For Manipuris song and dance are essential elements of life; love for dance reflects their rich lore of legend and mythology. There is no authentic record of the history of Manipur's dance and music prior to the 18th century. However, the lasting developments in technique and methods took place during the time of Jai Singh (1764 to 1789), who was a great devotee of Lord Krishna and a follower of Valshnavism. promoting culture. The dances reminded their religious movement of Vaishnavism, the worship of Lord Vishnu, and have flowered in exquisite Rasalila performances, the favourite dance in a circle by Lord Krishna with his milkmaids. Various types of Rasalilas are usually performed on special occasions and festivals. The Manipuris in Bangladesh have emigrated from the Indian state of Manipur in the 17th century. But the exodus of Manipuris to Bangladesh took place in the early 19th century when Burmese troops went on with their destructive activities in Manipur for long seven years. The Manipuris here in Bangladesh are the descendants of those who did not return to Manipur and became citizens of this country

The display of martial art was something to look at. The Manipuri martial art is not exactly a performing art. The art of combat with swords is a must for every worrier worth the name of Manipur. The audience went silent as two fighters frayed with flashing swords with a wonderful reflex and accuracy. Their skill bemused the audience. The Rasleelas were presented. Rasleelas are the most wellknown form of Manipuri dance. Besides Rasalilas, there are other dances called Natasankirtana, in which a group of men play cymbals and dance in a circle or in two rows singing praises of God. Rasalila, Lai Haraoba, Choloms, Pung Cholom, Natasankirtana, Khubak Ishai and other Manipuri dances were performed judiclously for the Dhaka audience attended by a huge number of foreign nationals.

Identity Project, Dia's is a popular name in our fashion circuit. It has curved a niche for itself in local as well as in the international markets long ago when Nasrine Karim started her journey in the mid-'80s. Among other apparels, her sari collection is refreshing. A Bengali woman virtually looks like a goddess and she can beat the ones of Olympia - when she wears a sari was evident from Nasrine's presentations. Spectators who understand the value and beauty of Jamdani indeed refined their sense of beauty on Saturday night.
