Pak military ruler must solve energy tariff row: Analysts

KARACHI, Nov 21: If Pakistan's military ruler General Pervez Musharraf wants to get to grips with his country's struggling economy he must first solve a bitter energy industry tariff row, analysts say, reports AFP. Pakistan's Independent Power Producers have been locked in a long-running dispute with the government over energy prices which analysts say could upset the country's entire financial structure.

In 1997 former prime minister Nawaz Sharif alleged exorbitant rates had been corruptly agreed with the previous government. Foreign and domestic power investors denied the charges but the dispute rages on. Sharif was ousted by army coup on October 12. "The present government has to deal with a legacy that has been the cause of sour rela-

A total 16 power projects, seven of which are still being built, will generate more than 3,580 megawatts of electricity. Investors from the United States, Britain, Japan, Saudi Arabia and other nations, have poured in 5.2 billion dollars in investment.

Pakistan's new finance minister Shaukat Aziz has promised to make a resolution of the dispute a priority.

Under Sharif negotiations for voluntary tariff reductions quickly became mired in corruption charges and contract disputes.

"In the last three to four years the previous government failed to solve IPPs issue," said Amjad Malik, an energy consultant who has worked with World Bank and Asian Development Bank.

"It is not the final decision, but he delaying tactics which were the main concern for IPPs. and their project costs have risen 12 to 16 per cent," he said. Investors have brought international pressure on Pakistan. Earlier this month a World Bank mission came to Karachi for talks on the problem, which has damaged the foreign investment climate in Pakistan.

"The IPP saga in Pakistan is still an endless sea of troubles. The military rulers have to cover a lot to deal with the issue without further shattering investor confidence," Malik said.

"It is not easy to win back donors' confidence over IPPs because in the last three years the previous government gave several deadlines for a solution to be found but nothing has worked," he said.

Sources at the Ministry of Water and Power said the new military regime has asked them to speed up talks with the power firms and the World Bank.

The World Bank has said a 500-million-dollar loan for the state-owned Water and Power Development Authority, which buys the electricity from the producers, will stay on hold until a deal is reached

Before the row broke out power-starved Pakistan had done well to attract foreign energy investors despite the country's power credit ratings. By 1996, when the private sector had been open just 18 months, the World Bank had made commitments of close to 1.2 billion dollars in loans and guarantees to the country. In addition the Asian Development Bank has linked 250 million dollars in aid to an early solution of the problem.

Sonia to support any govt reform effort

NEW DELHI, Nov 21: Indian opposition leader Sonia Gandhi said on Sunday her Congress party will back the government in any effort to speed up economic reforms that should benefit the poor, says AP.

"On the question of economic reforms our approach to the government will be constructive and positive." Mrs. Gandhi said in a speech at an annual conference of Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry, one of the three main trade bodies in the country.

It was her first speech to Indian businessmen after she won her first parliamentary election last month and was chosen leader of the opposition in the Lok Sabha, the lower house of Indian parliament.

She said India will have to take "more corrective steps" to if it were to achieve the targeted growth rate of 6 to 8 per cent. She did not explain what steps it should take.

She said faster growth depends on economic reforms, strong infrastructure and redefining the role of the government in every sector.

Move to drive business in new millennium

ASEAN expected to adopt IT strategy this week

SINGAPORE, Nov 21: With the worst post-war financial crisis now behind them, South east Asian leaders this week will consider ambitious plans for an information technology (IT) grid across the region, reports AFP.

They are expected to endorse so-called "e-ASEAN" initiative that will lay the ground-work for the region to use IT. particularly the Internet, to drive businesses in the new millennium, officials said.

The ultimate aim is to support electronic cross-border applications and services within Southeast Asia, and between the region and its key trading partners. A task force of top private and government officials will draw up for the ASEAN leaders a blueprint covering the legal, social and economic aspects of carving out an ASEAN "e-space" in the fast-moving world of information technology, officials familiar with the plans said. The IT initiative will complement plans by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to free trade and investment in the region and make it more competitive for foreign investors. "Information technology will feature very much in our discussion this time," said Singapore Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong, who is expected to lead the IT deliberations at the ASEAN informal summit in Manila. Singapore is the most technologically advanced member of ASEAN, which also includes Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, the Philippines, Thailand and Vietnam.

According to a meeting pro-gramme, the ASBAN leaders will hold an unprecedented dialogue with global IT gurus in the Philippine capital on November 28 to discuss the potential for IT growth in the region.

Goh, speaking to Philippine editors here last month. likened the e-ASEAN plan to a key "building block" for the re-
