Poor health care facilities for Jamalpur people

From Muhammad Ali

JAMALPUR, Jan 12: The basic health care facilities for the people of 68 unions in seven upazilas are poor.

The 250-bed general hospital at Jamalpur is in bad shape. Everyday a large number of patients come here from different parts of the district and go back without any health care service.

Because of shortage of medicine, the patients have to purchase those from outside.

The doctors engaged in general hospital and other local health complexes are allegedly busy with their own private practice neglecting the hospital patients.

It is also alleged that some doctors charge extra fees from the patients. Every day five to 10 patients come from the remote places for normal delivery, but doctors allegedly unnecessarily make those surgery easier by taking a good quantity of money.

Child specialist, gynaecologist, orthopaedic, medicine specialist, surgical doctors and anaesthetic experts are always busy with their private practice, it is widely alleged.

Acute scarcity of water, gas and irregular supply of electricity have been causing untold sufferings to the patients. There are two lift pumps, one deep machine and 11 tubewells in the hospital, but the deep machine and 11 tubewells are out of order for a long time. Most of the time the lift pump remains inoperative in absence of repair. The RMO of the hospital told this correspondent that water supply remains suspended in the hospital for the last two years due to technical problem of the pump.

Most of the fans and lights are out of order. The patients have to suffer much for want of sufficient lights and fans. Besides, most of the switch holders and sockets are broken which may cause any accident in the hospital. The main collapsible gate of the hospital is out of order for which security of the patients has been threatened.

Water leaks through the roof of the newly constructed operation theatre during rainy season. The anaesthetic expert remains always absent in the time of operation, according to relevant sources of hospital.

Civil surgeon and superintendent of hospital told this correspondent that PWD is responsible for the repair work but due to hassle between PWD and CMMU, the work of the hospital is being hindered for a long time. PWD had shown reluctance to repair those despite repeated appeals. Though the district has been provided with gas supply, the hospital authority is deprived of the facility.

Moreover the uplift project of Jamalpur General Hospital is being hindered due to fund shortage. Work of upgradation of the 100-bed hospital into 250-bed one, is still uncertain.

Public Works Department (PWD) took up the project to implement the pledge of former Prime Minister of the erstwhile BNP Government. Expenditure of the project was estimated to be Taka eleven crore eighty lakh including construction work of Taka eight crore 70 lakh.

Later on ministry of health handed the project over to the Construction Maintenance and Management Unit (CMMU) to mobilise it and enhance the additional expenditure of Taka one crore as increased staff values and consultants' fee of CMMU amounting to Taka 70 lakh. Work of only Tk 4 crore has been done which is 45 per cent of the project since its inception on December 12, 1995. It is impossible to complete the rest 55 per cent work in schedule time.

Concerned sources said while making project proposal (PP), some important works of post-operative ward, cabin and modern store were excluded.

The contractors have reportedly received Tk Two crore 12 lakh as bill after the completion work of Tk 4 crore due to the procrastination of the Health Ministry.

Glut of hilsa surprises fish traders in coastal districts

BARISAL, Jan 12: Winter is not the season of hilsa. Even then there has been a glut of the delicious fish in the markets of coastal districts, including Barisal, surprising the fish traders.

Hilsa price has unexpectedly declined across the country and it will drop further if the over-supply of the fish continues. "The drop is due to its oversupply," recognised a hilsa trader.

For many hilsa traders, the last season was a bugbear. Hilsa was beyond the reach of common people due to its high price caused by short supply.

Usually, presence of hilsa, except Jatka (small hilsa), in the sea during winter is very low.

But there is plenty this winter. "We didn't see such huge hilsa in the sea in the last 12 years," said a beaming fisherman, disclosing that over 50 tons of hilsa is being supplied to India and across the country everyday.

However, he said although there is an oversupply of hilsa, the size of the fish is small and the weight varies from 500 gram to 1,200 gram.

Braving the biting cold, fishermen are catching hilsa in the sea overnight and rushing to hilsa Mokam (hilsa wholesale market) in the district with hilsa-laden trawlers every morning.

Many fishermen said they even could not catch hilsa in the peak season, but this winter has made a difference for them.

Hannan, 35, a local fisherman, said maximum quantity of hilsa was being caught at Baullah Khola point of the Bay. Besides, there has been a huge catch of the fish in the coastal districts of Barisal and Patuakhali.

Ajit Kumar, a fish trader, said on average four trucks of hilsa are being exported to India everyday from the local hilsa Mokam.

Besides, exporting, they are also supplying seven to eight trucks of hilsa to the country's northern region everyday from here.

During the peak season, hilsa is usually sold at Tk 6,000 per maund while at Tk 2,400 in the off season.

According to exporters, a hilsa weighing over one kg is exported at 1.5 dollar, while that of 500 gram to one kg at one dollar.

The number of hilsa vendors, selling the fish from door to door, has also increased in the district town and capital Dhaka.

Hilsa has also swamped the markets in Luxmipur district, knocking down its price there. It was selling at even cheaper prices on the bank of the Meghna river in Ramgati, Raipur and sadar upazilas. Four hilsas of 12 inches size were selling at Tk 100 to Tk 120.

In capital Dhaka, four pieces of hilsa, weighing over three kgs, were selling at Tk 150 to Tk 170.

Terrorists force newly-wed couple to stay separate for toll

FENI, Jan 12: They married seven days back. But they could not yet make their wedding night as terrorists forced them to stay in separate houses for toll, reports UNB.

M Yusuf, son of Abdul Mannan of Sundarpur village in Baligaon union of sadar upazila, married Fahima Akther, daughter of Abul Khair Master of the neighboring village, on January 5.

After the marriage, Yusuf took the bride back home. Dressed in her bridal costume, the meek and mild bride, a college girl, was waiting to meet her husband at the bridal chamber. But that's not to be.

Hearing the news of the marriage, Rabiu Haq, son of Siddiq Mia and Aminul Haq, said to be terrors of the village, rushed to the residence of the bride to collect toll. But they got frustrated when they came to know that the bride was already taken to her husband's house. They did not stop there.

The armed hoodlums stormed the house of the bridegroom firing gunshots and exploding crackers when his family members received the bride with sweets in the evening.

"You'll face dire consequences for holding the marriage ceremony without paying us toll," they shouted terrorising the guests celebrating the wedding.

The frightened guardians first took the bride to a nearby house and then sent her back to her parents' house at night.

Having failed to realise toll, the ruffians assaulted Yusuf's elder brother Abul Kalam. They demanded Tk 30,000 and warned that the newlywed couple would not be allowed to enjoy the wedding night until their demand of toll was met.

They asked the guardians of the two families to keep the bride and bridegroom in their respective houses until the payment of the toll.

Recently, Yusuf paid a hand-some amount of toll to the same terrorist group when he returned from abroad and thought that his family would be spared from paying wedding toll.

Locals said Rabiu Haq and Aminul Haq, leaders of a major political party, were enjoying the blessing of police and thus perpetrating terrorist acts in the area.

"Vandalism in the troubled district has perhaps neared the mediaeval age," lamented an old man of the village, who declined to be identified.
