

Fruits, fish worth Tk 50 cr perish due to lack of preservation facilities

SYLHET, Jan 23: In absence of preservation, processing and transportation facilities perishable goods like seasonal fruits and fish worth Tk 50 crore are damaged in Sylhet division every year, reports UNB.

Jackfruits, pineapples, lemon and banana grow plenty in the frontier areas of Moulvibazar, Sylhet and Sunamganj and Srimongal.

Kulaura, Borolekha, Srimongal, Kamalganj, Rajnagar of Moulvibazar district are famous for jackfruits, pineapple, lemon and banana production.

Though these fruits grows on over 20,000 acres of hilly land in greater Sylhet in the Bangla months of Joistha and Ashar but a huge quantum of these perish due to lack of adequate transport facilities.

Local growers said fruits worth over crores of taka could be saved from destruction if processing plants are established and smooth transportation facilities developed in the region.

On the other hand, the region is rich with fish resources, as vast tracts of land in the division are haor, baor and jolmohals (water bodies). But fish worth over Tk 40 crore are damaged every year due to lack of processing and preserving facilities, local traders said.

There are over 2,000 jolmohals (water bodies) and over 25,000 ponds in the division.

There are also water bodies on over 60,000 acres of land in Sunamganj alone, suitable for fish production.

Official sources said the annual average production of fish in these water bodies is 70,000 to 80,000 tons.

The poor fishermen, traders and growers are forced to sell the fish at throwaway prices in absence of freezing facilities.

Besides, due to bad communication network and absence of marketing facilities the local fishermen and traders are deprived of huge income every year.

The government can earn at least Tk 25 crore every year by exporting fish abroad with the expansion of preservation, transportation and marketing facilities, local leaders said.

At present there are only four fish processing plants in Sunamganj and Habiganj districts in private sector.

Annual Botanical Confce opens Speakers put accent on saving of medicinal plants

From Staff Correspondent

CHITTAGONG, Jan 23: Speakers at a conference have expressed concern over fast depletion of medicinal plants in the country and suggested restrictions be imposed on harvesting of the plants from natural reserves.

They said the medicinal plants should be cultivated instead of collecting from the wilds.

The speakers were addressing the inaugural session of Annual Botanical Conference-2000 on 'Floral Diversity of Bangladesh and its Conservation' on Saturday at the auditorium of Research Centre for Mathematical and Physical Science (RCMPS), Chittagong University.

They also called for mass awareness among people to conserve the plants.

Professor M.A. Aziz Khan, founder of the Department of Botany and former vice chancellor of Chittagong University, inaugurated the two-day conference.

Presided over by Chittagong University Vice Chancellor Professor Abdul Mannan, the inaugural session was addressed, among others, by CU Pro-VC Professor Abu Yousuf, Dean of CU Science Faculty Professor M Nurul Mostafa, President of Bangladesh Botanical Society (BBS) Professor M Arshad Ali, BBS Secretary General Professor Abul Bashar and Secretary of the Conference Organising Committee Professor M K Pasha.

In his keynote paper, Professor M Salar Khan, Honorary Advisor of Bangladesh National Herbarium, said it is unfortunate that when we are realising the importance of floral diversity, which is under severe threat, the number of plant taxonomists in the country is decreasing. Potentialities of lower plants are not known enough compared to those of higher plants, he added.

"It is high time we conducted survey on lower group of plants. Utilising the indigenous knowledge base, efforts should be made to increase the use of the diversity for food, medicine and other purposes."

Guest birds not safe in Jamuna shoals

From Akhturuzzman Bablu

SIRAJGANJ, Jan 23: Indiscriminate hunting of guest birds is continuing along Kazipur shoal area, Chalan beel, a water body, and Chowhali shoal area.

Like previous years thousands of guest birds have started arriving in those areas since the beginning of winter this year. Migratory birds, our flying guests in the winter have been crowding the shoal lands along Jumuna river side, Kazipur shoal, Chalan beel and Chowhali shoal area.

These migratory birds coming from the Siberian region due to severe cold are taking shelter in these areas in search of comparatively warmer places.

The migratory birds, which are seen in the areas are of various species. Besides, professional as well as amateur bird hunters are rushing to these places, where the migratory birds are taking shelter sensing their presence in a bid to kill those. Some of the hunters also catch the birds and sell them in the open markets and on different footpaths of the district.

