Redefining Men's Fashion

Famous Indian designer Sharbari Datta's fashion wear exhibition opens tomorrow.

by Ziaul Karim

Sharbari Datta: BBC World's style has featured her in one of its recent episodes

"I have always dreamt to visit Dhaka, the land of my ancestors," said Sharbari Datta, one of the most original fashion designers of India. The fabulous collection of Datta, who has virtually revolutionised men's fashion wear liberating the traditional dress code of Indian men from the colonial mind set, can be seen at a three-day exhibition beginning at Sheraton tomorrow. This was made public at a press conference held at the hotel's south ballroom yesterday.

What made her different in the contemporary Indian high fashion scene is her imaginative prowess to turn casual homely dress like lungi, kurta into haute couture.

For Datta every dress is like an art work where she pours her imaginative self inspired by oriental myth and legends, traditional designs and motifs and resources from world art.

"What I have done," Datta said, "is rediscovered the dresses and styles we have long forgotten. I only have brought the traditional and grand Mughal designs under focus or redesigned the pristine male fashion of the Mahabharata days."

Her motifs and designs are eclectic in the true sense of the term. She has in fact rummaged through the rich reservoir of world heritage from ancient Egypt to pagan Africa to create her own unique style. Explaining why she had chosen men's wear as her field of creativity Datta said, "In comparison to women's wardrobe, women's are colourful and exciting, and when we talk about beauty we naturally refer to women. But men are beautiful too. They enjoy wearing good looking and trendy dresses as much as their counterparts do. So I thought why not give them something gorgeous and at the same time casual."

With an MA in philosophy, Datta is a self-taught artist. Perhaps this is the reason she could easily trample with typical fashion-wear. She stormed into Indian fashion scenario in 1991. Since then she did not have to look back. Today she has found enthusiasts in such big names as Anupam Kher, MF Hussain, Amol Palekar, Kapil Dev.

Daughter of poet Ajit Datta, famous for his love poems Kushner Mash in post-Tagore era, Sharbari has in her blood poetic imagination and lyrical beauty.

Sharbari intends to give 20 per cent of the proceeds from Wearing a Sharbari creation is wearing more than a new look. It is sleeping into glamour.

the sale of her ensemble to Prime Minister's Relief Fund. Dhaka Sheraton and ACI Consumer Brands have co-sponsored the show reciprocating her noble gesture.

Exhibit of Salomon's "Life ? or Theatre?"

Charlotte Salomon was expelled from Germany by the Nazi and lived last years of life in exile in France. Before deportation she gave her 1325 gouache painting entitled "Life ? or Theatre ?" to a friend. A selection of the works will be on display at Goethe Institut from today.

THE Goethe Institut is having an exhibition of 60 gouache paintings of Charlotte Salomon from today to 6th May. Charlotte was very much like Anne Frank, the author of the worldwide known diary written during the Nazi occupation of the Netherlands.

Charlotte Salomon who was of Jewish origin, was expelled from Germany by the Nazi and lived the last years of her life in exile in France. She was murdered in the Auschwitz concentration camp. Before the deportation, she gave her oeuvre of 1325 gouache paintings entitled "Life? Or Theatre?" to a friend saying, "Take good care of it, it is my whole life"

These paintings depict the life of "Charlotte Kern" in the form of a theatre play with different roles and scenes, with texts and even remarks for melodies and songs. The title "Life? Or Theatre?" hints that the paintings are not purely autobiographic but always question the reality behind the picture -- was it actually like this or do we imagine it like this?

"Life? Or Theatre?" was made by a possessed artist, who under the pressure of persecution and war wanted to give an account of her past and with it the foundations and meaning of her existence. She created a unique document of the times showing huge artistic value and maturity.

Charlotte had been accepted by the Academy of Fine Arts and the colourful ways in which Charlotte describes her student days bears witness to the carefree and cheerful atmosphere in the college, where there were no anti-semitic attacks. In '37-'38

she received a price her work from the college and at the same time danger arose that her Jewish background might become apparent.

As soon as it was possible to travel to France, in 1947, Charlotte's parents went to Vilefrance to see if they were able to find any traces of Charlotte. Mrs Moore gave them "Life? Or Theatre?" together with a self-portrait. The parents ordered five boxes covered with red cloth to be made and in them they preserved the paintings for more than ten years. In 1959 they brought the work to the attention of the Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam. An exhibition was held in 1961 included a broad selection of the autobiographical sheets to which other work were added -- portraits, flower paintings and landscapes. The works that Mrs Moore had loaned returned to Vilefrance and disappeared permanently after Mrs Moore's death. Some years later, however, today the works are at the Jewish Historical Museum in Amsterdam.

One of the paintings shows a mother taking pride in her baby even though the baby cries day and night. She feeds the baby herself and is annoyed very time the nurse takes the baby away.

Another painting is the depiction of the death of Franziska who says, "I cannot tolerate any more. I am so lonely" and dies on the spot which is on the third floor.

Yet another painting depicts the time the artist is at her grandfather's house. She is extremely afraid and runs until she reaches the bathroom and locks herself in.

Something that is very expressive is the one that delineates the affect of the swatika on the hearts and minds of the Jews. As the National Socialists come to power, all Jews are summarily dismissed. So is the one with a child saying, "I'll not go to school any more. I don't like it any more"

This exhibit was specially for the participants of the language classes as a part of German history as the artist had the fate of many Jews who were sent into exile. This is a unique document of the Third Reich, being both artistic and historic. — Fayza Haq

Bob Donnell (Dylan McDermott) is a young idealistic lawyer committed to the pursuit of justice -- and willing to bend the rules to get there. Rather than work at a top Boston law firm, defending the rich and powerful, Bobby chooses to fight for the disenfranchised. He heads a small, working class law practice consisting of Ellenor Fruett (Carmyn Manheim), his right-hand person and the voice of reason; Eugene Young (Steve Harris), a street smart and energetic; Lindsay Dole (Kelly Williams), an insecure recent Harvard graduate; Jimmy Berluti (Michael Badalucco), enthusiastic but inexperienced; and Rebecca Washington (Lisa Gay Hamilton), the calm, centred secretary/paralegal. Bobby and his team often find themselves caught between the glory of practicing law to right wrongs and the pragmatic reality of running a business.

New series: Buffy the Vampire Slayer on Star World at 10 pm
Buffy just wants to be a normal teenage girl: go on dates, giggle with friends, hang out at the shopping mall. However, Buffy is not like other girls. She is the Chosen One: a slayer of vampires. This puts a major crimp in the usual Saturday night plans, most pursues aren't large enough to conceal a wooden stake, and it is difficult to simultaneously converse with a date and knock evil creatures of the night. Not to mention that vials of holy water have a tendency to break at the most inopportune moments -- and garlic is never the most attractive smell when a boy is leaning in for a kiss. Buffy believes that her days of vampire slaying are behind her when she moves to a new high school. She breathes a sigh of relief when Cordelia, the snobbish leader of the most popular clique in school, seems to accept her.
