GCO holds rally on DU campus

By DU Correspondent
Gananatrick Chhatra Okiya (GCO) yesterday brought out a procession and held a rally on the Dhaka University campus to drum up support for the student strike at all of the universities of the country on Wednesday.

GCO, a conglomeration of some left-leaning student organisations, called for the strike in protest of police attack on the agitating students of Jahangirnagar University (JU) on October 2 and to press home their various demands, including immediate resumption of the JU classes and cancellation of the increased admission fees at JU.

The demands also included resumption of bus service at Chittagong University, making the residential halls of Rajshahi University free from Shibir activists, disclosure of identity of 60 enlisted terrorists on DU campus, formation of a complaint cell to handle and resist harassment of female students, more government allocation in the university sector and anti-student and education conspiracy of 11 vice chancellors.

Orientation Course in South Asian Peace Studies

The Peace Studies Programme at South Asia Forum for Human Rights (SAFHR) offers a fifteen-day orientation course (in English) in Kathmandu, Nepal, from 7-21 February 2000 for peace and human rights activists, media persons, scholars in peace studies and diplomats involved in policies of conflict resolution. The course will include examination of themes such as peace as value in South Asian cultures, traditions of conflict resolution, civil society in peace process in South Asia, refugee and minority rights, sharing and common management of scarce resources, economics of war and peace, women in peace, and evolutions in the notion of rights and peace. Registration fee for South Asian participants is US $100 (or its equivalent in Nepali rupee) and participants from outside the region US $250 (or its equivalent in Nepali rupee). SAFHR will provide board, lodging and other expenses for the selected candidates. Travel grant is available for limited number of candidates for which they will have to apply separately. Women, members of minority communities and refugees are particularly encouraged to apply. Applications must reach Peace Studies Desk in the South Asia Forum for Human Rights (GPO Box 12855, Kathmandu, Nepal, Fax: 977-1-527852, E-mail: south@safhr.wlink.com.np) by November 15, 1999. Application will have to be supported by full particulars, 500 words summary of the relevance of the course to the work of the participant, and names of two referees whose recommendations should reach independently SAFHR peace studies desk by November 15, 1999. The application must include all necessary details such as language skill, experience and nature of current work.
