A concert to remember

Coca-Cola Dhaka Dhoon Concert

NAFID IMRAN AHMED

DHAKA'S music lovers had much to savour at the Coca-Cola 'Dhaka Dhoon' concert at the Army Stadium on April 13. The concert featured some of the front-ranking musical groups and talents of the country. But the

The audience enjoyed it very much and sang along.

Next came Dalchhut- a new band in town. They have already been acclaimed as an alternative band and their number 'Tumi Amar', very much, proved their distinct style. They have already released two albums. Their first album was released in 1991. Every single song of that album was remarkable. Till now they have released 5 albums. 'Progressive Rock' is what they call their music. Their lyrics are about social facts. Recently they have a new line up. Before the concert bandleader Tipu said, "Warfaze has always stood for cynocure of the musical feast was music sensations from West Bengal Anjan Dutta and Nochiketa.

The concert was due to kick off at 3 p.m. but the crowd started pouring in the Dhaka Army Stadium premises long before the scheduled time.

The audience toasted the foot-tapping music of Anjan Dutta. He began his performance with the song, 'Hello Bangladesh'. The crowd simply loved the song.

Anjan said, "Today's concert has a special cause. It's for a child who will one day overcome his sufferings". His next song, John Denver's 'Sunshine', was dedicated to the boy suffering from cancer. The audience went crazy and sang along with him as he played his all-time favourites, 'Maryann', 'Hasi ar Hasina' and 'Ranjana', one after another. Before the next number, Anjan talked about his friend Mohan, who had a band during the '70s known as 'Mohin-er Choragolli'. He played one of their numbers, 'Tomay Dilom'. Next he played 'Boshe Achi Estatione' and 'Kanchanjangha'. Then Anjan's guitar player sang 'RBS Shci Tumi'.

album 'Aah' became quite popular. But it was their second release 'Hridoypur' which made them popular. Recently the band is working on their third album, which will be released shortly. In the concert they performed 'Erpor Chole Asho', 'Ami Tomake Bole Debo', 'Praner Shonkolon' and 'Kano Tumi Nei Je Amar'.

Nochiketa took the stage next. He went off with his famous number 'Anubihin Poth Chola Jibon'. His voice worked like magic and the audience came alive. Nochiketa performed his popular numbers, 'Shankari Karmachari', 'Tumi Ke', 'Onirban' and 'Ambition'.

Warfaze, one of the front-ranking musical groups of the country was next to the stage. But before they took the stage there was a slight disturbance. The show was paused for awhile.

Formed in 1984, the band became very famous when their first charity. We are participating in a concert after quite some time and with a new line-up, so there will be surprises." It was indeed a surprise. They started off with 'Hotasha' a number from their latest album Alo. The audience was moved to see the new line-up's performance. They went back to their first album next and played 'Shadhikar' and 'Boshe Achi'.

It has been seven years since the people of Bangladesh have seen the pop 'guru' Azam Khan perform in a live concert. Dhaka Dhoon provided this rare opportunity to see him onstage and perform live. Pop-King Azam Khan started his musical career after the Liberation War with a band titled 'Uccharan'. His first album titled 'Ek Jug' was released in 1982.

The concert will no doubt stay in the memories of Dhaka's music lovers for a long time to come.

Exhibition

A Spanish serenade with sylvan scenes

Mela's dulcet sweeps of colours

FAYZA HAQ

MELA Ferrer, who recently had her exhibition at "Shilparag", Dhanmadi, went into the fine arts world as she was inspired by her father, who was a decorator. After school she went into the university to do printmaking, having done serious drawing and painting since the age of 14. She says, "The artists who have inspired me were the Spanish and Italian ones like Picasso and Morandi. Ben Nicholson from UK also had influence on me. I went into an art and crafts institute that made books so I naturally turned to print making. I was taught lithography, engraving with paper as the basic media. All my works are etching. I have come a long way and the process of learning was not easy. I engrave on zinc plates and use aquatints. When you are creating something new, this experimentation naturally has you on edge till the work is complete."

The artist: Mela Ferrer

"My work is modern to the point of being abstract but I have not suffered from a dearth of enthusiasts for them, although today people are going back to realism in a big way."

