Suu Kyi barred from going outside Yangon

New stand-off with the junta

YANGON, Aug 25 : Myanmar opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi was today in a new standoff with the junta on a road out side Yangon after defying a travel ban which restricts her to the capital, sources said, reports AFP.

Members of her National League for Democracy (NLD) said the Nobel laureate has been facing off the military authorities since Thursday afternoon when her car was stopped at Dallah township.

She had been on her way to a meeting of the party's youth wing in the nearby town of Kawhmu, they said. The NLD has not been in contact with her since then and has no more information on the situation in Dallah, about 32 km from Yangon, they said.

NLD chairman U Aung Shwe said Aung San Suu Kyi was merely attempting to carry out

Aung San Suu Kyi and a group closely monitored. accompanying her had been halted at Dallah and told to remain there or return to Yangon.

The opposition leader had been travelling without proper security arrangements and was stopped for her own safety, he said in a statement.

"Due to threats by armed insurgent separatist forces, travel by prominent persons to some parts of the country is at present inadvisable," he said.

"As a prominent citizen of Myanmar ... the government will take all necessary action in protecting her from these threats while also safeguardng which Myanmar has sunk.

"But we cannot yet dismiss any of the possibilities,' Sergeyev added.

Fierce fighting near Kabul, opposition claims gain

KABUL, Aug 25: Fierce fight - to anti-Taliban commander ing erupted near the Afghan capital today as opposition forces claimed success with a series of raids from positions at said, reports AFP.

Mohammad Habeel said repeated attacks were launched at dawn from the Bagram area, 50 km north of Kabul, and several villages had been captured.

"Heavy fighting is going on. We have captured a number of villages around Bagram. The Taliban are trying to gain more territory from us and we are trying to undermine this," he Taliban spokesman quoted by the Afghan Islamic Press (AIP) said the opposition had attacked around the town of Domizal along both the Old and New Roads, but had failed to gain any ground.

"The opposition attacks continue and we are defending. Opposition forces have launched at least five attacks but so far made no advance," he said, adding that three Taliban soldiers had died.
