N 19 May 2000 a disgruntled Fijian business-

and some gunmen with Kalashnikov assault rifles and pistols entered Fiji's Parliament

come the Prime Minister of Fiji.

His forefathers' village, Bahu-labourers by the British between 1879 and 1916 to work

800,000, and the indigenous Fi-

cent. George Speight, who him-

Sitiveni Ligamamada Rabuka.

Party-National Federation Party

coalition defeated Ratu Sir

Party in the general elections.

Bayadra, an ethnic Fijian, was sworn in as Prime Minister of an ethnic Indian-dominated protests from many indigenous

Fijians who called for ethnic Fi-

Constitution and appointed

Chief. After some resistance.

Lt-Colonel Rabuka staged his second coup in October 1987.

and formally abrogated the 1970 Constitution by issuing a decree. In July 1990 Rabuka himself the Commander-in-

man, George Speight

=FOCUS

Coup in Fiji and the Indian Rulers

How can the BJP-led ruling NDA coalition in India ask the coup leaders in Fiji to reinstate the Chaudhry-led government? How can they ask the chauvinists in Fiji not to amend the non-discriminatory Constitution of Fiji? How the Indian ruling parties can ask the Fijians not to do things that they themselves want to do?

by Dr Ram Dulal Bhowmick

complex in the capital Suva. Speight along with his gunmen stormed the chamber of the parliament building where the Frime Minister Mahendra approved a new constitution Chaudhry was having a meeting giving ethnic Fijians political with his Cabinet ministers. He supremacy. Rabuka became held a gun to Chaudhry's head the Prime Minister after his Soand took the Prime Minister qosoqo ni Vakavulewa ni Taukei and his Cabinet colleagues (SVT) party, backed by the hostage. He also told Chaudhry traditional Chiefs of the indigethat he was taking over as nous Fijians, captured most of Prime Minister. Thus the third the parliamentary seats. But, coup in the history of Fiji took later on, the isolation by the inplace. And, this time it was so ternational community coupled easy a coup that, according to with the economic morass Fiji an Indian weekly, "as a coup. was getting into forced Rabuka this may probably go down as to revert to multi-ethnic parliaone of the easiest in the world". mentary democracy. Mahendra Chaudhry was In 1997 Rabuka and Jai the first ethnic Indian to be-

Ram Reddy, the leader of the then dominant ethnic Indian majalapura, is in India's Harvana state. Fijians of Indian origin, or Indo-Fijians, were originally brought to Fiji as on the sugar plantations. They now constitute about 44 per cent of Fiji's total population of tution would lead to a power- stitution is already abrogated by jians constitute about 50 per SVT of Rabuka and NFP of self is of mixed ethnic parentage with a European name, said he Reddy in the next parliamentary elections. But the next paris for political supremacy of the indigenous Fijians and had liamentary elections held under the new Constitution in May aimed power on behalf of all 1999 generated quite different results. In the elections, both The present coup is in many SVT and NFP were dumped by ways similar and related to the earlier two coups in 1987, both the voters, and a three-party coalition headed by the Fiji of which were led by Lt-Colonel Labour Party won 70 per cent In April 1987 the Fiji Labour of the seats. Mahendra Chaudhry, the leader of the Fiji Labour Party and the Finance Minister in the short-lived 1987 Kamisese Mara's ruling Alliance government, was sworn in as Coalition leader Dr Timoci Fiji's first Prime Minister of Indian origin. When in May 2000 Chaudhry-led government was celebrating its first anniversary that heralded the return of coalition government, prompting their multi-ethnic rule, a protest march of 10,000 ethnic Fijians against Chaudhry's "arrogant jian political supremacy. In just rule" was organised. While the the next month, on 14 May. Ltmarch was taking place, George Colonel Rabuka staged Fiji's Speight with his armed men first coup by marching into the stormed the Parliament and Parliament. He suspended the staged the coup. It is well known that George Speight had personal grudges against Mahendra Chaudhry. Agriculture Minister Poseci Bune, on order from Chaudhry, sacked Speight from his post as the chairman of the public sector Fiji Pine board and as the chief executive of Fiji Hardwood Corporation on charges of corruption and mismanagement involving millions of dollars. It is reported that Speight was also being further investigated for these charges. (Earlier in 1999. Speight was dismissed by a British insurance company for dishonesty.) Nonetheless, it cannot be said that Speight's personal grudges against Chaudhry were the main reason behind the coup; the grudges may have prompted Speight to take the leadership in coup. There are valid reasons to believe from the political party, the National after-coup role of Rabuka (who Federation Party (NFP), agreed is now the Chairman of the into a compromise Constitution fluential Great Council of Chiefs that would give equal rights to of the ethnic Fijians) and others ethnic Fijians and ethnic Indi- that more influential forces of ans. A new Constitution was ethnic chauvinism are behind approved which agreed on a the coup. These ethnic chauvinmulti-ethnic executive govern- ists fear that they will ultimately ment with 71 seats. Everyone lose their clout in any multihoped then that the new consti- ethnic power sharing. The Consharing arrangement between the Martial Law Commander Commodore Vorege Bainimarama (Bainimarama led the fourth coup seizing power from the President Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara and promulgated the martial law). Now, the process is in motion to change the Constitution again to further restrict Indo-Fijlans' rights. including not allowing any Indo-Fijian to become the country's Prime Minister or other elected key executives.

