Court upholds TV rights

LONDON, July 29: A top British court on Wednesday upheld the right of English soccer's Premier League to sell TV rights to its matches collectively to Rupert Murdoch's BSkyB or other broadcasters, reports Reuters.

Judge Justice Ferris said that the 20-team league was not acting against the public interest in the way it sold its rights. Pay TV giant BSkyB has rights to televise 60 matches live each season while the BBC shows a weekly highlights package as part of a 743 million pounds (1.2 billion dollars) live-year deal.

Davenport scrapes thru

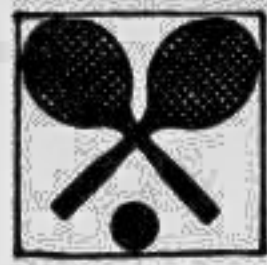

STANFORD, California, July 29: Lindsay Davenport, who began her run to a US Open crown and the No. 1 ranking with a title at the Bank of the West Classic last year, struggled to win her first match at this year's tournament Wednesday night, reports AP.

Davenport, overcoming numerous unforced errors to defeat Chanda Rubin 6-3, 6-7 (2-7), 6-3. Rubin had both thighs wrapped in bandages by the end of the match.

Davenport used the Bank of the West tournament as a springboard last year. She followed up her win at Stanford with titles in San Diego and Los Angeles before capturing the US Open crown and moving up to No. 1 for the first time in October.

"I just went on such a great roll after winning here. I think you just have those times in your career where you just play so well and get in a groove. Last year I just played really well and really consistently," she said. "Duplicating last year is going to be very tough."

Sekulov ends Enqvist

LOS ANGELES, July 29: Australian qualifier James Sekulov claimed the biggest win of his career Wednesday, ousting fifth-seeded Swede Thomas Enqvist to reach the quarterfinals of the ATP Tour Los Angeles Open, reports AFP.

Sekulov, a 22-year-old who regularly grinds it out on the Challenger circuit, took advantage of Enqvist's uncharacteristically erratic play to beat the Australian Open finalist 6-7, 6-4, 6-3.

"Obviously, he wasn't playing the best he could play, but I hung in there," Sekulov said. "It was good to get the win, good to be in the quarters. I only decided on Thursday to come here. I was going to have a week off -- I'm glad I didn't."

In the quarters he'll face American Michael Chang, who defeated France's Guillaume Raoux 6-4, 6-2.

With second seed Pete Sampras highlighting the evening session, the only other seed in action during the day was number eight, Wayne Ferreira of South Africa.

He escaped with a 5-7, 7-5, 6-2 victory over Justin Gimelstob in a match that left neither participant with much to boast of.

"I shouldn't have won, no way," Ferreira said. "I actually feel guilty winning."

Gimelstob served for the match at 5-4 in the second, but couldn't earn a match point.

"I started to play the points pretty tentatively," a disappointed and disgruntled Gimelstob said. "He's a good athlete. You can't do that. It just hurts."

"I think he tried to come up with the big shots too much, and I took advantage of that," Ferreira said. But the South African was angry at himself for squandering the quick start he made in the first set.

"I played so well until 5-3, then I lost my motivation level," said Ferreira, who broke Gimelstob to lead 4-2 in the first and held easily for 5-2 before losing the next five games.

He said he couldn't account for the mental lapse.

"If I had the answer to that, I wouldn't be doing it, and I do it too often these days."

"It's frustrating stuff," he added. "I played great tennis until 5-3, probably some of the best tennis I've played in a long time. Then I just collapsed."

After he dropped his serve to open the second set, Ferreira smacked a ball into the pine trees behind the stands in frustration, earning a code violation warning.

With hindsight, he said, it was frustration with himself that led to the outburst.

"Obviously, the calls I didn't like I didn't like," he said. "But generally, if I was playing well and things were going fine, I probably would have just forgotten about it."

Ferreira said his current malaise probably dates to late 1996 and 1997, when he battled back from knee surgery and then from ankle surgery.

