Starry night

Lux-Anandadhara Miss Photogenic Bangladesh 2001 crowns new beauty queens

ZIAUL KARIM

DHAKA'S literati, journalists, artists, and glitterati had a richer dose of fun and entertainment at the Lux-Anandadhara beauty pageant at Sheraton Winter Garden on Saturday evening and were witness to the birth of a new Lux-Anandadhara star Shuvra Das.

Liberally spiced with song and dance routines and immaculately punctuated with jokes and puns, the Lux-Anandadhara evening was a night of the nights in the city's otherwise dull and drab life.

Lux-Anandadhara has over the years established itself as a leading forum for the country's beauty queens who find it a stepping stone to instant stardom.

Kicked off a little after 7 in the evening with warm greetings from the editor of fortnightly Anandadhara Shahadat Chowdhury and Asaduzzaman Noor, the show began to unfold with all its charm with the recap of Lux-Anandadhara 2000 on the big screen.

Quoting the French poet Baudelaire, the Anandadhara editor said, "It is not possible to analyse or explain beauty, what one can only do is write a sonnet in praise of beauty." Indeed beauty can only be celebrated and cherished and Shahadat Chowdhury spelled out the essence of beauty and the spirit of the evening in his crisp welcome speech.

Enter the compere of the evening Afzal Hossain, exit the welcoming party- Shahadat Chowdhury and Asaduzzaman Noor. Afzal injected the requisite glamour and style to the beauty extravaganza. Saturday night was also a proof to his ever-green debonair image that still enchants the city.

Then came the ten finalists of the Lux-Anandadhara Miss Photogenic Bangladesh 2001 in salwar-kameez ensemble sashaying down the catwalk. Gorgeous as they were, confidence was also writ large in their strides.

The finalists of this year's contest were shortlisted from among three thousand hopefuls who sent in their applications from all over the country. After preliminary scrutiny, this number was narrowed down to a 100 after which a second round of selection brought out the final 30 pre-finalists. A panel of judges then selected the final ten among them who made it to the final round on Friday evening. These young girls seeking a break in the glamorous world of modelling, fashion and TV, knew that the most coveted crown of beauty in the country could be their passport to fame and fortune.

Among these hopefuls were Ayesha Hossain Anika, a 5ft 4 inches tall, attractive graduate, already working as an air stewardess, with high ambitions for her future. Anika wants to be a lawyer in future alongside working as a model in the glamorous world of fashion.

Urmii Hossain, a 5ft 2 inches tall young girl is a candidate for the upcoming HSC exams. She wants to be a Chartered Accountant in the future. Dalia Nasrin Shampa, a 5ft 3 inches of height, is a student of second year BSS. She has aspirations to be a successful lawyer in addition to being a model.

Tasmin Hossain Shumi, 5ft 4 inches tall and a university student, wants to be an actress and model in future. Mita Siddique, also 5ft 3 inches tall and a student of Accountancy has her eyes set on a career as a fashion designer.

Meher Afroz, one of the tallest among all the participants at 5ft 6 inches of height is a student of Honours degree in mathematics. She is also a dancer and wants to open a dance school in the future. Shubra Das, 5ft 3 inches tall, is doing her masters degree alongside holding a full time job.

Syeda Farhana Rahman Jecy, is 5ft 2 inches tall and a student of first year HSC. She hopes to find success as a singer. Humaira Haider Shurovi, a 5ft 5 inches tall student of first year Honours, also looks for success as a singer and fashion designer in the future.

Bibha Ahmed, a tallsome girl with a height of 5ft 6 inches is a candidate of this year's HSC exams. She looks for success as a business-woman in the future.

Mita Siddique and Meher Afroz were crowned the two runner-ups.

"I'm happy and don't have words to express my feelings after winning Lux-Anandadhara Miss Photogenic Bangladesh 2001. I couldn't trust my ears even after the announcement. I had a sleepless night yesterday," said Shuvra Das while talking to The Daily Star on Sunday morning.

Exhibition

Panoramic elegance of the western ghats of South India

Dhaka-based American photographer Ian Lockwood's solo exhibition held in Delhi

CULTURAL CORRESPONDENT

YOUNG and creative talent in the field of black and white photography, Ian Lockwood once again impressed the guests when he held his second solo exhibition "The Western Ghats: Portrait & Panorama" in New Delhi.