There are many reasons for India to be concerned by these developments in Fiji. Firstly, ethnic Indians are well established in many developing countries of the world, for example, Malaysia, Singapore, Mauritius, South Africa, Kenya, even in far away Surinam of Africa. They are doing very well in business, and many of them are holding key government posts such as Cabinet Ministers (and, besides Chaudhry of Fiji, more than one of them were Prime Minister in other countries also). Earlier, Idi Amin expelled the ethnic Indians from Uganda on the charge of their supremacy in economy over the indigenous Ugandans. Now, the Fiji episodes may inspire ethnoracial chauvinism in other countries that may target ethnic Indians. Secondly, as a member of the Commonwealth, India shall have to be concerned on ethno-racial discrimination in any Commonwealth country. and additionally when the discriminated people are of Indian origin. Thirdly, these Indo-Filians have many relatives in India who are active through political and social pressure groups in pressurising the Indian government to act against the coup and the discriminatory measures targeting the Indo-Fijians. (However, the possibility of influx of refugees in India from Fiji is quite low. After the 1987 coup, more than 70,000 Indo-Fijians left Fiji, but most of them emigrated to New Zealand, Australia, Canada and USA. This time also India seems not an option.) Moreover, there are many international instances of helping ethnically specifically for the high elective related people in crisis. One recent and prominent example of these is use of his ethnic identify by the US President Bill Clinton (who is an ethnic Irish) in resolving the crisis in Northern Ireland. So, we find that the State of India has legitimate interest in the coup in Fiji, and it also has moral responsibility to stand against the ethno-racial chauvinism targeting the Indo-Fijians. India already sent a high-ranking special envoy from its foreign ministry to Fiji, and is reportedly in close contact with Australia and New Zealand to pressurise Fiji so that the reinstated and the Indo-Fijians are not discriminated against. Now, we have an important question. A very valid one indeed. Though India has legitimate interest and moral responsibility concerning the coup in Fiji, its feelings and activities against this coup are morally justified and internationally credible and acceptable only when it itself believes and practices non-discrimination of its own citizens. Does India itself believe and practice this nondiscrimination? Let us examine.

Chaudhry-led government is

The Constitution of India has a single, uniform category of citizenship - whether by birth, descent, registration or by naturalisation. Anyone havfor an elected office, high or etc. In Articles 15 and 16 of the discriminated against on grounds of religion, race, caste, sex or place of birth is treated as a fundamental right, and citizens irrespective of the manner of acquisition of citizenship. The right to equality in matters relating to "employment or appointment to any office under the State", that is guaranteed by Article 16, is a fundamental right and part of "the basic structure of the Constitution". It cannot be amended or abridged by Parliament; the "basic structure of the Constitution" is inviolable. Again, the India Constitution makes all citizens eligible posts of President, Vice-President and Prime Minister (Articles 58, 66 and 84). But, we cannot equally say that the present Indian ruling coalition parties and their leadership (and, also some influential others in the opposition) are non-discriminatory in their beliefs as well as practices. Consider their "foreigner-cannot be-Prime Minister" stance against the All India Congress (Indira) party president Sonia Gandhi. Before the 1999 parliamentary elections, the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), its parent organisation the Rastriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS), and other parties of the BJP-led National Democratic Alliance (NDA) questioned the "Indianness" and patriotism of Italian-born Sonia Gandhi (a naturalised Indian since 1983). They campaigned vigorously that a person of "foreign origin" should not be the Prime Minister of India. They additionally gave a religious/communal twist to this "foreign origin" issue by terming the elections as that of "Ram Vs Rome". In addition to these parties, even a section of the Congress (Indira) itself, led by former Defense Minister Sharad Pawar and former Parliament Speaker P A Sangma, openly challenged the projection of Sonia Gandhi as the candidate for

