

Christina Aguilera

Christina Aguilera has lately become a breeding ground for today's pop idols. There she showed off her beyond excellent voice with dance moves, and convincing acting skills. She made a good friend, Britney Spears whom she is often compared to because Britney was famous first, but Christina has a different style of music. When her record label's cancel she went to Japan and recorded a duet with a well-known pop star there, Keizo Nakanishi. She made an appearance in the music video and she got to tour with him. She returned to America in the beginning of 1998 and her manager saw her for an opportunity to record a song called "Reflection" for the upcoming Disney film, "Mulan". She recorded a demo of her singing "I wanna run to You" by Whitney Houston and Disney just loved it and believed she was up for the challenges of this rangy ballad. So she recorded the song and it became a big hit. The critics too liked it and gave it a Golden Globe nominee for best song in a picture. After the success of "Reflection" RCA signed her to a record contract. Her manager, Evan Rosgers, David Frank and Steve Kipner helped her to put her feelings in to good lyrics and came up with her debut album, "Christina Aguilera". The album features a chart climbing anthem "Genie in a Bottle". Her her career is now in full-speed with her music video being on the top at TRL and dj's loving her groovy song. Because of her acting experience on MMC and dazzling that Christina looks it is no surprise is already being asked to do acting roles. But Christina wants to focus on her singing and then later get a little in front of the camera action. A favorite of Christina's is "I turn to You" a song which she will also be recording in Spanish because of her Spanish origin.

By Ruhbayna Chowdhury

Hi! I'm Ruhbayna and I'm your guide through this emotional, fun filled and heartbreaking story. This story is about three of my closest pals and me, about our friendship, which has managed to stay alive through the cruellest storms of life and even in the lovely summers of life. Let me introduce you to the crew. They are Saba, Sara and Sanam. Saba is a sweetie, loves to joke around, fun loving, and never wants to waste time and the friendliest girl in Chittagong. Sara is also a sweetie but her mood can fluctuate, she's jolly, pretty and nice. Sanam is a sweetie too, very straightforward; she cares a whole lot about her image in the society but she's lovely. And me, Ruhbayna, am very sensitive, softhearted and a jolly person. We were pals from Kg 1, and now we're all twenty but still are close friends. Like most friends we once dreamed of forming a musical band, opening a newspaper, making a house of our own, where only four of us will live, and lots of other stuffs. None of us were over matured for our age but we had different opinions and values. Yet we were the perfect fours to form the coolest gang. We were all from good, respectable table family, we were named the "Cool girls" in school; ours was always the group, which was invited in all the parties held by our classmates. We were always there for each other. When Saba thought that her father couldn't earn enough money to feed them, just because he wouldn't buy her an ice cream in the winter, we were all out selling our old clothes to help her. Then there was a time when I thought that I was not my parents' child, but some beggar's, just because my mom said I was becoming as skinny as a beggar. All my friends asked their servants to find out about a family who lost their daughter six years ago. If there were any they should come to my house. The next day, we had a line of people standing in front of my house. When Saba's and my parents found about the two incidents, they had a good laugh. Sara used to be tenacious, so one day when she got mad she decided to run away. She did run away up to her front lawn. Sanam loves to cook. When she was little, she decided to cook. She did cook but burned half of the kitchen curtains. When we look back we laugh at what we did and understand how silly we were. But hey you can't blame us we were just kids. But when matters arose like crushes it was another story altogether. How we'd tease each other and none of us would mind because actually all of us liked being teased. Now we look back at it and smile how sweet and tense those moments were. So many memories just makes me want to go back to those days. But, now we are all away from each other for higher studies. But we write to each other often, but that is not the same as talking to each other, meeting each other, going shopping together, going to parties together and having fun because Saba is in America, Sara is in England, Sanam is in Singapore and I'm in Australia. We see each other rarely. But I know one day we'll be together and with that hope I still keep in touch. Our friendship is very special thing to us all, it has bonded us forever. We tend to guard it but mistakes have happened. We let a trouble in. It is hard to get rid of it but we're trying but no matter what we were there for each other. We all shared the laughter and we all faced the pain together. We still dream but one dream we all share is to stay together as long as possible. This year has been good and bad for us. Let us hope the next year will be better. It should be since it's a New Year, a millennium, a century and a new decade.
