Discontent in BNP

following pressure from the parties and hardliners in BNP.

The sources said leaders of the three other parties of the four party opposition alliance prefer addressing joint rally as strength of their parties in the city has 'drastically reduced'.

They said Khaleda Zia was interested in a separate party programme and advised the leaders to arrange a public meeting of BNP alone.

The city BNP declared the programme. But she was later 'compelled' to advise party leaders to invite chiefs of three other parties to address the rally.

They said names of chiefs of the three parties were included in the poster after the design and plate were readied at the printing press.

The mainstream party leaders had argued that BNP did not need support of any party to hold a public meeting and that leaders of other parties should not be invited to address a meeting organised by BNP alone.

But she accepted the proposal of the hardliners and design of the poster was changed, the sources said.

"The arrangement is completely against the desire of mainstream party leaders and activists. It has become very difficult for genuine BNP men to do politics as differences of opinion between the moderates and the hardliners has taken a serious turn," a senior party leader told this correspondent.

Another leader said, "The party Chairperson is in the grip of Rajakars, hardliners and fundamentalist forces".

He said the party is rapidly moving towards the "anti-liberation camp" and it will have a difficult time in the next parliamentary election if its leadership continues to support the hardliners and ultra-rightwing elements.

Meanwhile, commotion has been created in the alliance over IOJ leader Fazlul Haq Amini's stance in favour of fatwa and remarks against the recent High Court verdict on the issue.

Sources said, IOJ has created pressure on BNP to stand by Amini and threatened to leave the alliance for non-compliance.

They said IOJ leaders also expressed their resentment over Khaleda Zia's remarks about fatwa at a recent meeting with newspaper Editors and for not supporting Amini on the issue.

IOJ leaders may speak in support of fatwa at today's public meeting, they said.

Earlier, a meeting of the Central Liaison Committee yesterday discussed fresh programmes, particularly the hartal programme.

A CLC member said the hartal may be called between 15 and 20 of this month.

Women's reserved seats intangible as far as the ruling party's plan for election is concerned.

In her letter, the BNP chief also supported the popular demand for a change in the mode of election of MPs from women's quota and an increase in the number of such lawmakers. But, she did not elaborate on the two points.

BNP Secretary-General Abdul Mannan Bhuiyan told The Daily Star Tuesday that his party was yet to finalise details on the two issues. "We'll do it in time in consultation with other parties."

To another question, Bhuiyan said BNP along with other parties would make fresh arrangements to have reserved seats for women in the next parliament if the existing provision is lapsed.

Chairman of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on the Ministry of Law Suranjit Sengupta criticised BNP for 'acting against the move for protection of the reserved seats'.

"If the bill lapses, half the voters (who are women) will vote against BNP in the next elections," he told The Daily Star Tuesday.

Commenting on BNP's suggestions for a direct election and an increase in the number of MPs from women's quota, he pointed out that there was still scope for the opposition party to suggest such amendments to the bill. "We're are open to any suggestions."

Sengupta, also the PM's adviser on parliamentary affairs, said BNP's position goes not only against the interests of the women, but also parliamentary democracy.

The standing committee brought the bill on women's reserved seats back to the House in the last session, after sitting on it for more than five months against the stipulated one-month time apparently to bag the opposition's support.

The bill was placed in the House on June 17 and sent to the standing committee for scrutiny the same day.

The committee's report on the bill welcomed two suggestions from the women's organisations the provision of direct election to the reserved seats and an increase in the number of such seats. So long, women from the reserved seats were the choices of the ruling party because of the provision of their election by the directly elected MPs.

Meanwhile, the country's leading women rights organisations are demanding withdrawal of the pending bill and introduction of another incorporating their demands.