Prime Ministership because of her "foreign origin" (Pawar and Sangma were, in effect, expelled present ruling NDA coalition and NIC included in their election manifestoes a promise to amend the Constitution to restrict high elected posts such as the offices of President, Vice-President and Prime Minister to "natural born" citizens of India.

This discriminatory effort, if succeeds, may have other grave consequences. The noted columnist Praful Bidwai Writes: "Once divisions are introduced ing Indian citizenship can run into the notion of citizenship, by whatever criterion, the door is low, by fulfilling certain mini- opened for all other kinds of mum conditions relating to age exclusion : language, religion. ritual purity, education, Constitution, the right not to be "competence". ... Muslims, Christians and Parsis can be pronounced largely "alien" in contrast to Hindus because their religions originated this right is guaranteed to all abroad .... " (Frontline, 18 June 1999.)

Then, what do we find?

Firstly, citizen's right to equality in matters relating to appoint ment to any elected post under the State is guaranteed in the Constitution, both in Fiji and India. Secondly, proponents of chauvinist hypernationalism, both in Fiji (George Speight and his backers) and India (BJP-led ruling NDA coalition, RSS, NIC), demand that no citizen of "foreign origin" should held the high elected posts under the State including that of Prime Minister. Thirdly, these chauvinists, again both in Fiji and India, want to amend their re spective Constitution to the effect that the high posts including that of Prime Minister can not be held by any citizen (of the State) of "foreign origin" Fourthly, while Speight and his backers staged a coup to amend the Constitution in Fiji, BJP-led NDA coalition, RSS and NIC in India want to amend the Constitution through the parliamentary process. That is, for both the groups (in Fiji and India), the end is the same, only the means are different. Fifthly, BJP-led NDA coalition, RSS and NIC are so desperate in preventing any Indian citizen of "foreign origin" to the post of Prime Minister that they even want to amend the inviolable "basic structure of the Constitution" that cannot be amended by the Parliament.

ruling NDA coalition in India ask the coup leaders in Fiji to reinstate the Chaudhry-led government? How can they ask the chauvinists in Fiji not to amend the non-discriminatory Constitution of Fiji? How the Indian ruling parties can ask the Fijians not to do things that they themselves want to do? It is clearly a double standard. And. hypocrisy. No less.

Now, how can the BJP-led

The author is a Ph. D Refrom the party and they formed search Fellow at the Institute of the Nationalist Indian Congress. Bangladesh Studies (IBS). Uni-NICH BJP and its allies in the versity of Rajshahi.

AILING POWER SECTOR

Whither Cure?

The new global marketing strategies predict that the role of the PDB has to be down-graded, with more patronization of the private sector

by A M M Aabad

HE Bangladesh Power Development Board (PDB) A is apparently caught facing a big BMR (not BMRE) problem, with its over-aged and overused generating plants, and the power demand rising steeply over the 1990s. This accelerated demand should have been anticipated officially, through forward planning exercises, resulting in a few confirmed and approved projects of five to ten years' duration. This is a separate exercise from the development of new plants under the private and public sectors. Installing a new plant takes an average of two to three years, excluding the time for negotiation and contract signing period. The new PDB Chairman rightly pointed out that loadshedding and interruptions would be lingering for quite some time, to allow extended periods for overdue maintenance work. One problem in the developing countries is the perpetual shortage of foreign exchange under the current account; and, secondly, the lack of priority to maintenance proposals (inventory control becomes a problem). The bureaucracy has to be more technically minded, so as to reduce the communication gap with the technical departments of the various ministries.

