VACANCIES

Save the Children is the UK's largest children's rights agency working to create a better world for children. We are looking for 3 dynamic professionals with a genuine commitment to help us implement our new four-year programme in Bangladesh:

- 1) Head of Poverty and Working Children Programme
- 2) Head of Justice and Violence Programme
- 3) Head of Education Programme

As part of the senior management team, Heads of Programmes work together to provide strategic leadership to deliver on Save the Children's organisational goals in Bangladesh and globally. Heads of Programme report directly to the Programme Director and have a senior level representation role vis-a-vis policy makers, donors, NGOs etc.

You are a dynamic, creative high achiever with about 10 years experience in national or international development organisations, and approximately half of this time in a senior management position. Your in-depth analytical and conceptual skills are backed by experience in strategic planning, field/action research, policy debates, programme management and leading advocacy initiatives with a wide range of audiences. Needless to say, your command of English is excellent.

Besides the above competencies, specific requirements include:

Head of Programme ' Poverty and Working Children' Ref. HOP P&WC

Save the Children's 'Poverty and Working Children' programme aims at addressing the issue of hazardous child labour in relation to its main cause, poverty. While recognising that children's work is not always harmful. Save the Children wishes to demonstrate ways to prevent children from vulnerable and marginalised families being drawn to hazardous and exploitative work. The programme seeks the views of working children and advocates for any national plan to take them into account.

You need a strong experience of poverty alleviation programmes in Bangladesh combined with very good economic analysis and interest in the role of the private sector. Your ability to analyse poverty issues ranges from the macro level to that of an excellent understanding of vulnerability at household level. You want to identify real solutions to the complex issue of child labour and are not afraid of exploring new ways of approaching it.

Head of Programme 'Justice and Violence' - Ref. HOP - J&V

The 'Justice and Violence' programme aims at reducing institutional and social violence against children.

You are a human rights activist and are willing to put your vision, passion and energy to improve the situation of children in contact with the law. You will also lead the development of practical, community based approaches, that will help children, and especially girls, to be protected from the more common but no less damaging day to day violence.

You are a social science post-graduate with a gc__' understanding of the process of justice delivery in Bangladesh.

Head of Programme ' Education' - Ref. HOP - EDU

Save the Children's goal is to secure the right to continuous provision of quality and relevant education for every child in Bangladesh. The four-year programme seeks to develop and advocate child focused indicators and criteria, including tools for measuring inclusiveness, that can be sustained by collaborative efforts of government, community, NGOs and the private sector.

You have Masters in Social Science or related discipline with a very thorough knowledge of education issues and programmes in Bangladesh.

- All posts are Dhaka based and involve travel to project areas outside Dhaka.
- Save the Children aims to be an equal opportunity employer Save the Children offers an attractive compensation package.

To apply, please request job description of the post you wish to apply to (quoting the reference) and an application form for you to fill. Only applications on the Save the Children format will