"I've had a pretty ordinary time on the tennis court the past two years," he said. "I kept playing through some injuries and it was pretty tough."

"And now that I'm feeling like I'm playing well, I'm having trouble keeping my motivation. I still love the game of tennis, some days it's just hard to get motivated to play."

"I honestly believe it might have been good for me during my injury period to stop completely."

The 27-year-old, who is expecting the birth of his first child in two months, said he might use that as an opportunity to take a significant break in a bid to regain his appetite for the sport.

Motivation was not the problem for Enqvist, the world number 18 who opened the year with a victory in Adelaide then finished runner-up to Yevgeny Kafelnikov at the Australian Open.

"This year started off so well for me, I'm more eager than ever," he said. "I can't really recall how long it has been since I played as bad as I did today."

Banks to help England's 2006 WC bid

LONDON, July 29: British sports minister Tony Banks' decision to step down as Sports Minister and help England's bid to bring the World Cup to England in 2006 was welcomed today by the man leading the campaign, reports AFP.

Alec McGivern, England 2006 World Cup campaign director said that the backing of the former sports minister will give the final push to win the right to stage the world's greatest soccer tournament.

McGivern said: "Tony Banks has been a great ambassador in this bid as Sports Minister and if you had suggested a year ago that the government were going to offer him more or less full time to help us promote this bid I wouldn't have believed you."

The campaign chief plans to use Banks' experience in the sporting arena as final plans are drawn up to win the bid.

"It is a great boost for us that the Prime Minister has asked him on a personal basis to be his special envoy. We will be making great use of him in the months ahead."

"The decision (on where the 2006 World Cup will be staged) is less than a year away and he has done a great job for us but he can do even more now and we are very pleased about it," McGivern told BBC Radio 5 Live.

Banks will still represent the government in his new position, a Downing Street spokesman confirmed last night.

Banks will pit England against familiar foe Germany in the battle to host the 2006 World Cup.

His new role could bring him face to face with some tough opposition too following suggestions that ex-World Cup star Jürgen Klinsmann or Wimbledon favourite Steffi Graf could fill a similar role for the German effort.

England's 2006 hopes are set to be given a boost today as plans for Wembley's massive re-fit, costing an estimated 320 million pounds, are due to be unveiled.

The redevelopment is the centerpiece of the bid but the stadium's famous twin towers may be lost in the revamp, which will transform an ageing ground holding 75,000 into a state-of-the-art arena with a capacity of 90,000.

Bailey boosts Canada

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, July 29: Former world 100-metre record-holder Donovan Bailey helped Canada gain the Pan American Games 4x100-metre relay final Wednesday by efficiently running the opening leg, reports Reuters.

Bailey, besieged by many in the Canadian media for failing to run the 100 metres here, had Canada even with Cuba at the first exchange and the Canadians went on to clock 38.74 seconds in winning their semifinal. The final will be Friday.

"It felt great," said Bailey, who is coming back from surgery on his left Achilles tendon 10 months ago.

Glenroy Gilbert, Brad McCaig and Trevino Betty joined Bailey on the winning team that scored a 12-metre victory over Guatemala, Cuba, meanwhile, dropped the baton on the first exchange and did not finish.

Brazil claimed the second semifinal in 38.67 seconds with the United States second in 38.93.

Asian Football Confederation general secretary Peter Velappan listens to a query during a press conference in Kuala Lumpur yesterday. The AFC official announced that Asia could still boycott the 2002 World Cup if the row over berth allocation was not resolved.

AFC won't flinch

KUALA LUMPUR, July 29: The Asian Football Confederation (AFC) might still boycott the World Cup in 2002 if FIFA fails to resolve a dispute over the number of places for Asia, AFC secretary-general Peter Velappan said Thursday.

Asian delegates walked out of a FIFA congress earlier this month after being awarded four places at the tournament in Japan and South Korea and offered one play-off chance against a European side. They want five automatic places.

"The five seats are our rights but we are open to all kinds of options," Velappan told a news conference in the Malaysian capital, noting that the FIFA executive committee was meeting in Zurich on September 1 and 2.

