Women Viewed from Alluring Angles

An album on photo documentary launched at Bengal Shilpalaya

Suffering at the hand

By Fayza Haq

ITEMS from Mahmud's photo documentary Our World has been witnessed before at the National Museum but it was a treasure nonpareil to see so many put together for the delight of photography lovers. The documentary deals with the uncertainty of women's lives in Bangladesh, their inability to obtain their due rights and the double standards that prevail with men dominating the scene, a phenomena that will take decades to change. This collection of photos has travelled to China and Nepal, with its selection of 53 photographs.

In Faces is included the photo of a smiling, bright-eyed woman, all dressed up to go out after finishing her daily household chores. The details of the jewelry, saree, blouse and hairdo stand out clearly against the gray and black backdrop. The smile and the twinkling eyes have been captured with suavity. The Bandaban woman preparing the land for sowing by firing the bushes stands strong and erect, with her blouse a little away and heaps of heavy metal jewellery to deck her beauty even though it is apparently her middle years. The background of trees, bushes and hills have been brought in to show the pristine environment which is ruined by acts such as this but of which the woman is unaware as she goes about her traditional work. The black-and-white photo has all the depth of a multicoloured one and perhaps more as black lends classicism, which pervades the entire album.

There is the dark, broadly-smiling face of the woman who has achieved much through her hard work with the help of the village cooperatives. Her seashell white bangles and her checked saree present an image of contentment and brave struggle. The sharp image in the photograph is, indeed, admirable.

The old lady pondering over her betel nuts and leaves, clad in simple white with one of her knees exposed as well as her chest and gnarled hands contrasts well with the little granddaughter sitting by the side, listening patiently to the aged lady's tales of yesteryears.

Do women smoke in public? They certainly do in Bandaban, as caught in the photo depicting a woman slowly and gradually inhaling a pipe to remove her weariness and fret. The relief might be a temporary one but it is there. The clouds of puffs and the hazy figure at the back lend interest to the photo. So do the lines on the face, neck and forehead.

The section Phases wishes to remove the old Bangladeshi concept that woman is "a reproductive machine". Due to her domestic responsibilities, a woman's education, skill and outside employment are limited and she remains dependent on men. Frequent pregnancies and high divorce rates as well as physical abuse are among the many ills that prevail in our society. This includes Garo women dressing themselves with traditional jewellery, headgear with tinsel trimmings and striped saris. The movement and facial features captured are certainly subtle and flaunt a tradition where both young and old can flaunt family finery.

The women and children walking over scorching land with heat waves lashing the hooded faces and the homestead far away

Demanding equal rights

speaks once again of women's ties with their young ones and their difficult existence. The black and white figures seen against the vat dry land with footprints marking the passage of humans is a moving scene indeed in a swollen river which is an ironic depiction of what things were at one time and are today.

The burkha clad woman waiting in a doctor's waiting room, a swathed figure which appears faceless and formless speak of the limitations of women in our society despite the work of the many feminists. The woman sitting hooded, at the edge of a bench with corrugated gates opening on to her is a pathetic figure indeed.

The pages termed Pulse brings in how the village gossip, ridicule and social constraints limit a woman's mental and physical existence. Yet, having completed all the household work, they gather food, fodder, firewood, house-building material and even collect water. Women even work as hired agricultural labourers. All this is amply illustrated in a Naogaon woman performing the back-breaking task of planting rice, after which she will return home to complete her household task.

The Dinaipur women beating paddy in rhythm also show the long hours that women have to put into their existence everyday, combining laughter and camaraderie to lighten overwhelming physical labour. Similarly, the photo Lighter their bodies maybe depict how single and divorced woman, along with female migrant workers work at rice mills. All these images depict labour and yet there is poetry in the black, white and gray images.

children to survive with minimal or no support as the men go to urban areas to earn, especially after the recurrent floods. Women are left to work as sex workers, labourers and to live in slums. Suffering at the hands show how a young woman is tortured as the ignorant villagers believe that she is possessed. The voodoo man and the troubled young thing is the truth in our society which only a lens can prove beyond doubt. Pain and agony is again delineated in Unable to bear the demands where a woman's stomach is being washed by the doctor in the hospital when the young wife has resorted to poison being unable to satisfy the demands of dowry. Although apparently an unpleasant scene, yet Mahmud has depicted it with compassion and an eye for detail such as the woman's pretty shalwar-kameez Selling her body to survive shows a teenaged, tired, sex-worker resting on a cement park bench to arise to face another day of turmoil.

This album has been used before to add interest to the Bangla publication of the Beijing platform for Action in '95, and the covers of the five volumes of the Institutional Review of GOB's WID Capability. These pictures have been viewed by 52,000 enthusiastic visitors in seven Bangladesh cities of Dhaka, Mymensingh, Chittagong, Sylhet, Jessore, Rajshahi, and Barisal districts towns of Pabna, Kushtia, Khatla, Bagerhat, Chandpur, Shariatpur and Rudrapur in '96. It was then shown at Kathmandu, Nepal in '98. While the interesting text of the album is by Sushma Amataya, the Map publication has been done with the assistance of the Royal Danish Embassy.

AN exhibition of Jonathan Wolfgang von Goethe's (1749-1832) Theory on Colours will be held at the Goethe Institut, Dhaka, from August 6. His observations and knowledge gained are said to underline the light and colour phenomenon of nature. His experiments with prisms and other optical devices helped to support Goethe's view that light and shadow are inseparable and that colours are product of their interplay.

Artwork of Porcelain and Glass

A solo exhibition of 'Artwork of Porcelain and Glass' by Kazi Rakib has started on July 14 at Gallery 21. Artist Aminul Islam inaugurated the exhibition and artist Mahmudul Haq was present as special guest. Among his sixty pieces of artworks on display, forty are of porcelain, fifteen glass-paintings and five glass sculptures. Rakib's abstract illustrations say a tale of a lot about the intricacies of abstraction. The members of the audience who have seen painting on crockery are likely get a totally different taste in these pieces, although some paintings of birds on porcelain are bound to present the accustomed feeling that everyone has seen as far as 'dye on glass' is concerned.

The second solo sculpture exhibition of Lablu Patowary started on Friday at the Alliance Française de Dhaka. The exhibition will remain open till July 20, from 5:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. everyday except Saturdays.
