The War We Forgot

Chobi Mala to reconstruct our memories of the war

BY NAFID IMRAN AHMED

Twenty-nine years ago we had the bloodiest wars of the century. And for the loss of millions of souls we achieved our independence in 1971. But what did we actually do to preserve our past? Apart from a number of monuments and a few efforts by the Liberation War Museum we have not done much to sing about.

While in the West, the "Concert for Bangladesh" raised millions of dollars, and the US and the Soviet Union flexed muscles at each other did they possibly know what we were going through. It was only after the 16th of December, when the national tragedies were discovered, the corpses of the intellectuals at Mohammadpur, the mass graves, and the torture cells, only then the nation had suffered began to surface. There are still numerous stories of death and sufferings that are lost into oblivion and the full measure of the holocaust would be lost from our national memory if we do not try to reconstruct them.

After twenty-nine years of the War Drik Picture Library Ltd., Pathshala, The South Asian Institute of Photography, The Royal Netherlands Embassy, The British Council, The Alliance Française, The Indian High Commission and the Goethe Institut, are jointly organising Chobi Mela, the first Photography Festival in Asia. Apart from various other programmes related to Chobi Mela, the festival will start with a photography exhibition titled "The War We Forgot".

Over a quarter of a century later, on the eve of the millennium, we would like to give the rest of the world a piece of Bangladesh's history, said Dr Shahidul Alam the festival director.

tor said while talking to the press at the Liberation War Museum, "A history that must be told for the many who have given their lives for their freedom, for those who have been left behind, who live with the pain, for the perpetrators of the crime who must confront what they have done, and for the youth to know the pangs of the birth of their nation."

Chobi Mela is going to be the single biggest media event in Asia. The festival will start on the December 15. The festival has already been featured in the Internet and in international magazines. Throughout the month there will be over 18 international exhibitions as well as workshops, lectures, slide shows and films. Almost 250 pieces of rare and historical War photographs will be put on display in these programmes.

Akku Chowdhury of Liberation War Museum was also present at the press conference. During his speech he said that after 30 years the people of Bangladesh and the rest of the World would get the chance to see the actual history. "The credit of course goes to the uncountable foreign photojournalists, the organisations and of course Dr. Shahidul Alam who took the initiative in 1994 and has worked really hard to arrange everything altogether."

Dr. Shahidul Alam expressed that, our country is always known for the floods and poverty to the outside world. "But we have a glorious past that everyone should know about. Chobi Mela is just going to do this. There are a lot of organisations and people working for this festival. Two separate teams are working in New York and Paris. There is a lot of work involved in this activity. The photojournalists who took the photographs are scattered all over the world, they had to be contacted. This is not only an Asian festival, it is going to be international one. There is also a virtual community known as Alochona, who is working for the festival. They are putting up a website for the festival. The URL for it is <http://www.chobimela.com>."

A slide show followed the press briefing highlighting different aspects of the festival. The show previewed some of the spectacular and horrifying photographs which, no one in the world has ever seen. These photographs were just a glimpse of what the festival has in store for the viewers.

There is no doubt that these photographs of the war of independence will definitely awake the inner souls of every Bangladeshi.

'More Local Interactions at German Cultural Centre in Future'

Dr Markus Litz, the new Goethe Institut Director speaks to Fayza Haq

CUL: What were your other options to coming to Dhaka?

Dr Markus Litz: While working for Goethe Institut, we have a chance to choose from five countries in the world concerning our posting. I was attracted to cultural expressions in India and Bangladesh. I felt that this way I could have an introduction into India and other surrounding countries. I had worked in South America and had learnt Spanish and so I was interested in working for GI in South America and my first choice was Caracas, Venezuela. The other choices were Colombo in Sri Lanka, Buenos Aires and Santiago, Chile.

CUL: What was your impression of the country before you came to Bangladesh and did your preconceived notions match with what you saw in Dhaka?

ML: We have the opportunity to travel to the country approximately six months before we commence our work. I came to Bangladesh in August '99 for a week and I was very impressed, especially by seeing how open-minded people are regarding culture. I got into close contacts with some artists and when I took over my duties at the GI in January, my knowledge of the country naturally increased. I think both Germany and Bangladesh will benefit from this.

CUL: did you just meet visual artists or also singers, dancers etc.?

ML: I am also in contact with dancers, film-makers (which is at present the main field of cultural activities of the GI) and we are also working with scientists because it is also our aim to have mutual exchanges between German and Bangladeshi scientists.

CUL: The media in the west tends to present Bangladesh as a poor country with little else but floods and cyclones. Was that your impression too after you came here?

ML: Of course, Bangladesh is facing a lot of severe problems. But I do not like the manner of European reporting on Bangladesh. This country as a result is faced with little else but catastrophes in the mind of the European people. Even the members of my family did not understand why I wanted to go to Bangladesh. I was naturally influenced by these reports on Bangladesh but I wanted to get my own impression. I also intended to get in touch not only with educated partners in the field of culture but also with ordinary people. I got an idea of the conditions in which they are living. The astonishing fact for me was that they are able to deal with their conditions and have a very strong will to cope with their circumstances and environment. My first impression when I came was that I was surrounded by beggars. My problem was that I did not know at first as how to react. I felt pity and wondered the best way to help the needy. I decided that I should give something like food rather than money to beggars who often assault foreign people.

CUL: Having stayed here for eight months how does the country affect you?

ML: It was very fascinating for me to experience the landscape of Bangladesh. I had the chance to travel to the other German teaching institutions in Bangladesh. We have teachers of German in Rajshahi and Chittagong and visiting them I realised the beauty of Bangladesh. Nature here is marvellous and something that you do not see in Europe. This was a fascinating experience for me and I am looking forward to seeing other parts of Bangladesh like the Paharpur Buddhist monasteries in North Bengal and next week I hope to visit Mahamati in Comilla and I shall also see other places of archaeological interest.
