Child health situation not encouraging, says minister

The overall child health situation in the country is not encouraging due to various socio-economic reasons despite some success achieved in lowering child mortality rate, reports APB.

Health and Family Welfare Minister observed this while inaugurating the two-day annual conference '99 of Bangladesh Paediatric Association (BPA) and Indo-Bangladesh Paediatric Meet '99 here yesterday.

"Although the rate of child mortality has reduced to some extent because of considerable success in EPI programme coupled with increase in the availability of pure drinking water and spread of diarrhoea control programmes, some 117 under-5 children per thousand die of various diseases while the death rate of child-bearing mothers is five per thousand," the minister said.

He noted that diarrhoea and pneumonia related deaths are still high.

Currently prenatal death rates in the country is 4.4 per thousand which the government wants to bring down to 2.8 by the year 2000, he said while referring to achievements in population control and immunisation programmes.

The rate of child mortality fell by about 50 per cent over the last two decades but "it is yet to reach the desired level," Salahuddin said.

Besides, about 70 per cent women of the country are suffering from malnutrition-related anaemia while malnutrition is widespread among the children.

The minister called upon the paediatricians to play a leading