Protesters remove a teargas shell fired at them by police during a demonstration in the Pakistani port city of Karachi yesterday. Several people received minor injuries and some 50 protestors were taken into custody as police used batons and tear gas to disperse hundreds of Christian minority demonstrators demanding an amendment to the country's 1985 blasphemy law to provide safeguards against alleged abuse of the legislation by Muslim extremists to petition filed by Opposition Chief Whip Khandaker Delwar Hossain for three hours on December 11 before giving its judgement on the dispute over Akhter's membership in parliament yesterday. The verdict referred to Articles 67(1)(e) and 70(1) of the constitution that deals with vacation of a parliamentary seat.

EC declares Akhter's JS seat vacant

Chief Election Commissioner M A Syed took only five minutes read out the brief verdict in presence of the three other Commissioners Abidur Rahman, Moshaq Ahmed Chowdhury and Shafiuur Rahman.

In his instant reaction, Akhter termed the judgement "unjustified" and said the CEC was biased.

Ordering vacation of the seat, the four-member quasi-judicial body also asked the authorities concerned to communicate its decision to the Speaker of the Jatiya Sangsad immediately.

Article 70 (1) of the Constitution says, "A person elected as a member of Parliament at an election at which he was nominated as a candidate by a political party shall vacate his seat if he resigns from the party or votes in Parliament against that party."

Article 67(1)(e) refers to Article

70 in case of vacation of seat.

The constitutional explanation of Article 70(1) also says: "If a member of Parliament a) Being present in parliament abstains from voting, or b) Abstains himself from any sitting of Parliament ignoring the direction of the party which nominated him at the election as a candidate not to do so, he shall be deemed to have voted against that party."

"Having considered all the written and oral statements and in the light of relevant Constitutional provisions, it is ordered that the case is allowed on contest without costs. The seat of Major (ret'd) Akhteruzzaman MP elected from Kishoreganj-2 constituency in the parliament stands vacated with immediate effect under Article 67(1)(e) and Article 70(1) of the Constitution," the EC verdict said.

Terming the judgement "unjustified," Maj Akhter told a group of journalists immediately after the verdict that the chief election commissioner had nakedly tried to prove himself neutral to the BNP high-ups.

"The judgement reflects the CEC's bias, and he will not be able to conduct the next general election in a neutral manner".

The judgement would make the party leadership more autocratic and hence, the democratic practice may be hampered once again, he added.

When asked whether he would challenge against the EC verdict, Akhter said, "No. Even the question to participate in the by-election following the vacation of the constituency does not arise."

"I will contest the next general election if BNP nominates me for Kishoreganj-2 constituency," said Akhter.

Barrister Mahbub Uddin Khokon, the petitioner's lawyer, said there was no option for the EC other than to pass such a judgement. "The judgement will be considered as a precedence to maintain party discipline."

The Election Commission Secretariat sources said that the copy of the verdict was sent to the Speaker soon after it was delivered.

Earlier on October 11, 1999, the commission vacated seats held by Hasibur Rahman Swapan of Sirajganj-7 and Dr. Mohammad Alauddin of Rajshahi-5. Both of them were elected on BNP ticket but later joined the government of Awami League.

Police say 'missing'

Qamrul Islam admitted that he had told Halima Khatun to keep away, as he said he had been too busy with Nikunja and Rubel murder cases. Moreover, he said, the court is going to be shifted as its judge has been promoted and assigned elsewhere.

"Both Nikunja and Rubel murder cases are at the fag end and the cases will be over within a month. Then I will work on Jalal murder case," he said.

Islam added that 'only' two dates for witnesses in Jalal murder case have gone by without any hearing.

When contacted, CID Investigating Officer ASP Munshi Atiqur Rahman told The Daily Star that he was aware of the difficulties of Halima Khatun and her children. He said that Halima was officially receiving Tk 7000 a month as compensation from the CID, but the honorarium has now been stopped.

When asked why there was so much delay in Jalal murder case, the ASP replied that it depended on the Public Prosecutor.

"We have been told by the Public Prosecutor that after Rubel murder case was over, Jalal's case would be taken up," said Rahman.

