Kishore Theatre Festival
