Life on the tong ghars

For the inmates of the two-storied bamboo-made structures at Pool-par slum in the capital city's Rayer-bazar area, May 27, 2000 started with a light rain. Little did they know that within a few hours, their homes would be devastated by a tornado.

Ten people were killed in the tong ghar, as the structures are popularly known, tragedy. The tragic tale of death and devastation brought into light a frightful side of urban living. Rented out to low-income people, the economy housing has everything on offer – water, electricity, gas supply and, when disaster strikes, death. Zahedul I Khan's photo-essay arrests glimpses of life – and death – on the tong ghars.
