Perugia-Milan investigation scraped

ROME, June 2: Italy's football federation on Tuesday dropped their inquiries into Perugia's home match against AC Milan last weekend which decided the Serie A title, reports Fears had been raised of possible match rigging after a Perugia player, Alessandro Melli, refused to take the field as a late substitute. Melli, along with Perugia officials, was subsequently interviewed by investigators. But a federation statement here said the head of its internal prosecution service, Carlo Porceddu, had scrapped the inquiry as there was no evidence of any improper conduct concerning the game, which Milan won 2-1.

German Steffi Graf (L) and American Lindsay Davenport shake hands after their quarterfinal fixture of the french Open on June 1. Steffi won and reached the semifinals.

Epic semis at Roland Garros

PARIS, June 2 (AFP): Say hi once again to the old guard -- but there's a Swiss teen just aching to spoil the pensioners' party. The French Open women's singles is once again largely the province of the veterans after the teenage revolution -- with the exception of world number one Martina Hingis -- fizzled out early.

In many respects, tennis fans can be grateful because Thursday's semifinal pairings have thrown up two potential classics.

The 18-year-old Hingis -- a 6-2, 6-2 winner over unseeded Austrian qualifier Barbara Schwartz -- who is hardly a naive innocent with five Grand Slam titles already under her belt, is desperate to win Roland Garros and complete her set of titles, having already claimed a Australian Open hattrick and enjoyed further successes at the UŚ Open and Wimbledon. The Swiss player, who surprisingly lost the 1997 final to Croatia's Iva Majoli, now faces defending champion Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, who never knows when she's beaten -- all the more so when a fourth title beckons on the slow red clay of Roland Garros. If that encounter were not enough to whet the appetite, one could hardly ask more than a second semi featuring two of the most tenacious characters in the sport who have already served up two epic clashes here. Steffi Graf and Monica Seles both won the tournament here as teenagers. Seles becoming the youngest-ever champion at 16 and six months when she beat Graf in the 1990 final. Seles would go on to complete a hattrick in 1992 -- beating Graf again an unforgettable final which went to 10-8 in the final Seles beat Conchita Martinez of Spain 6-1, 6-4 in 1hr 22min to book her passage. It was her 16th win in 17 meetings with Martinez.

The naturalised-American saw her reign as queen of clay brutally cut short after she was stabbed by a deranged spectator at a tournament in Hamburg. Germany, in April 1993. That incident forced her to miss the next three French Opens and by the time Yugoslav-born came back Germany's Graf had reestablished her pre-eminence after a fifth crown in 1996.

The pair, who have won 30 Grand Slams between them. have reached the last four largely untroubled, though Graf needed a three-setter -- 6-1, 6-7. 6-3 -- and 1hr 53min to oust second seed Lindsay Davenport in Tuesday's quarterfinal. However, the psychological edge rests with Seles, who triumphed in their last meeting in the Australian Open quarterfinal last January. Graf leads their career series 9-5, but Seles has a 3-2 lead on clay. "I think both of us are really strong mentally, so whoever makes the shots on the day probably is going to come out the winner," said Seles, who thinks she has the advantage on clay.

"It will be different, not as fast as grass -- because I think grass would definitely favour Steffi's game more."

Looking forward to Thursday's showdown, Seles admitted: "I will get nervous, I will get excited. You have to play really 100 per cent if you want to come out a winnner. I did that in Australia. We'll see if I can do that on Thursday." Graf, who is 30 next month, insists she's just trying to enjoy herself after two injuryblighted years.

"I'm feeling comfortable. I'm not really thinking of winning titles right now," she said. "Do I believe I can do it? I think I can. I just probably need to believe in it a little more." The 27-year-old Sanchez-Vicario, who beat Austrian Sylvia Plischke 6-2, 6-4 in the quarters, could barely have hoped to get this far after a poor start to the season, but Roland Garros has once again brought her never-say-die qualities to the fore and she is determined to see off Hingis, who has romped through the tournament so far.

Hingis insists she isn't about to make winning at Roland Garros an obsession.

"Perhaps the mistake I've made in the last two years is I've wanted it too much," said the sunny Swiss. "I always felt like something was wrong, or underestimated the other players maybe. I won't do that in the .next round." Hingis has great respect for Sanchez-Vicario despite the Spaniard's lack of a damaging weapon.

"She doesn't do anything special -- she just hits the ball back," Hingis said. "She's so dangerous here because she just runs forever.

Hingis dreams of being the future queen of Roland Garros but she knows as well as anybody that Seles, Graf and Sanchez-Vicario have shared the crown in 11 of the past 12 seasons. The old-timers aren't ready to quit just yet.

Dino unavailable

FLORENCE, June 2: Key midfielder Dino Baggio pulled out of Italy's two upcoming Euro 2000 qualifying matches on Tuesday because of a throat infection, reports AP.

The AC Parma stalwart, often charged with shutting down an opponent's top playmaker. was not replaced on the roster.

Ronaldo out of friendlies

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 2: Ronaldo, bothered by a thigh injury, was left off the Brazilian national team Tuesday for two exhibition games against the Netherlands, Brazilian media reported, reports AP.

The star striker who plays for Internazionale in Italy ar-rived in Salvador 1,200 kilometres (750 miles) northeast of Rio, where the national team will be Saturday for the first of two games against the Nether-lands, complaining of pain in his left thigh. The second game will be played in the central west city of Goiana.

Ronaldo presented the national team copies of medical exams done in Milan and did not seem overly optimistic about his chances of playing, the Estado news agency reported.

