Child vendors live with dignity on DU campus

They had spent years begging in the city streets for their livelihoods. Now some 60 street urchins vend chocolates on the Dhaka University campus to support their families, reports UNB.

Police said the on duty Navy personnel challenged a trawler and nabbed Shahidulla Akhand, Nanna Howlader, Modasser Hossain, Litu Khan, Lutfar Rahman, Jahangir and Emadul Huque, with the goods.

They used to beg money from students. Now these boys run after them to sell a chocolate or a chewing-gum.

One of these boys is Jane Alam. The six-year-old boy has been selling chocolates on the campus for the last 10 months. "We have come to Dhaka to stay," said Alam replying to a question. Alam, whose father died when he was only one-month-old, earns up to Tk 25-30 a day selling chocolates.

His mother Nakbanu, who came to the campus to take him back home at Nimgoli, said Alam is the youngest among her four children. He started vending on the campus with chocolates worth only Tk 20. He roams around the campus throughout the day and goes back home with his mother in the evening.

Alam is only one of the many young children on the campus. Their names include Faizul, Sohel, Mosharraf, Hosain, Rubel, Monjil, Mashuk, Alamgir, Sagar, Nayek, Abu Tahir, Liaquat, Monir, Mohammad Ibrahim, Mamun, Rafiq, Mannan, Mostafa Kamal.
