RSF, CPJ condemn police attack on photojournalists in Dhaka

By Staff Correspondent

Two international journalist bodies, Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) and Reporters Sans Frontières (RSF), in separate statements expressed their concern over the recent police attacks on photojournalists in Bangladesh.

CPJ in a faxed statement to Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina expressed its deep concern over the brutal assaults on the photojournalists in Dhaka. It said that it was dismayed by the harsh tactics employed by the Bangladesh police to suppress the coverage of their own conduct during a political demonstration. CPJ asked the prime minister to order an enquiry into Friday's attack on press photographers and to ensure that the officers found guilty of assaulting journalists are held accountable for their actions.

RSF in a letter to the Home Minister Mohammad Nasim protested the attacks and asked him to 'punish those responsible for the attacks.' It also called on the home minister to ask riot police and political parties to respect the rights of journalists and media workers to cover meetings and demonstrations safely. RSF reminded the home minister that 'press freedom also depends on journalists' safety being guaranteed.'
