Moments from History

Photography Exhibition of David H Wells on relationship between the Israelis and Palestinians

By Saima Islam

TIME has a mysterious kindness: it gives back the moments it has taken through memories. Nothing catches moments better than a photographer's camera. Every picture freezes a moment and with time it has a story of its own to tell. The photographs of David H Wells tell the stories of the common people who have been caught up in a historical conflict for half a century.

A 10-day long photography exhibition by the American photographer, David H Wells opened at the Drik Gallery from November 19. The exhibition will continue till November 28, everyday from 3pm to 8pm. Fauzul Karim Tara Bhai, Executive Editor - The Daily Star, inaugurated the exhibition.

Pathshala, the South Asian Institute of Photography sponsored the exhibition. David H Wells is visiting Pathshala to conduct a workshop at Pathshala.

David is freelancing editorial photography on different assignments in North America, Europe, Middle East, and Asia while contributing to Geo Magazine, Life Magazine, National Geographic, Newsweek, Times and New York Times.

The exhibition focuses on the relationship between Israelis and Palestinians in the Middle East. Though the relationship between the two is largely defined by the violent climate that surrounds them, David tries to capture a whole new dimension of their relationship. "I went to Middle East to cover many events over the years but somehow I felt there is more to them than mere conflicts and political issues which are not coming out in the stories. So I took up the project to show the day to day relationship of these people," said David responding to what interested him in this subject.

This work had started in 1990, before the start of the peace process between Israelis and the Palestinians. The project was supported by a fellowship from the programme of research and writing on international peace and co-operation of the MacArthur Foundation.

The show tries to bring forth three vital aspects of Israeli and Palestinian relationships—conflict, co-existence and co-operation.

On the surface their relationships are perceived in context of violence but these people live side by side and share the same physical environment. It has been going on for a long time.

There are lots of efforts to live together, there are sharing, helping, also harassing and of course misunderstanding. David's pictures successfully bring these angles into focus.

The pictures which tell the story of nostalgia and struggle brilliantly are: A Palestinian, working as a housekeeper in a Jewish home. An Palestinian laborer, waits, tools in hand to be hired by Jewish builders to do construction work, building Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Two Palestinian women ponder the construction of a Jewish settlement right next to their long time family home.

A crowd of Palestinians throwing stones at Israeli soldiers shows the conflict in their relationship, which is balanced by their pictures of co-existence like, the Palestinians and Israelis shopping side by side in a market or sharing the same plaza. There are more to the peace process than the political efforts, which are captured in the pictures like Palestinians and Israelis coming together to talk and try to understand each other at an organized dialogue group.

The most interesting factor of the exhibition is the sequence in which David has organized his works; there is a picture where an Israeli soldier is helping an old Palestinian, which is followed by a Palestinian boy being harassed by an Israeli soldier.

The exhibition also shows another dimension of their relationship where innocence and compassion is being highlighted; the children share friendly bond without any knowledge of enmity and blind Palestinians and Israelis come together, to study and socialize regardless of politics. Nothing projects the growth of their relationship better than the picture where Palestinians and Israelis stand together demonstrating for peace.

The photographs when seen collectively put forward the hidden history behind the long political battle between these two groups of people. The exhibition brings out the truth that the peace process is built upon the fact that the two people can interact in ways other than only in violence. The arrival of the Palestinian Authority and the inevitable birth of a Palestinian state will be the outward manifestations of the trust that will slowly build between these two previously warring peoples.

"I believe the peace accord would do better if it were left to the common people," stated David.

There are more to history than political facts, there are the stories of sufferings, joy, struggle, and hope for the future and David's exhibition surely emphasizes on these human aspects of the story.