Ronaldo was apparently injured on May 23 in the Italian championships against Udinese and the injury worsened during a game against Bologna on the May 27. National team doctor Jose Luis Runco was quoted as saying that the injury was relatively minor and that Ronaldo should be able to join the team for the Copa America soccer tournament that begins June 29 in Paraguay.

Anelka issue takes new twist

MADRID, June 2: The transfer saga of French international Nicolas Anelka took a new twist with Arsenal negotiating a move to Juventus at exactly the same time the striker was accepting an offer from Real Madrid, according to Spanish press reports on Tuesday. reports AFP.

The 20-year-old Anelka, who has said publicly that he does not want to play in Italy, authorised his Spanish representative Santos Marquez to Finalise a deal with Madrid officials, according to As newspaper, and Real are ready to negotiate with Arsenal.

Still according to As, Arsenal manager Arsene Wenger was speaking with Juventus officials in Turin on Monday. the same time Marquez was finalising his deal with Madrid.

The Spanish club are reportedly prepared to go up to three billion pesetas (19 million dollars) for Anelka, though Juventus, who failed to qualify for next season's UEFA Cup on Monday when Udinese beat them on the away goal rule in a UEFA Cup play-off, could go much higher.

Juve officials are reportedly poised to visit London next week to discuss the deal.

Le Havre boss steps down

LE HAVRE, France, June 2: Coach Joel Beaujouan has stepped down as coach to French First Division side Le Havre Tuesday even though his team managed to preserve their top-flight status last Saturday, reports AFP.

However, Beaujouan will stay at the north coast side as head of their youth policy. He admitted he had been left stressed and anxious by his side's long fight against relegation and despite the happy conclusion added that he no longer had the "freshness and capacity" to work with the professionals again.

Club president, Jean-Pierre Hureau said he was surprised by the decision and said: "I was absolutely determined to keep Beaujouan and regret that he has not carried on because his work was remarkable.

Beuajouan only took the helm at the Normandy outfit in October when Denis Troch left to go to Paris St Germain.

Agassi, Hrbaty in semis

PARIS, June 2: American showman Andre Agassi was a man in a hurry as he took just 72min to swamp Uruguayan qualifier Marcelo Filippini on Tuesday Marcelo Rios in four sets. and storm into the semifinals of the French Open, reports

Agassi, the 13th seed, never gave Filippini even the shadow of a chance as he won 6-2, 6-2, 6-0 in a performance which wowed the crowd on Centre

Court. Agassi, who has twice made the final here but has never won at Roland Garros, needs a French Open crown to complete his collection of Grand Slam ti-

He now plays unseeded Slovak Dominik Hrbaty, who ousted ninth-seeded Chilean

"Two more and they're the toughest yet," said Agassi, whose coach Brad Gilbert said he was playing the best tennis of his life.

Filippini complained after the match he had been hampered by an abdominal strain. "But he killed me," Filippini said. "I had no chance."

FRENCH OPEN DIARY

PARIS, June 2 (AFP): French Open diary for Wednesday: Former American star Luke Jensen started the fashion a few years ago and Indian pair Leander Paes and Mahesh Bhupathi are following suit. The right-handed Jensen sometimes tried to outfox his opponents by serving lefthanded. Top-seeded doubles partners Paes and Bhupathi, showed Monday they were equally ambidextrously-inclined by putting on an exhibition of their left-handed qualities in practice while preparing for their quarterfinal against Ellis Ferreira and Rick Leach.

YEVGENY WHO?

Russian Yevgeny Kafelnikov may be world number one, but that doesn't cut any ice with Roland Garros security person-

Kafelnikov, who recently complained people didn't seem to know who he was, was refused entry to the dressing room because he'd forgotten his pass.

The 1996 champion here explained that he was the top seed but the official would not be moved and Kafelnikov made a retreat.

HINGIS PRAISES SCHWARTZ

World number one Martina Hingis believes Austrian Barbara Schwartz could be one of her most dangerous opponents in the future. Hingis beat qualifier

Schwartz 6-2, 6-2 in the guarters but said she believes the tall 20-year-old left-hander has more potential than Australian Open finalist Amelie Mauresmo, the player she beat in the second round here.

"I think Barbara is better, the way she played against me, said Hingis. "She is going to be pretty dangerous in the future. "She is a lefty and that makes a big difference. Her serve is very strong and she can play anything. She can slow it down, slice it or play winners from anywhere.'

STRIKE BEATS CULTURE VULTURE SELES

Women's semifinalist Monica Seles was hoping for a little cultural variety on her days off in Paris as she winds down between matches.

But she had to change her plans after attenpting to embark on a programme of museum visits.

Mark Bosnich was due to travel to Manchester on Tuesday to settle a free-transfer move from Aston Villa to the European Cup champions, reports AFP.

"I was confident. If you beat somebody once you can beat him second time." Hrbaty also beat Rios at the Lipton event in Key Biscayne in March.

Rios served eight double faults and made 67 unforced errors -- which proved fatal against the man who beat world number one Yevgeny Kafelnikov earlier in the tournament. "Today I felt a bit tired. All the matches I've played were very hard," said Rios. "It was difficult against a player who hits the ball so strongly." Hrbaty is 5-1 against top 10 players this year and his win over Rios means it will not be possible for Gustavo Kuerten to take over as world number one even if the Brazilian should win the tournament.

Kuerten cannot now pick up enough bonus points to over-haul Yevgeny Kafelnikov.