Sporadic clashes mark JP-called hartal in Rangpur RANGPUR, Jan 10 : A dawn-to-dusk hartal called by district Jatiya Party was observed here today amidst sporadic clashes, reports UNB.

All business establishments and shops remained closed in the district and upazila headquarters during hartal hours.

Some 10 people were injured during chase and counter-chase between the activists of Jatiya Party and Chhatra League in the town, witnesses said.

Meanwhile, police arrested two pickets from Kachari Bazaar Point.

Jatiya Party enforced the hartal demanding immediate release of JP Chairman HM Ershad.

Screening at 28 upazilas

"We have only seen the tip of the iceberg. The arsenic issue is a gigantic one but we have so far ignored the matter. There is a lot of uncoordinated activities going on, which we or the government does not know about," said Professor Quazi Quamruzzaman, Chairman of Dhaka Community Hospital who also detected the first arsenic cases in the country.

"Above all, the affected people still do not have any alternative source of drinking water and are continuing to drink poison."

The project, which is not bound by any timeframe, would detect affected tube-wells by testing water samples at field level followed by laboratory tests for confirmation and identify patients suffering from arsenic-related diseases. Each upazila receives Tk 30 lakh for the implementation of the work.

Upazila authorities have already formed, or in the process of forming, Field Survey Teams (FST) in each ward for the screening of tube-wells and identifying patients. They would also build capacity for accessing safe drinking water, assist arsenic affected patients to link with local health officials for health related advice and also create awareness in the community about arsenic contamination.

The objective of the programme is to involve local initiative and for that we proposed local level ward and union committees to supervise activities. The programme is designed in such a way so that the villagers actively participate in the problems," said a senior official of LGRD ministry. "The ideas have been tried in Singair upazila in Manikganj district and Gazaria union in Munshiganj and the results were very encouraging."

This community initiative in arsenic mitigation through local government institution was found highly successful during the pilot phase of the National Emergency Screening Programme of Bangladesh Arsenic Mitigation Water Supply Project (BAMWSP) that was implemented in six upazilas since October 1999.

Sharmin Murshed of Brotee, who has contributed immensely towards identification of arsenic patients, particularly in the southern districts, said, "We should first focus on finding safe water sources. Let us leave ground water alone in this search because there are too many risk factors involved."

NATO to set up spl commission to probe uranium hazard

Population of Serbia not in danger

BRUSSELS, Jan 10 : NATO is to set up a special committee to study the possible health consequences for soldiers who served in parts of the Balkans where the alliance used depleted uranium munitions, NATO Secretary General George Robertson announced today, reports AFP.

"We are going to set up a dedicated committee on depleted uranium," Robertson told a press conference.

"We will do everything to make sure that the relevant information is known," he added, asserting that the alliance has "nothing to hide."

Some of NATO's European members are irate about a spate of cancer cases, some fatal, among former Balkan peacekeepers and other personnel, which they say could be linked to depleted uranium (DU) munitions used in the alliance's tank-busting attacks.

Robertson subscribed calls for a probe into the United States' use of DU in Bosnia in 1995 and Kosovo in 1999 as "legitimate demands", but added that he was "confident that there is little risk in NATO ammunition's."

"I wouldn't have agreed to these ammunition when I was minister if we knew that they would involve any health hazard. It is a proven technology and valuable on the battlefield," said Robertson, whose was Britain's defence minister in the Kosovo crisis.

Concerning UN complaints of NATO's failure to cooperate with investigations, Robertson said it was only due to "bureaucratic delay, which we all regret."

Robertson said that NATO's North Atlantic Council, the alliance's highest decision-making body made up of the permanent ambassadors in Brussels, had agreed to a request from Italy to provide maps of where DU ammunition had been used.

The council also decided to act as a hub for all national reports into the use of DU, and also offered assistance to the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) if investigators -- currently in Kosovo -- are also sent to Bosnia.