If one recounts, it was the same artist whose first solo photography presentation "Shadows and Sunlight" was held at the Drik Gallery in Dhaka last November, predominantly delineating the forests and ancient sacred trees of rural and urban Bangladesh.

Inquiring about the childhood days of this US-born 30-year-old "Typical Bengali guy", one notes a deep-rooted attachment of his family with the rural life and common people of Bangladesh and South India.

One very important aspect of the forthcoming exhibition is that all the fifty pieces of work to be displayed were printed and mounted by the artist himself and other related publications were done at Drik in Dhaka. Further collaborative efforts are proved as the pictures are of remote South Indian landscape for display at a North Indian gallery!

"My interest in the western ghats stretches back several generations. Though I am of American decent, yet our family has been living in South Asia for three generations. I grew up in the South Indian hill-station of Kodakannal attending boarding school while exploring mountains in my leisure hours. For the last eight years I am residing in between South India and Bangladesh, presently being an environmental science & photography teacher at the American International School at Baridhara, Dhaka", informs Ian Lockwood.

As Ian roamed a lot in the western ghats of the South Indian region he is fully aware of its present poor environmental status due to man-made and natural destruction. Still the ghats are quite a rich biodiversity "hotspot" and "rainmaker" of the magnificent and mesmerising eco-system of India.

During monsoon, opening up of the heavens transform the natural forests of the area into a storage ground of precious water, extremely vital for the regeneration of life during the drier, struggling seasons of the year. Like a gigantic piece of sponge, the peninsular India quenches thirst with this rainwater during the following barren months.

Western ghats a range of South Indian mountains in Tamil Nadu are a superb home to some highly endemic species of rare and priceless plants and wild creatures found nowhere else on earth!

The filty black and white prints are designed for education and inspiration besides showing high artistic experience of this genius. According to the photographer, his exhibition is aimed at awakening common society to the beauty and fragile state of this precious eco-system of the South Indian geography. A wide range of natural habitats are exposed through his works and the spectators would understand the role played by the ghats in water regulation for the Indian plains, an important location for precious biodiversity. An extreme urge for eco-conservation of this part of the globe turns the American photographer into a true server of global eco-conservation.

The unique taste and sophistication of the photographer is unveiled through his meticulous silver printing of the breathtaking landscapes. Explaining the technical side he reveals that the pictures have been snapped using three various formats including a wide-angle panoramic camera. This particular concept is to give a detailed and distinct portrait of the mountain range exploiting the subtle tonal magnitude of black & white photography.

The dramatic "Kalakad Tree" brings about a successful effect of this tonal magic as the Hindi name "Kalakad" implies artist or champion, the tree stands boldly over the vast plains against a contrasting dark overcast condition like some lonely aesthetic figure, exploring and guarding the scenic vista. Some interesting vegetation around symbolise the important role played by the western ghats in ecology, one of the 25 global environmental "hotspots" which should all be protected by us for the betterment of nature and civilisation.

Some of his works are truly spellbinding. A common feature of his work is the presence of human figure, an attempt to mingle nature with man. As he concludes, nature and man are correlative creations of the cosmos. None can survive without the other, a firm truth since the evolution of life on earth.

"Lower falls" is a piece of human nature combination where a group of women are seen taking refreshing shower from the pure springs of the magnificently huge fall. In fact, this photograph emphasises water and people. The western ghats provide water to the plains of peninsular India. Common people depend on the hills for water. If the natural forests and mountains are cleared off then the whole community would suffer due to shortage of water! Thus people have a very good reason to protect the pristine ecology and waterfalls.

The intellectual vastness of the photographer is brought to light when we see his work "Ullam pari". Here the richness and might of the cliffs of western ghats are shown. It is a panoramic picture showing the dramatic cliffs of the ghats in Tamil Nadu where the Palmi hills are located. Over the native high altitude grasslands and shola forest approaches the southwestern monsoon across the distant Kerala hills. The notion of this picture is to elicit the drama of these mountains. The absence of human element is compensated by the presence of a wide variety of striking components of the lofty wilderness.

The exhibition was inaugurated by Valmik Thapar of the Ranthambore Foundation on March 24 (Saturday), 2001 at 6:30 p.m. at "the gallery" of India International Center Annexe (IIC), New Delhi and concluded on March 31.
