Women occupy only 12 pc of govt jobs: PARC

Women in Bangladesh occupy only 12 per cent of government jobs, a report of Public Administration Reforms Commission (PARC) said, reports BSS.

According to the report, women participation in the higher tier of administration constitute only two per cent of the total if categorised on the basis of gender. Quoting South Asian statistics the report said that in 1989 women in India occupied 13.3 per cent government jobs while in Pakistan five per cent government jobs were occupied by women.

In the year 1993, only 4.4 per cent of women in Nepal were employed as gazetted officers. The number of employed women is higher in Sri Lanka, the report observed.

The women are playing laudable role in the service sector. But due to social and cultural constraints they are able to play little role in the field of technology.

PARC said that in 1996 women employees occupied 10 per cent of all government jobs. They occupied eight per cent jobs of first and second class jobs, 12 per cent jobs of third class and six per cent of fourth class jobs. But the report noted that 10 per cent of jobs in the first and second class are earmarked for women while 15 per cent jobs are earmarked for women in the third and fourth class jobs.

The report said that the women occupy five per cent jobs in the autonomous bodies and sector corporations while in the divisional commissioners office and in the office of the deputy commissioners women occupy only four per cent.

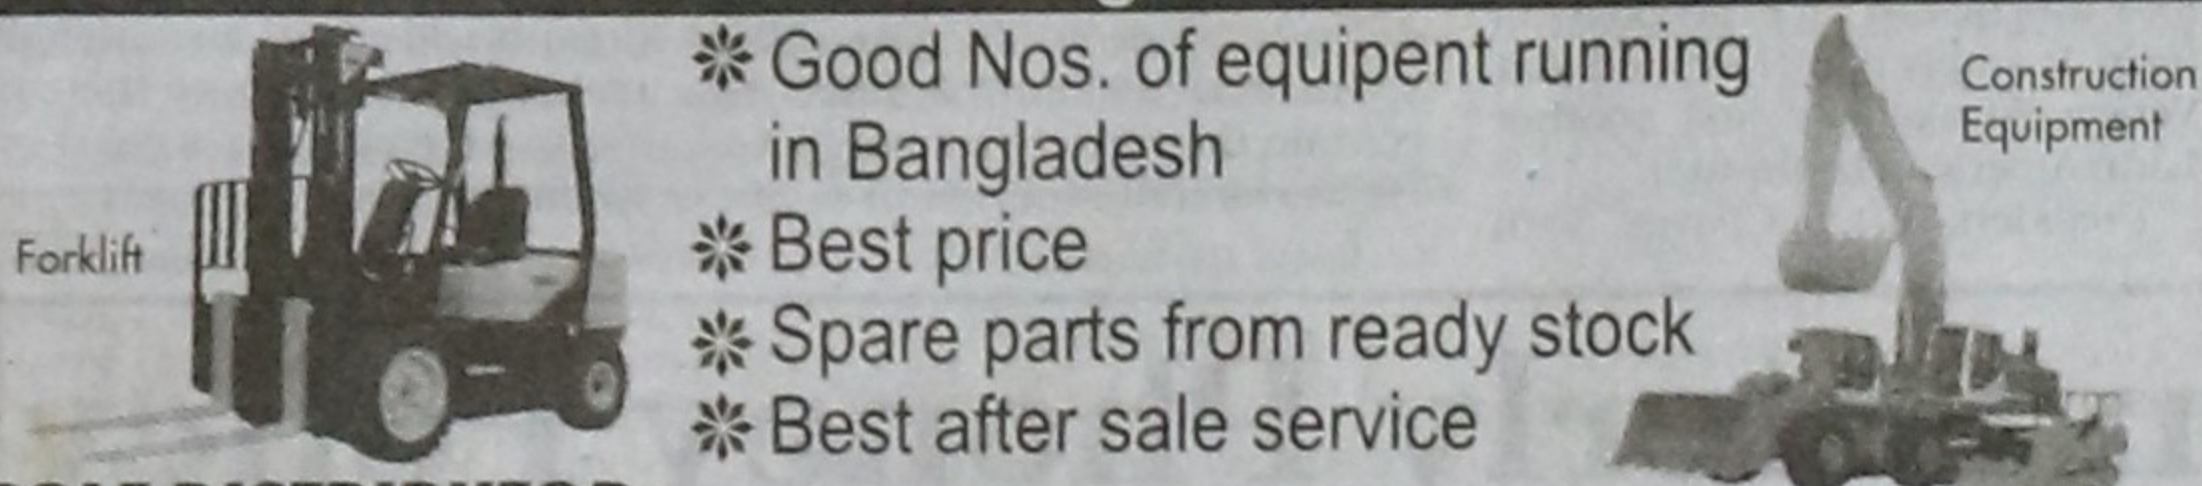

It also said that women are better represented in the Ministry of Law, Justice and Parliamentary Affairs and the office of the district and sessions judges. The report recommended strengthening of monitoring system as apart from the jobs under Bangladesh Public Service Commission women, quotas are not fulfilled in other places.

The report pointed out that the number of senior women officials are few and there is only one woman working as a secretary, one as additional secretary, four as joint secretaries and six as deputy secretaries of the government. One woman has been appointed as judge in the High Court.

The report further observed that instead of strict adherence to preservation of quota system, neutral selection and promotion policies should be followed. It urged the authorities to create better working atmosphere for women by providing adequate security, housing, transport, separate toilets and rest house facilities, child care centre, employment of both the spouse in same location and efficient monitoring system.

Termining overall presence of women as not satisfactory, the report underscored the need to motivate girls to join government service following completion of college and university education.