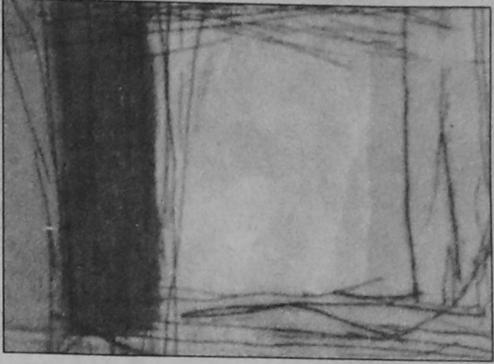

In her half moon work and in the background are brown and gold rectangles with etchings at the side. A streak traverses the moon. Shades of gold, orange and white from the base of pencil work on the subject. "Seawater" has studied the jade and emerald green of the waves from the sea. Pale and dark greens combine to form the print. There are three rectangles with lines going through them. In front are purple, pink and yellow slabs of rectangle to offset the main hues of the restless sea. In "Lade" we have purple and beige which Mela insists are the basic colours of the raw jade. In it are three fascinating shades of green to boggle your mind, with more yellow rectangles at the back to project the subject. The different tints being placed side by side makes you wonder and ponder about the beauty of the gem. Mela says, "Before jade is cut and refined, the basic tint is purple, I insist."

"Orange Garden" (Narenjel) has its name from the poems of Lorca a Spanish poet who wrote a lot about the orange gardens in Spain. Here we find a maze of geometrical shapes with sharp edges. These are pale and dark blue ones to highlight the basic orange of the fruit garden in summer. There are motifs on top of one of the rectangles while a brownish line is carefully included at the side. "Autumn Rhythm" has the fanciful combination of soft geometrical shapes once again. "The rhythm is in the colours. There are no obvious trees and leaves for you to see. The colours alone are there to make you think of autumn. The red, blue and yellow along with green are there to take you to the rich world of fruits and flowers. There is a lot of yellow in it too. Pencil sketches relieve the monotony and heighten your imaginative sensations," Mela says. The crayon lines on the pale shades with its touch of red cool your imagination.

In "Bank of the river" are purple, yellow, gray, blue and green meeting and swerving together with the orange slab on top. The colours merge while the rectangles meet with another in a fascinating state of harmony. "When you sit and rest along the riverside, there are the hues that accost you. Then you can dream your own individual dreams, lulled by the tranquil river side. You can contemplate on swimming, fishing or rowing or even just meditating and resting according to your fancy," Mela says. In "The silver mirror" are once again placid and peaceful colours that make you feel enchanted with the bold sweeps of lines and shades. "There is a gray rectangle with white colours in between, with a dramatic brown line running through the composition. This is held together by a rough frame of pale bluish-green rectangles on three sides and green on the fourth front."

"Alba" (dawn) has the sun rising bottom to lend interesting texture. "Landscape" ushers in regular shapes of different colours, including pinkish, beige, brown, blue, green and white, with little dots and lines all over them to relieve the monotony. This is an aerial view of the countryside. "In the Garden" has brown, beige and green sweeps that are outlined with brown. Here again we get a modern concept of a scene which is suggested rather than put in specific shapes and sizes. Everything is hinted at rather than presented with photographic reality.

in the form of a circle, around which are rectangles of gray, different shades of blue, pink, with squiggles running through them. There are also brown lines running from top to

"I mix techniques such as etching, soft ground (engraving) and aquatints. I have a studio and have to find time after looking after my husband Monir and son Arman and the rest of the housework. I tend to do most of the work during the day when I can best see the colours," Mela says. Apart from print making she likes to do collage with paper and canvas, and loves reading and watching films.

Mela has studied at the Arts and Crafts Institute and has graduated from the Complutense University in Madrid. She has had eight solo exhibits and has taken part in more than 10 joint ventures. She has two awards from Spain.

Festus Mogae President of Botswana with Tim Sebastian on BBC's Hardtalks at 12:30 and 3:30 pm President Mogae presides over what was "once the Cinderella of the colonial era," the African country is "the very model of a modern black democracy" according to Time Magazine. Since literally striking it rich, 30 years ago with the discovery of vast reserves of diamond, the country's health and education system has become the envy of the developing world. However, the country, where one out of every 3 adults is infected with HIV, is being crippled by Aids. Tim Sebastian asks president Mogae why he's turned a blind eye to the problems of his African neighbours, including human rights violations in Zimbabwe.
