Chalan Beel project turns into farmers' bane

From Akhteruzzaman Bablu

SIRAJGANJ, Sept 16: The gigantic Chalan Beel Project which was supposed to be a boon to the farmers, has turned into a real bane for them.

Split into four polders ABC and D the ambitious project was launched in 1977 with financial assistance from World Food Programme, aiming to boost farm output by saving croplands from flood onslaughts. Under the project, embankments stretching over 12 Upazilas of Pabna, Natore and Sirajganj districts were constructed at a cost of Tk 43.46 crore. But faulty construction of the embankments continues to take its toll on the farmers. Crops on vast tracks of land under the project, especially in Singra and Atrai upazilas, are damaged each year due to faulty construction of its embankments. Hundreds of homesteads and educational institutions also come under flood onslaught every year.

As per the project profile, the project was supposed to have 251 miles of flood control embankment, 187 miles of water extraction canal, 24 regulators, 58 outlets and inlets, 55 bridges/culverts and 132 buildings. But the project was not implemented accordingly. The authorities had expected that additional crops worth about Tk 8.42 crore would be produced from some 2.13 lakh acres of land under the project area upon its implementation. Keeping this view in mind, some 225 kms of flood protection embankment were constructed along west bank of the River Atrai from Kalomnagar of Singra in Natore via Atrai upazila to Mohadevpur in four years from 1978. But the authorities stopped disbursing funds for the project in 1984 saying that 50 per cent works of the project had been reduced following the installation of a regulator at the confluence of the River Baral near Charghat.

The authorities, however, resumed implementation of the abandoned works in 1989 and constructed 129 miles more flood protection embankment. But they did not install any sluice gate on the embankments, except the one at Kalomnagarpara, causing severe water stagnation inside the project area.

Meanwhile, countless cracks have developed on the embankments in Sutdikgacha, Badhaighara, Baitakhali and Sutrana of Atrai upazila, as locals cut away soils from the embankments for smooth movement of their carts. A 4 km embankment from Ninggoi to Chalkpur has become vulnerable to floodwaters due to numerous cracks was learnt to have proposed the authorities to set up two big pump houses in C block of the project to save croplands from water stagnation, a proposal refused by the donor agency.

An official, who would not disclose his name, said during heavy rain in Naogaon's Barendra area, rainwater rolls down fast inundating low-lying areas from Mohadevpur to Kalomnagar, causing colossal damage to crops. The Atrai also bursts its banks with downpour, submerging croplands on its vicinity. Sometimes, the river water pours into the project area through the breaches of the embankments.

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina, addressing a public meeting here on January 12, 1999, had assured that necessary measures would be taken to resolve the Chalan Beel problem. But the government has failed to come up with follow-up programmes.

Arsenic panic in 10 dists

From Our Correspondent

RANGPUR, Oct 16: Arsenic contamination beyond permissible level has been detected in tubewell water in 208 unions out of 679 unions in ten northern districts, causing concern among at least five lakh people. The districts include Rangpur, Nilphamari, Gaibandha, Kurigram, Lalmonirhat, Dinajpur, Thakurgaon, Panchagarh, Bogra and Joypurhat.

A survey conducted recently by the Rangpur circle of Department of Public Health and Engineering (DPHE) revealed that the arsenic level ranges between 1.05 mg and 3.07 mg in tubewell water, much beyond the permissible level of 0.05 mg.

According to sources, people in the affected areas are still using the contaminated water in absence of alternative source of water.

The sources said DPHE has failed to sink required number of tubewells due to shortage of fund in the affected areas to ease the problem.

The DPHE had sealed 51 tubewells at Pathak Shikar village in Kandil union under Pargachha upazila in 1998 due to arsenic contamination. But only five tubewells have been installed so far, the sources added.

At least 200 people have been affected with arsenic related diseases in Ullipur upazila in Kurigram district. According to local people, arsenic has been detected in water of a large number of tubewells in the upazila.

Tale of Bara Kuthi

From Kamran Reza Chowdhury

RAJSHAHI UNIVERSITY, Oct 16: Bara Kuthi, one of the relic buildings in the city, testifies to the ups and downs of centuries in the region.

The building, which was once used as administrative building of Rajshahi University, was built by the Dutch community in the 17th century.

Bara Kuthi, Bangla for big cottage, stands on the bank of the mighty Padma. However, historians cannot confirm exactly when the building was built. LSS O'Malley, an eminent historian, confirmed in the Rajshahi District Gazetteer that the Dutch community constructed the splendid building in the 17th century.

The two-storied Bara Kuthi is 82 feet in length and 67 feet in width. There are 12 rooms in the building. One cannot easily discriminate the doors and windows of the building as their heights are identical. There is a staircase in the western side of the building to go to the up stair.

Later the building became English commercial residency and continued to be so until the East India Company gave up its commercial operations in the region in 1833. After two years in 1835 it was passed into the hands of Messrs Robert Watson and Company, a firm which carried on the silk and indigo industries on a large scale. The building was the headquarters of the European Volunteer Force during the 1857 mutiny, according to O'Malley. The English also used it as concentration camp. They used to hang the patriotic soldiers who fled Murshidabad and reached the region crossing the mighty Padma.

At the beginning of the 20th century, the building was acquired by the Midnapore Zamindari company. Later it was owned by India General Navigation and Rivers Steam Navigation companies. After the partition of the Indian subcontinent in 1947, it belonged to the then East Pakistan government. The building was finally handed over to Rajshahi University authorities in 1954.

Bara Kuthi became an abandoned building in 1960 when the university was shifted to Mathar.

The Bara Kuthi was strongly fortified when the Dutch held it. The building also had some cannons, which were removed by the Midnapore Zamindari, according to O'Malley. Once the complex also had a stable and a cemetery. The Padma devoured the cemetery. The Bara Kuthi was seriously damaged in an earthquake in 1897.

The Varendra Research Museum of Rajshahi University now supervises the building. The university took up renovation work of the building recently. Some of the rooms in the up stair were demolished and new rooms were built. At present the building is being used as the club of the university employees. Local people have urged the authorities concerned to develop the site as a tourist spot.
