Criticising the opposition leader, Mohammad Nasim said that the killer of police constable was brought to the same platform to address a public rally. He said that Awami League never made police their target while in the opposition.

Earlier, the prime minister inaugurated the proposed 10-storey modern hospital complex of the police. Four storeys of the north block of the complex were constructed at a cost of Taka 30 crore, while the rest six would be built at a cost of Taka 54 crore under a revised budget.

The expert examined Sangu field and recommended late last year that the field could safely produce up to 250mmcfd gas from four wells. Sources said it was once tested that Sangu can supply up to 295mmcfd.

Shell remains worried about payment by Petrobangla. Recently Shell executives met the finance minister expressing their concerns. While assuring that the payments would be cleared soon, the minister observed that the backlog of bills were created due to financial mismanagement of Petrobangla's affiliates like Titas.

BJP-Trinamool honeymoon seems over

As BJP-Trinamool alliance limp, senior Congress leader Kamal Nath, deputed by Sonia, held talks with Mamata in Kolkata Sunday night for seat sharing in the West Bengal assembly polls. Congress has always been keen on seat sharing with Trinamool Congress and made repeated attempts to woo Mamata out of the BJP-led alliance. The Congress has demanded that Trinamool part ways with the BJP. Kamal Nath himself told newsmen here Monday that he held talks with Mamata on Sunday after receiving an assurance from her that Trinamool would have no truck with BJP. Nath indicated that the talks between Congress and Trinamool on seat sharing would take some more time before a clear picture emerged. Congress sources did not rule out the possibility of a meeting between Mamata and Sonia Gandhi in the coming

But seat sharing between Congress and Trinamool is easier said than done, sources in both parties admit. Mamata has already announced the candidates of her party for 228 of the 294 seats in the West Bengal assembly and would have to pull out a number of them to accommodate Congress nominees, an exercise that could trigger strong resentment within the Trinamool fold.

Congress sources say the party would like to runs for 42 seats it has at present in the state assembly and get some of the 39 seats Trinamool has offered to the BJP under an agreement already worked out. Congress had 79 seats in state assembly after the previous elections in 1996, but a series of exodus to Trinamool over the past few years saw the party's strength dwindle to Trinamool leadership feels that Congress cannot hope to decide seat sharing on the basis of its past electoral performance as ground realities in West Bengal have undergone major changes. The Congress had won 79 seats when Mamata was in that party. Mamata quit Congress in 1998 and formed Trinamool Congress.

Congress high command does acknowledge the changed political scene in West Bengal and Mamata as the undisputed leader of an alternative government formation in the state. Both Nath and Pranab Mukherjee, president of the West Bengal unit of Congress, have said Mamata will be the Chief Minister if the coalition led by Trinamool Congress is voted to power in the coming elections. What Congress is concerned with in the bargaining for seat-sharing is not the number of seats but the "winnability" of seats allotted to it, party sources here say. The efforts for Trinamool's alliance with Congress have set off murmurs of resentment in a section of Mamata's party which till the other day described Congress as the "B-team" of West Bengal's ruling CPI (M).

"How will we protect our credibility to voters if we tie up with Congress," said one senior Trinamool leader.

In the event of a break-up of alliance between Trinamool and BJP of failure of tie-up efforts between Trinamool and Congress. it will be music for the ruling Left Front either way.