"If we can solve the problem then by whatever means, the boycott does not arise. If there is an impasse (the AFC) extraordinary congress must decide thereafter," he said, referring to a congress in Kuala Lumpur on October 10.

Velappan reiterated that Asia is compelled to boycott the World Cup 2002 as FIFA had not acceded to the AFC's request for three seats plus two for hosts Japan and South Korea for its 43 national associations.

At the same time, the AFC chief said: "We fully reaffirm our support for Japan and Korea to host the World Cup."

Kimutai going after Coe

MADRID, July 29: Kenyan Japheth Kimutai will become the latest man to attempt Sebastian Coe's 18-year-old world record for 1,000 metres when he races in the Stockholm Grand Prix on Friday night, reports Reuters.

Coe's mark of two minutes 12.18 seconds is the longest standing official world record, although the 1,000 is not a championship event, and defied all attempts since it was set in Oslo on July 11, 1981.

Various athletics luminaries, including Steve Cram and Nouredine Morceli who were both world record holders over 1,500 and the mile, have tried, come close, but failed.

Earlier this month in Nice the latest aspirant, Kimutai's compatriot Noah Ngeny, ran the second fastest time ever of 2:12.66.

So why does last year's undisputed world number one over 800 metres, despite having only just turned 20, think he can catch up his first world record to the senior ranks and succeed where others have fallen short?

"I have been preparing for this race for five months. My agent James Templeton reached an agreement with the Stockholm organisers at the start of the year to run the 1,000 metres had this been on my racing programme ever since," Kimutai said in a telephone interview from his training camp in Tübingen, Germany.

"Coe's world record has stood a long time and I'll be very, very happy if I beat it. Of course I can't promise anything but if the conditions are good and I feel good then maybe I can get close," he added.

Kimutai was an infant when Coe was set his clutch of world records in the summer of 1981 and has never met the man he is trying to oust from the record books. Each of Coe's other records has since been surpassed.

"However I know what a big name he was. I've seen film of him running and it would be a great achievement to go faster than him."

Templeton, who also advises Kimutai on his training when the runner is at his German summer base around 50 kms from Stuttgart, suggested that his man might be the one to beat the record because he is different from the rest.

"Nobody has really chased it when they have been in top 800 shape. Neither Wilson Kipketer (the current 800 world record holder) -- or Billy Knochellah (the 1987 and 1991 world 800 gold medalist) when he was at his peak -- have had a go", Templeton said.

"It has usually been out-and-out milers who have chased after the record. But you also have to remember that Coe has always considered it one of his best records."

Kimutai returned from a three-week training stint in his native country on Monday.

having eschewed the financial inducements of the Grand Prix circuit for most of the past month.

He returned home partly to tune up for Friday's outing but more importantly to sharpen up for the world championships in Seville next month.

Barring injuries or a dramatic loss of form, he will arrive in Spain as the joint favourite for the 800 along with the current world champion Wilson Kipketer.

Going back to Kenya was really beneficial. I did some good preparation for Seville there, more speed work. It's too long to be running in European meetings all through June, July and August," Kimutai commented.

Jayasinghe can run in World C'ships

LAHTI, Finland, July 29: Controversial sprinter Susanthika Jayasinghe, who tested positive for a banned steroid last year, is free to compete in the World Championships in Seville next month, the International Amateur Athletics Federation (IAAF) said here on Thursday, reports AFP.

IAAF spokesman Giorgio Reineri said that because Jayasinghe's doping case could not be reviewed before the World Championships in Spain between August 21-29, she was free to compete in the event.

The 24-year-old Sri Lankan was immediately suspended after testing positive for a banned steroid last year, but in August, a Sri Lankan appeals panel cleared her of drug use.

The IAAF, however, was unhappy with the panel's decision and recommended a two-year ban be imposed and has set up a new board to reopen the case.

Jayasinghe will compete in the 200m event -- in which she won silver two years ago to grab international attention as Asia's fastest woman.