A definitive UNEP report on Kosovo is expected in March.

US fighter jets fired some 31,000 DU rounds during the NATO air war against Yugoslavia, according to the Pentagon. Another 10,800 rounds were fired in 1994-95 in Bosnia, where many of the afflicted peacekeepers were stationed.

Seven Italian soldiers and one aid worker, five Belgian peacekeepers, two Dutch nationals, two Spaniards, two Portuguese and a Czech have died after tours of duty in the Balkans, many from leukemia and other cancers.

taries of the Supreme Court Bar Association (SCBA) was held at its office yesterday afternoon with its President Barrister Mainul Hosen in the chair to discuss the situation.

The meeting was attended by, among others, Barrister Syed Ishtiaque Ahmed, Dr. Kamal Hossain, Advocate Abdul Malek, Advocate Khandaker Mahbubuddin Ahmed, Dr. M. Zahir, Barrister Nazmul Huda, Barrister Jamiruddin Sircar, Advocate Avenuddin, Ataur Rahman and Zainal Abedin.

It is learnt that the meeting decided to form a new forum-Supreme Council of Lawyers--with Barrister Ishtiaque Ahmed as its convenor to 'unite all lawyers to protect the judiciary from interference and keep its independence'.

Pressed by newsmen after the meeting, Mainul Hosen said the meeting was called to 'forge a greater unity among lawyers, keep them above partisan politics and to uphold independence of the judiciary.'

He said that a meeting of the SCBA Executive Committee would be called to discuss the situation.

In a joint statement yesterday evening, 13 senior lawyers including the former presidents and secretaries of SCBA expressed their 'great concern in the manner in which the latest appointments of judges of the Appellate Division have been made.'

'These appear to have been done disregarding time-honoured and established practice thus giving due respect to the views conveyed by the persons holding high constitutional office in relation to the functioning of the Supreme Court, in the course of consultation with them. Without intending any disrespect to those who have been appointed, it is a matter of regret that the manner of their appointment has raised questions of propriety, and generated controversy which could and should have been avoided, in the national interest', the statement said.

Signatories to the statement included the names of those who attended the SCBA meeting in the afternoon.

Most of the undocumented Bangladeshis there are victims of false work permits given to them by fraud recruiters, the sources said.

Thirteen Malaysian employers, 40 Indian, two Indonesian and three Bangladeshi workers were detained on the first day of the crackdown, according to an international news agency report.

Malaysian Immigration Enforcement Director Nasir Ahmad was quoted as saying,

Last year, the immigration department repatriated 97,281 people, mostly Indonesians, and this year we are targeting 100,000 for deportation." Nasir had said that the department would conduct raids, targeting construction and service sectors.

The detainees are being housed in eight deportation camps.

An estimated 5,000 recruiting agents and business concerns in Malaysia hire foreign workers without permit, it was learnt.

In 1998, about one lakh undocumented Bangladeshis were affected in a similar crackdown.

At that time, Malaysia had spent four million US dollars and set up 16 special squads to detect 'overstaying and undocumented foreign workers'. In the process, thousands of jobs were created for local people against the backdrop of an Asian currency crisis.

Some three million Bangladeshi wage earners are working in countries in the Middle East, Gulf and South-East Asia. They remit about Tk. 9,000 crore a year.

The report was first published in the 'Daily Bhorer Kagor' on April 20 last year. Later, the same news was published in a section of newspapers. But Amini did not contradict the news.

Dr Kazi Farook Ahmed filed a criminal case with the CMM's Court, Dhaka against Fazlul Haq Amini on May 14, 2000. After hearing, the CMM's Court issued summon upon the accused to appear before the court, but he did not appear.

The court, later issued a warrant of arrest against Amini on July 2 of the same year.

Amini appeared before the CMM's Court on July 3 and was granted bail upon a bond of Tk 50 with two sureties.
