Khasru stresses transparency in administration

Law, Justice and Parliamentary Affairs Minister Abdul Matin Khasru has said transparency and accountability in administration is a precondition for the development of the country, reports BSS.

"We lack enough qualified and efficient managers. Shortage of good managers is one of the main barriers for proper management of the huge human resources in the country," he said while distributing certificates among the participants of a training course on Thursday.

The course was organised by Financial Management Academy Project for the government officers of different ranks.

An expert administrator utilizes the tax money and revenues for the maximum welfare of the people, the minister said and emphasised the need for strengthening of public audit system in this regard.

The minister said the present administration would have to be equipped with modern technology, knowledge and information to check corruption and crimes.

The function was addressed, among others, by Director General of the Financial Management Academy Mahmud Hassan Mansur.
