A Synthesis of Value and Beauty

3rd solo exhibition of hand painted pottery and home textiles by Shahrukh Shahid is being held at the Alliance Française de Dhaka

By Saima Islam

HE English writer john that the most beautiful things in the world are the most useless; peacocks and lilies for instance". We have come a long way from Ruskin's time. Now a days people tend to look for splendour in almost everything, from the little match box to the apartments. from a water glass to home furnishing line. People are interested in the aesthetic appeal as well as the quality of for the images of Mughal the products they want to buy.

This notion has inspired paintings. many designers to launch their solo exhibition, 'Dream Collection'. Indeed one would get the feeling of being transported to a home textile mainly features and colour entering the exhibition hall at the Alliance Francaise de Dhaka. Like his 1994 and 1995 col-Ruskin said, "Remember lection, Sharukh's latest exhibition has also drawn its inspiture painting and Jamini Ray's home. style. "I have developed a feeling that Mughal art is not only full his cushion covers by using emof rich colour and design but also of unique style of expression. Jamini Ray's art blends Bengal folk flavour and 'Kalighat is an example of unique artistic achievement," thus the artist justifies his fascination miniatures and Jamini Ray's

Indeed Sharukh's art works capture the essence of the rich, lush life of the Mughal era: the emperor surrounded by the courtiers, the beautiful Mughal ladies dressed in vibrant colours, waiting in the veranda of the castle overlooking the horizon, a battle scene where the elephants are the royal carriers, the prince and the princesses enjoying the solitude, the images go on and on.

To balance this majestic Sharukh Shahid who is with theme, the artist brought out the Henry's Heritage, a leading his collection inspired by the boutique, has already made his 'Kalighat' and the Bengali folk mark as a designer. The flavour. In this collection the figures are as important as the with his imaginative touch that colours. The eyes, the pattern finds its way to the dress line, on the side of the women's saris, pottery, home furnishing mate- the interesting facial expressions, some figures of animals, Sharukh has titled his 3rd all brings out the essential smell of the old Bengal.

Sharukh's collection of dream like world of grandeur cushion covers and drapes. The artist has experimented with the shape as well as the colour of the cushion covers. Pumpkin shaped, heart shaped, shell shaped or the square shaped cushion covers will definitely ration from the Mughal minia- bring a touch of variety in one's

Sharukh has added charm to broidery, ribbon, block, appliqué and so on. He has brought a collection that includes colour as well as beige or neutral colours that may go with different collections. He is emphasising more on mix and match this time as this gives the clients to use their own imagination. "I always keep in mind what my clientele demands from my work and that inspires me to create something that will at the same time be of their use and satisfy mine as well as their thirst for beauty."

said Sharukh.

The artist does not like to over do with his creation. He likes to keep it simple and understated that would appeal everybody

Sharukh's collections of drapes are eye-catching. Those can be used as curtains or can be used as wall hanging or partition and what not. One of his drapes is made up of bright 'ellow and green. If that is kept in a room that would light up a gloomy corner even on a rainy day, it brings the garden inside.

The speciality of Sharuk's work is its simplicity. One does not need a room full of fancy things to make a room look appealing, instead by mixing and matching some cushions, putting one or two pots here and there, some wrought iron stands and some picture of the loved ones, and there you go, your own cosy corner is ready.

The prices of the pottery ranges between taka 80 to 3500 and the cushions are between taka 280 to 380.

Minister of State for Land

Alhaj Rashed Mosharraf inaugurated the exhibition and volves around a lower middle France LASNIER, Director of Alliance Française de Dhaka were present as the special guests at the inaugural. The exhibition will remain open everyday till March 10 from 3.00pm to 8.00pm.
