Bringing hope to the lives of malnourished children

BINP project in 19 districts brings down malnutrition to 2.5 pc from 10 pc

By Rezaul Karim, back from Cox's Bazar

Severe malnutrition among the children under two years is on the decline in at least 40 vulnerable thanas of 19 districts, thanks to Bangladesh Integrated Nutrition Project (BINP).

Implemented by the government in cooperation with seven selected NGOs, the 67 million US dollars project has succeeded in bringing down the rate of severe malnutrition from about 10 per cent to 2.5 per cent in the project areas.

About 4.50 lakh malnourished children and children with stunted growth are being given prescribed special nutrition food six days a week under the project. Alongside this, pregnant and lactating mothers are also given food packets and counselling from the some 8,000 Community Nutrition Centres (CNC) commonly known as "Pusti Kendra".

At present about 85 per cent of children under the age of two are malnourished in the country. Amidst them, about 15-10 per cent are severely malnourished while malnourishment in the remaining is moderate or mild.

Despite some recent positive changes, malnutrition in the country remains one of the highest in the world. About 58 per cent of children are underweight and 51 per cent have stunted growth, nearly 50 per cent of women suffer from chronic energy deficit while low birth weight (LBW) incidence is estimated at 45 per cent. Over 70 per cent of pregnant women in the country are anemic. The figures are perhaps among the poorest in the world.

BINP, in its endeavor, to tackle serious malnutrition, had to face a series of social taboos. They had to convince the mothers to come forward and learn to rid their children of malnutrition. The project has emerged as a role model as it has lifted a ray of hope among rural people, especially the poor womenfolk about rearing healthy children and improving mothers' health.

A Community Nutrition Promoter (CNP), commonly known as Pusti Apa (nutrition sister), in each CNC is set up in remote coastal, hilly and almost inaccessible localities of the vulnerable thanas. Each CNC serves from 1000 to 1500 people. These centres have succeeded in bringing poor and illiterate rural women into light regarding their health and nutrition.

Although the 6-year BINP project was officially launched on August 2, 1995, it actually started functioning on a broader basis from November 17, 1996. It was expanded to 34 thanas more from six thanas in two phases. Besides, supplementary food supply and promotional activities, the project has two components on poultry and gardening for nutrition to ensure nutritional security of the poor women and children.

In Cox's Bazar, a local NGO namely Society for Health Extension and Development (SHED) is implementing the Community-Based Nutrition Component, which is featured by supplementary food distribution to severely malnourished children, and pregnant and lactating mothers.

days a week at 169 CNCs in Teknaf thana and 440 CNCs at Chokoria.

The nutrition pack contains components designed to meet the nutritional need of an individual. Each packet contains 20 g fried rice powder, 10 g fried pulse powder, 5 g sugar/gur and 3 g of soybean oil. The four items contain food value of 150 kilo calorie of energy. Pregnant and lactating mothers get four packets each while severely malnourished children two packets and growth-faltering children, mildly moderate and moderate malnourished one packet each.

One health consultant, known as the Pusti Apa supervises the feeding programme besides promoting health care of the women and their children at each Pusti Kendra.

During a recent visit to different Pusti Kendras in Teknaf and Chokoria thanas, hundreds of women along with their children were seen availing the nutrition packs, sometimes travelling from far, passing hills, canals and inaccessible areas, to reach the nutrition centres.

Talking to newsmen, one of the Pusti Apas, Hasina Akhter, at Nazirpara village pusti kendra in Teknaf, said they had overcome a many social barriers during their promotional activities.

She said that the Pusti Apas now get all-out cooperation from people of all walks of life, including elected representatives, community leaders, youths, mosque imams and schoolteachers. In many places, local people have voluntarily constructed rooms for running of the kendra's activities and feeding programmes. This has all happened because the people now understand the need for proper nutrition and understand the benefit of using the nutrition packs.

Under the BINP project, adolescent girls under the 40 thanas are also being given health related advises and supplied with iron supplement tablets. At the adolescent centres, page 11 col 3

Punish those responsible, Nur Khan urges Pak rulers

Former Chief of Pakistan Air Force, Air Marshal Nur Khan has advised the present military rulers of Pakistan to "admit the mistakes" (meaning the doings of their predecessors during Bangladesh's War of Liberation in 1971) and also punish those guilty of war crime, reports BSS.

Commenting on the publication of Humoodur Rehman Commission report (which deals with the crime and atrocities committed by Pakistan Army in Bangladesh during 1971) recently, Nur Khan has advised the present hierarchy manning the General Headquarters "to admit that mistakes were committed," the Pakistani daily The Frontier Post said in an article published on Tuesday. Khan further suggested the rulers at the helm of affairs to "try to clean this pus in its body."

In an exclusive interview with the paper, Khan, a senior citizen and former Managing Director of Pakistan's flag carrier PIA twice opined that politicians and army rulers in Pakistan have always thrived on lies and in the absence of established institutions they have never been caught or penalised for their excesses. "You cannot live with a lie forever," he told the daily.

As regard to the Hamoodur Rehman Commission report the publication of which has rekindled the demand for apology from Pakistanis for their atrocities in Bangladesh, Nur Khan said now that the report is out "There is no way the army can continue to live with a situation like this."

He observed that, "You have to sacrifice some guilty officers to restore the confidence. Every Pakistani now knows what happened. So there is no point in hiding behind the wall of shameless secrecy."

Nur Khan, who described Pakistan army's defeat in Bangladesh's Liberation War in 1971 as one of the several 'national disasters', suggested setting up of a high-powered Commission to go through all the disaster reports, make them public and fix the responsibility. He opined for punishing the culprits irrespective of whether living or dead and complete its job within one year and allow the nation and the armed forces to move on.