There are different ways of hunting the birds. Some hunters use guns and some other cages to catch the birds. They also apply a number of other methods to net the guests.

The hunters do not bother to obey the government ban on hunting migratory birds. There is a law in the country for punishment to the illegal bird hunters. But hoodwinking wholesale hunting of the guest birds is continuing in the region due to lack of strict enforcement of law. On the other hand, the local administration is maintaining silence regarding indiscriminate hunting of the guest birds. If this trend continues unabated, the migratory birds would stop coming into the country which would harm the ecological balance, fear weather experts.

According to the naturalists, the migratory birds come to these areas during the winter season flying from the ice-fields in Siberia, thousands of kilometers north of here, to escape the biting cold. While making a day long trip this correspondent saw that the areas had turned into a heavenly abode of guest birds. Some of the migratory birds had been seen flying cheerfully on the sandy fields, which have emerged along the river and some had been catching small fishes from water. The scene attracts lots of traveller and local people. Talking to this correspondent, the local people have alleged that natural movement of the guest birds is being hindered by the bird hunters. They have also complained that a section of professional bird hunters catch the guest birds daily for selling them at the local hats and bazaars despite the government ban on it. They underlined the need for intervention of law enforcing agencies to ensure the safe stay of the guest birds in their temporary winter home.

The birds hunting has turned into a trade for some unscrupulous people in the region. Anwar Hossain along with professor of an American university and his brother remained engaged in a dreadful clash between the people of shoal areas when they had gone for hunting guest birds.

They were caught by the people and mercilessly beaten up and later handed over them to police. A murder case has been lodged with Kazipur PS against the hunters but police dismissed the case in exchange of money.

No end to share croppers' woes in Panchagarh

PANCHAGARH, Jan 23: With the advent of Boro season, money lenders in rural areas of the district have geared up their illegal activities to hook up the sharecroppers and marginal farmers, reports UNB.

"Sharecroppers and marginal farmers have always been the targets of the money lenders as they cannot avail of bank loan," said a Krishi Bank official insisting on anonymity.

A farmer at Satkhamar village in Autrai upazila said, "banks do not sanction us loan as we have no collateral forcing us to borrow money from the money lenders at a high interest rate."

Giving a nod to him, another farmer, Hasibul, said the land owners take loan from banks against their lands, but they do not help the sharecroppers for cultivating lands.

"As a matter of fact, cultivation of IRRI-Boro in most areas completely depends on the money lenders," he said.

Meanwhile, cattle lifting, particularly in frontier Autrauri, Tetulia and Boda upazilas has marked a rise dealing a severe blow to the beleaguered farmers.

Many frustrated farmers said it would not be possible for them to bring all targeted lands under cultivation this season due to price-hike of diesel, pesticide and fertiliser.

Another problem they are now facing is rapid fall of water level. They said shallow pump machines these days cannot pump out water.

1,850 poultry farms in 2 districts face closure threat

From Abdul Monayem Khan

COX'S BAZAR, Jan 23: Some 1,850 poultry farms in 12 upazilas of Cox's Bazar and Bandarban districts are on verge of closure due to scarcity of chicks and their price hike.

Farm owners and livestock office sources said, the rapidly flourished poultry farms in the two districts are now facing acute shortage of chicks in the local hatcheries that caused sharp rise in their prices.

A large number of owners in both the districts are running the farms with smuggled Indian 'sick' chicks bought with higher cost.

Acute shortage of chicks has already left about 150 poultry farms closed, local people said.

In last four years, a large number of unemployed youths of the districts were engaged in poultry farming and set up about 2,000 farms.

There were 500 to 3,000 local chicks in each farm and the death rate was only 5 per cent.

The shortage of local chicks started in July 2,000.

Local farm owners urged the concerned authorities to provide necessary support to the local hatcheries to continue the production of chicks to save a large number of poultry farms.

On the other hand, dairy farms of the two districts are on verge of closure due to various problems including lack of marketing facilities of milk and scarcity of fodder.

A owner of a dairy farm said that, in the absence of marketing facilities the owners of the dairy farms are not getting reasonable price of the milk.

Acute shortage of fodder and essential livestock drugs is also hindering the growth of dairy farms in the districts.

Taking advantage, a large number of dairy farms were established in Cox's Bazar and Bandarban but most owners did not receive any training in this regard.

