100pc literacy possible by 2005

Minister says on eve of Int'l Literacy Day

By Staff Correspondent

Bangladesh will be able to eliminate illiteracy from the country by the year 2005, if the present programmes for its eradication can be maintained, State Minister for Primary and Mass Education Satish Chandra Roy said yesterday.

He said a massive campaign has been launched in this regard.

The minister was addressing a function organised by Primary and Mass Education Directorate in observance of the adult education week on the eve of the International Literacy Day at the Institute of Engineers' Bangladesh (IEB) auditorium.

The minister said the literacy percentage in the country this year attained so far is 62 per cent while the target was 60 per cent.

"We have a plan to make all district headquarters free from illiteracy by March 2003 and the whole country by the year 2005," he said, adding, "We have received a tremendous response from the people from all walks of life."