Overhauling is a costly and time-consuming exercise, and it has to be approached (from the management point of view) in a formal and professional manner, keeping in view the unpredictable processing period, which has to be extended time and again. But technical credibility (with the superior authorities) is low in the LDCs; resulting in greater time-lags between proposals and approvals. Due to weaknesses in the infrastructure (especially in the public sector), the project completion period has to be invariably extended as the facilitator inputs are not able to match the time tables in the blue prints, especially in regard to the essential services. The system of colonial bureaucracy is unsuitable for essential public utility services. after the withdrawal of the colonial rule, due to the sudden disruption in supplies and management culture from the 'home' base. In Dhaka, this happened twice, initially from 1947, and again since 1971. During the initial decades since independence, the private sector lacked the background and the resources to tackle the essential services, due to underdevelopment and lack of experience, and absence of the root culture. This phase is now changing, and the private sector is responding in a positive manner, aided with foreign technical assistance and investment tie-ups. Luckily the trained human resources base is not a critical problem.

In short, the maintenance budgets of the technical departments in the public sector have to be accorded much higher priorities at the Secretariate level (compare the plight of the SOEs, and the low percentage of funds made available for R&D). For the recurring foreign exchange component to be reduced, the heavy electrical engineering local industry has to be developed in the private sector (it appears to be viable for a market of 130m popula-

The new global marketing strategies predict that the role of the PDB has to be downgraded, with more patronization of the private sector (this is now being cultivated). Due to the broader base of the economically-handicapped consumers. subsidies in the national budgets have lingered too long. Now that the growth rate is above five per cent, the culture of subsidies has to be down-played. Another cultural nuisance is containing the rising systems losses in the human resources area due to corrupt practices. This epidemic is imported from the existing local environment. led by the quality of governance at the top (who cannot evade the share of the responsibility).

The final equation is how to make PDB more lean and trim. shedding off the excessive administrative and operational loads, the creation of a national power development authority might be an efficient outlet.

LETTER FROM AMERICA

Cuban-Americans have Lost Much More than Elian Gonzalez

Dr. Fakhruddin Ahmed writes from Princeton

THE wheels of justice turned slowly. When it stopped turning on June 28, 6-year old Elian Gonzalez was free to go back to Cuba to his real relatives, and the pseudo relatives in Miami were busy badmouthing American justice. After they appointed the harddrinking, semiliterate car mechanic Lazaro Gonzalez their spokesperson, the Cuban-Americans could not have expected anything better.

Imagine being afraid to speak one's mind, or dreading to make a phone call to the media expressing a contrary point of view out of fear of reprisal. Imagine a majority intolerant of any dissent. Are we describing a totalitarian state such as Cuba? Are we describing the atrocious behaviour of the "commie" citizens of Big Havana, Cuba? No, we are describing the intolerance of the Auban-American community of Attle Havana, Miami, USA!

With Elian back home in Cuba, and passions cooling somewhat, several Cuban-Americans came out of the Marines in his first hideout. woodwork with horror stories. Better still, he only had to utter ent view. All the parties were Those who wanted to speak in the word in Janet Reno's office. favour of Elian's father's right when he was alone with the Atto have the custody of his son, torney General, the nation's were not only threatened with chief law enforcing officer. dire consequences, Cuban- Juan Miguel Gonzalez stead-American talk show hosts re- fastly refused to oblige the Mifused to take their calls! Who ami Cuban-Americans! can forget the ugly scene when Cuban-American gangs de- the justice department by General Janet Reno? Clearly, some Cuban-Americans have assumed the attributes of their perceived enemy very well.

get it!" Oblivious of their own totalitarian behaviour they cry, How can you let a boy go back to a totalitarian state?" The fact is the Cuban-Americans don't get it. Having fled Cuba. they cannot conceive anyone willingly going back to Cuba. By going back to Cuba Juan Miguel Gonzalez, Elian's father, destroyed all the self-serving myths about the Cuban hell that the Cuban-American community had built up meticulously over the past 40 years. Not that the Cuban-Americans had not tried to dissuade Juan Miguel Gonzalez by offering bribes of millions of dollars to defect. If defection was on Juan Miguel Gonzalez's mind, he had ample opportunities when he was surrounded by only US