They are unable to diagnose the cause of various cattle diseases and the veterinary hospitals, situated in upazila and district headquarters, could hardly cope with the large scale problems.

Acute shortage of fodder and its increasing price have left the farmers to depend on rice, wheat, straw, bran, oil cake and maize which are too costly.

Hundreds of cattles, die due to malnutrition and lack of proper treatment facilities.

Various diseases like khura, worm infection, ringworm and diarrhoea take a heavy toll on animals causing severe financial loss to the farmers.

Victory in UP polls proves to be a bane for Subarna

MYMENSINGH, Jan 23: Victory in the Union Parishad (UP) election against an influential candidate proved to be a bane for Subarna Rani Mitra.

Apparently inflamed by the audacity of an ordinary housewife, the influential coterie accused Subarna's husband Nikhil Chandra Mitra of illicit relation with another married woman and brought him before village arbitration.

The arbiters, allegedly under influence of the coterie, pronounced punishment for Nikhil in accordance with a 'fatwa' (an Islamic edict) that prescribed 101 'dorrha' (whiplashes) for infidelity.

Hapless Nikhil was dug up to his waist in the earth and meted out the 101 lashes with a cane in presence of several hundred people who witnessed agnost the barbarous act.

It all happened on November 5 last year in village Adhpakhia of Mankone union in Muktagachha upazila of Mymensingh district.

The woes of Subarna and Nikhil have not ended there. Outcast in the society and haunted by the humiliation, they left their home. They are now living with relatives in Muktagachha upazila town.

Diligent and affectionate Subarna won the seat of woman member from her ward in the last election to Union Parishad. She defeated the candidate set up by village leaders Safur Mondal, Ismail Hossain, Helaluddin and others.

Since then she and her family became the eyesore of Safur Mondal and his associates who instigated the 'mastans' (hoodlums) to extract tolls from them. On November 1, the toll collectors demanded Tk 10,000. "Somehow I managed Tk 1,500 and gave them," Nikhil told this correspondent when met at Mutagachha this week. Nikhil would not name the 'mastans' for fear of further reprisal.

Narrating his woes, Nikhil said that in the morning of November 4 last year, he and his wife Subarna were returning home after taking bath in a nearby pond.

On way, Safur Mondal and some of his associates accosted Nikhil and Subarna and asked them to go to the house of Rina Akhter, said to be the wife of Manu of the village. The couple went to Rina's house without suspecting anything.

There Safur and his associates accused Nikhil of illicit relation with Rina Akhter. Rina, who was in collusion with the group, admitted the fact.

The arbitration and punishment to Nikhil, based on a 'fatwa' by Kazi Ayub Ali, attracted attention of human rights organisations. Most villagers avoid journalists visiting the area for fear of musclemen.

Kazi Ayub, however, denied that he gave the 'fatwa'. "I was present in the arbitration meeting that day, but I have not given any fatwa", he told this correspondent during a meeting at his home in Mankone union.

Jahan Ali, chairman of Mankone Union Parishad, who presided over the arbitration meeting that awarded the punishment to Nikhil told this correspondent that he had no alternative. Safur Mondal and his associates gave the meeting 'wrong information" on which the villagers got angry and demanded exemplary punishment to Nikhil.

"But I was not in agreement with the 'matbars' (village leaders) for awarding such punishment," added Jahan Ali.

The brutality stirred the conscience of the people in the area. Human rights organisations, women organisations and local Trinamul Sangathan organised processions and rallies at Muktagachha upazila town condemning the arbitration and demanding punishment to the arbiters.

All this also drew attention of the police. "We've immediately extended help to the victims to file case against the offenders," OC of Muktagachha thana SM Kabir informed.

Thirteen people were accused in the case. After speedy investigation, police submitted chargesheet against 14 persons accused Gaful Mondal, Ismail Hossain, Helaluddin, Abdul Mannan, Hossain Ali, Abul Hossain, Kazi Ayub Ali, Noor Hossain Farazi, Abdur Rahim, Sultan Ali, Taleb Ali, Abdul Hamid and Hasen Ali, and UP chairman Jahan Ali.

On surrender, they were all granted bail by the court.

OC Kabir said despite assurance of security, Nikhil and Subarna are afraid of returning home in their village Adhpakhya.

"Why have I gone for election?" lamented Subarna cursing her fate. "They will kill us if we return to the village," she said in a trembling voice. UNB Feature
