Art Pieces That Are Themes for Dreams

An auspicious beginning for a self-taught artist

By Fayza Haq

As a self-taught artist presenting many themes and techniques, Rashidul Islam Khan's recent exhibition at the Drik gallery gave art lovers a variety of paintings at reasonable prices. A student of computer science at IUB (Independent University, Bangladesh), he has won six prizes for his art work as a student at Jhenidah Cadet College. The paintings are not only picturesque and eye-catching but are also thought-provoking, with often a poignant story behind each painting or pastel sketch. True the TV painting did not capture the best works by Rashid, but considering that Drik's Dr Shahidul Alam will not have any old collection for display, and also keeping in mind that Rafiqun Nabi felt that the young artist had done a good job, one felt compelled to give Rashid's work at least a quick and cursory glance. Within that little time one could detect powerful strokes and subtle combinations of colours and lines, which have proved to win the hearts of Dhaka art gallery visitors, going by the promising sale. Sure the art pieces harked back to the works of better known artists, but considering his youth and the variety of work, the exhibit was a success.

Rashid's Birth of Bangladesh done in mixed media, feature a Bangladeshi freedom fighters. This being his favourite painting for the gravity of the patriotic feelings behind the work. This brought in barely clad figures with powerful muscles seen drawing the Bangladeshi original flag with the golden map of the country set off by the ruby red and grass green background behind that is the ragged Pakistani flag with its crescent and a black backdrop in the left to balance the composition. The salmon pink and gray sky along with traces of land were also included.

Sight of a Mind brought in

Untitled Force-2, pastel

Wall with Creepers, pen and ink

an idyllic creation from the village area, complete with clouds in the sky, trees in the background of the houses and their reflection on the water in front. The scraps of rug pieces and reject cloth that formed the roof tops and walls of the houses went well with the swift oil strokes that delineated the sky, trees and the rest of the peaceful scenario. Rashid has been to the countryside in his holidays, specially in his childhood and these scenes are dug out from the memories of those contented years of peace and harmony.

The same thing was scene in 'Reminiscence-1' which was a mixed media presenting houses, boats and figures taken from the rural area so that the pouring royal blue cascading from the top to the centre, the interlacing vermilion used and the beige of the land and sky held up the sketched in figures. Vaster colour, pastel, pen, marker and a strip of scrap cloth completed the painting. Yes, the colours were loud but the final impact as regards the imagery was a quick escape from the stultifying existence of our metropolitan existence.

Bringing in the figure of a "baul" is quite interesting in Rashid's 'Origin' done in water-colour and pen and ink. The soft washes and the subtle lines in a burst of orange, green and mauve, offset by a pale blue ground and a beige background proved beyond doubt that here was an artist who treasured his heritage.

Deviating from scenes and sketches of the countryside was Character which was an oil on canvas painting with the geometrical presentation of three faces with asymmetrical and interesting presentation of two men and a woman, with the faces appearing like some black, burnt sienna and beige mask, mounted on a background of sweeps of gold, white and brown waves and dots. One waited and examined the interesting experiment with simple but dramatic strokes.

Another work termed Abandoned was a pen and ink creation which brought in creepers on an old brick wall. The startling emerald green, with brave splashes of black and the fine pen work to bring in the details of the bark, roots and the aging wall behind was enough testimony to his control of the medium.

The mixed media abstract work called Lines had utilized green and black pen strokes and had brought in a simple but fascinating floral motif that had originated from the marks left behind by a tea-cup.

The artist's venture in pencil in pieces like Untitled Force-3 which presented forms that were a mixture of a cuddly rabbit and a cute cat was done for variation, letting the mind go a riot. Similarly, Untitled Force, in pastel, with swift brown strokes, with additions of black outline and hints of carmine and jade strokes for the grass was again a promising and powerful delineation of the countryside in Khulna. In the same way, Motion-2, yet another swiftly done pencil sketch of a bullock was presented in a sophisticated manner.

One returns from Rashid's first solo exhibition with a "taste of honey" and that refreshes one's mind.
