Poetry Comes Alive at The Poetry Festival

National Poetry Festival Opens Amid Fanfare

By Cultural Correspondent

THE appeal of poetry is universal, and for the Bangalis poetry is a magic potion that throughout the ages has inspired the nation in all its national movements and great historic occasions. The amount of emotion and ecstasy surrounding the two-day annual poetry festival which is being held in February coinciding the month of our national glory is a testament to our passion for poetry.

As usual organized by the National Poetry Council, the poetry festival, is taking place at its traditional venue, on the campus of the Dhaka University.

Though the festival was scheduled to be inaugurated by the pre-eminent poet of the country Shamsur Rahman in absence the opening was performed by National Professor Kabir Chowdhury who hoisted the national flag in the melody of the national anthem. But the ailing poet, being compelled by the inclination he feels to the festival, came to the spot and performed the inauguration once again.

"Let poetry triumph in the light of the mother tongue" — is the slogan of the on-going festival. Poets, both young and old, from home and abroad arrived at the centre to participate in the festival. Among the most prominent poets were Shamsur Rahman, Nirmalendu Gunn, Rafiqul Azad, Rafiqullah Khan, Saiful Gangopadhyaya, Samarendra Sengupta, Drubajyoti Bandopadhyaya, Chandrakanta Muring, Joydev Basu, Mandakrantra Sen, Shebonti Ghosh, Ratul Devbormon, Stephen Muldoon.

The artists singing at the National Poetry Festival row pointing at the fact that "the nation is now in the grip of fundamentalists and religious fanatics." He called upon the poets to come forward spontaneously to rescue the country from these dark forces.

Reading out the declaration, Sayed Shamsul Haque said that something novel and fresh should be initiated in every sector so that "the world may become a place more enriched, peaceful, and developed in every field".

About poetry Haque observed "Poetry assumes the subtlest expressions and remote signals of language and desires." He concluded by expressing his optimism that "Let every corner of the world be illuminated in the light of poetry." Samudra Gupta, the joint-convenor of the festival, in his address, said in his usual optimistic note, "The poetry festival, surmounting many obstacles, has stepped into its 14th year, and now we can announce with considerable confidence that it will make its centenary as smoothly as it is enjoying its present success in our cultural firmament."

"In spite of the despondency, frustration, uncertainty, and grief that exist in the society, there is no cause for succumbing to these as long as poets live," concluded Samudra

Gupta. Highlighting the recognition of the 21st February as the International Mother Language Day, the convener of the National Poetry Festival Council-2000 Rabul Hussain said, "poetry is a constant companion to men in both well and woe. As long as persecution, maltreatment, despicable intentions, poverty, starvation, anti-democratic activities exist in the national, social and personal life, poetry will work as the sorce of salvation." He also expresses the hope that the festival will one day proclaim itself as an internationally celebrated one. The Joint-Secretary of the Council, Mohammad Samad said, "The poets are always conscious of the sovereignty of the motherland and also of dreams and aspirations of her people". The president of the council Belal Chowdhury said, "The zeal and enthusiasm that is observed surrounding this memorial poetry festival is rare in the whole world."

Beside these, some funny and laughter-inspiring objects of life, bond between individuals, dreams, aspirations etc had made room in some of the poems. One, occupying a seat in the festival, while listening to the recitation, not only enjoys the mellifluous language replete with rich imagery, but also knows about the numerous ways of looking at a thing, at life from various perspectives. The fluctuation in tone and mood at the recitation creates a kind of unidentified sensation within. One's attention is easily arrested by the heart-touching melody and rhythms of composed words.

Rickshaw Painting in A New Light

Alinoor's exhibition on Rickshaw Painting begins from February 4 at the Alliance Francaise de Dhaka

By Cultural Correspondent

Born in 1939 in Dinajpur, Alinoor started his painting life in 1956. His father was a government officer and his mother was taking care of his four sisters and four brothers. When in secondary school until class 9, he always had the best mark in drawing. He developed his talent alone, until he met his master, Gulam, in Dhaka at twenty years old. His master who has passed away, was a banner painter and film decorator. Alinoor came to rickshaw, bus, truck and babytaxi painting later to make a living when a rickshaw mistri discovered him. Alinoor is married (1965) and has 2 sons and 3 daughters. Manju, his son and Nasima, his daughter are continuing the rickshaw painting job. He was the first to introduce the format of the rickshaw plates, red on each side of the painting with the mistri name. His favourites are village and city scenes. He was one of the five masters that painted rickshaw plates before the independence of the country. It is the reason why the liberation scenes depicting the liberation scenes and the father of the nation Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman are so excellent. If it was not for the sake of bringing resources to his family, Alinoor would spend his time as a full-time painter rather than painting series of rickshaw plates; painting is his passion. Asked, what he will do when rickshaw will be phased out, he says that he has still some orders. But he expects that he will be able to sell some orders. But he expects that he will be able to sell his painting by doing exhibitions. Alliance Francaise de Dhaka discovered him when doing its research on rickshaw painting. Alinoor was the first to perceive the interest in this project and has been very instrumental in giving it momentum.