Cuban-Americans alarmed

scended on and manhandled parading Elian in front of the tives to keep him in the United two American women holding cameras for political purposes; States. posters supporting Attorney something a real parent would never do. Did anyone see a Press photo of Elian while he was in the US in his father's custody, or now in Cuba? Juan Miguel Cuban-Americans still Gonzalez vowed never to allow lament that "America does not cameras in front of his son ever, even in Cuba - spoken like a true parent, not a "relative." Cuban-Americans attempted to block the return of turing by Miami's (Cubanthe boy to his father because they equated paternal custody to delivering Elian to Fidel Castro, although by this time such claims were beginning to ring hollow. Interestingly, Fidel Castro was a hero in the US after he overthrew the corrupt dictator Batista in 1959. He was a sought after speaker on American college campuses. By 1960, however, Castro switched his allegiance to Soviet communism, became an anti-American rabble-rouser, earning America's undying enmity. Cuban-Americans had not figured on the American legal pampered them, taking a differallowed to make their arguments in court, with the federal hasten that shift in policy." judges ruling that only the parent can speak for the young boy in an asylum case. The parent wanted to return to Cuba. Fi-

The fallout from the case is uniformly detrimental to the cause of the Cuban-Americans. As the New York Times observed: "The image of the Cuban-American community in Miami, however, has suffered because of its belligerence in disrupting family ties between father and son. The pos-American) leaders in refusing to aid federal authorities was insupportable. Miami city politics have become more divisive than ever." "On the national scene, the anti-Castro lobby has hurt its message by seeming to use a child as a political prop. Perhaps most harmful to that cause is that many Americans came to sympathize with Elian's father and became more aware of America's outdated policy of isolation towards Cuba. It is not perhaps surprising that just one day before Elian's flight home, the House system, which for so long had Republican leaders agreed to end four decades of sanctions on food sales to Cuba. The saga of this Cuban child helped to Elian and Juan Miguel Gonzalez are both safely home in Cuba. The question is: will the Cuban-American community nally, the Supreme Court re- allow Attorney General Janet jected an emergency request Reno to return to her home in from the child's Miami rela- Miami safely?

by Jim Davis

COURSES -for-CAREERS

Not many Institutions can boast of such a statement. For our courses are carefully structured to nurture our students for a great career. In a lush green campus attached with the beautiful Muttukkadu lake as its backdrop. No wonder, HCAS has been attracting students from over 21 countries across the world. Today Indian students are some of the most sought - after by MNCs and leading Industries all over the world.

THE ONLY CAMPUS WITH A LAKE ATTACHED

Which is why besides our regular curriculum, HCAS is the only Institution that offers top notch, industry

المروان والمواط والمراجع والمراجع

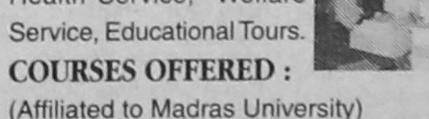

relevant, future proof Computer Programme in association with leading names like IBM-ACE, Kaashyap

Radiant, Linux for our students at subsidised fees. This gives you the opportunity to become an IT professional as you graduate.

The campus also has excellent infrastructure facilities such as good Hostel for Boys / Girls and various sports facilities.

OTHER STUDENTS SUPPORT SERVICES

Career Advisory Service, Counselling Service, Health Service, Welfare Service, Educational Tours.

(Affiliated to Madras University) Under Graduate Programmes B.Sc. (Biochemistry)

B.Sc. (Computer Science) B.Sc. (Microbiology) B.E.S. (Electronic Science)

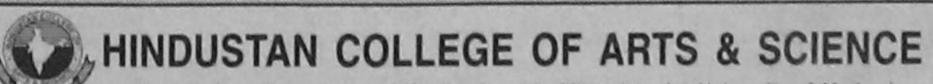

B.B.M. (Bank Management) B.B.A. (Business Administration) B.Com. (Commerce)

B.C.A (Computer Application)* Post Graduate Programme M.Sc. (Computer Science)**

*A degree with major as Computer Science (Subject to University affiliation)

** A pass in B.Sc. Computer Science.

FOR COUNSELLING AND ADMISSION, CONTACT OUR REPRESENTATIVE on 6th, 7th & 8th July 2000 at Hotel Sheraton, Dhaka, Phone: 8611191, 8613391 Fax: 8312915

(Approved by Government of Tamilnadu and affiliated to the University of Madras) 40, G.S.T. Road, St. Thomas Mount, Chennai-600 016 India. Telephone: 91-44-234 1389 / 234 2508 / 234 9317 Fax: 91-44-234 2170 E-mail:hetc@vsnl.com Internet: http://www.hindustancollege.com New Delhi Office: Flat No. 2234,1st Floor, Pocket II, Sector-C, Vasanth Kunj. Phone: 91-11-6130371

Garfield ®

