WB to launch dialogues in S Asia to improve edn

World Bank will soon launch dialogues in South Asia and other parts of the world to improve the overall education sector in the developing countries.

The dialogues are part of the World Bank's advisory service to provide technical expertise towards higher education systems.

Bangladesh is one of the three South Asian countries where stakeholders will stimulate debate and nurture local consensus through such dialogues on higher education reform. It is expected to help the client countries of World Bank to develop better workforces for the 21st century. Other countries in South Asia to hold such dialogues are Sri Lanka and Pakistan.

According to a World Bank statement here in the city on Wednesday a two-day dialogue titled 'Bangladesh Higher Education Roundtable' will be held on February 28 and March 1 this year. Its main objective is to provide an opportunity to the stakeholders to review the factors impeding planning and implementation, generally in higher education in Bangladesh.

rather than process. The dialogues will take place with the support of host countries.

The statement said these initiatives were being conducted explicitly without regard to the current project funding by World Bank. The dialogues are intended most importantly to stimulate debate and nurture local consensus on higher education reform, irrespective of government's borrowing profile or priorities. During the business sessions, the participants will examine pragmatic planning options relative to Bangladesh's human resources development goals. As many as 80 representatives from the government, public and private higher education institutions, non-government organisations, private industry and the wider donor community will attend the first-ever such event, the statement said.
