LATE S. M. ALI DHAKA MONDAY APRIL 30, 2001

This is unfair

EC should cryahalt

T is difficult to shrug off the impression that the Prime Minister has embarked on electioneering on some scale at government expense. Her cabinet colleagues are not far behind. Government protocol, funds, facilities, including surface transports and helicopters, seem to be pressed into service for thinly veiled official functions otherwise designed to canvass for the AL before polls.

There has been a flurry of foundation-laying ceremonies for variegated mini new projects inexplicably at the final moments of the transition from an old, exhausted budget to a new one. One lakh tons of wheat has been reportedly allocated to MPs and probable election contestants for distribution among their constituencies in an undisguised bid to curry favour with the voters. The PM's purported introduction of party candidates to the audience at certain places with the party's election symbol 'boat' displayed would not have raised any eye-brows if it were done at party functions. But that is hardly the case. This is unethical because other political parties are devoid of official facilities to be indulging in such a luxury.

In a democracy, the standard practice with a government in its lame duck phase, six months prior to any election to be precise, has been to refrain from making any fresh allotments or allocations of material or money anywhere that could be even remotely suggestive of any design to buy up votes. This is a far cry from what the PM herself did when early elections were being vigorously mooted: she directed all concerned not to take up any new project thereby picking up a laurel at that time for fair-mindedness.

We never tired of demurring that in matters of governance the AL has failed to draw a line between the party and the government. The same syndrome continues when it faces the litmus test of offering fair conditions to the Opposition before polls.

We believe the Election Commission has an obligation as well as the statutory writ to call a halt to the use of state apparatus and funds by the ruling party for election purposes.

Huge amount lost in VAT evasion Stop defrauding the national economy evasion has acquired huge and endemic proportions. Companies representing a wide spectrum of business activities, from consumer goods manufacturers, to capital industries, service concerns and food producers, all have been evading payment of Value Added Tax with regularity and virtual impunity. The VAT owed by just six companies equals a staggering Taka 148 crore. They are among 60 VAT defaulters who have been issued demand notices for payment of outstanding VAT but have moved writs and obtained stay orders from the High Court.

It is no mystery how these companies shortchange the exchequer. They try to elude accurate assessments by maintaining incomplete and even falsified records of transactions that fall under the VAT net. Most companies are owned by members of the ruling party or the main opposition parties, or have close connections to them. In most instances, political pressure is brought to bear on the National Board of Revenue to halt investigations into default cases. As a last resort, the companies move the courts and stall settlement of their dues.

Abhorrent as this systematic defrauding of the national wealth is, it is even more heinous that the evaders do not hesitate to collect VAT from consumers. They continue to mark up their goods and services by the 15 per cent mandatory VAT charge, but do not pay up the amount collected into the national wealth.

We can only condemn this parasitic economic crime. The loss to our nation is obvious. VAT contributes a little more than half of the country's total revenue earnings, but it would be much higher without these default cases. Fraud on this systemic level, aided and abetted by influential political quarters, is eating into the economy. Unless the authorities make an example of these offenders the rot will continue, sapping whatever gains we make, while relentlessly extracting a price from ordinary citizens.

The rising trajectory of India's military power

BRIG (RTD) M ABDUL HAFIZ

T INEFEEN sixty two had been the turning point. After her humiliating defeat at the hands of the Chinese the same year, in a sharp U-turn India the country steeped in the philosophy of Ahimsa and upholding the primacy of politics in a Nehruvian tradition relentlessly sought military power. So much so that her thirst for its acquisition remains unsatiated till date. In this process she has already acquired an arsenal dreaded by her rivals and envied by fellow contenders for power. Not only has it possessed by now the world's fourth largest military its inventory includes the nuclear bomb with the full compliments of its delivery system. Its blue water navy prowls the oceans well beyond its territorial water and the Indian space research organisation has ensured a niche for the country even in the space. With the dawning of the 21" century India seems to have scaled a new height which has assured her place, at least militarily, as a regional power. The long years of efforts on several fronts have combined to come to a fruition almost in a gush.

India's dream project of manufacturing its Light Combat Aircraft (LCA) to replace the aging MIG-21

Indian Air Force (IAF) made its an American engine (General Elec- Even then the LCA is cheaper than strike capability from deep inside creditable maiden flight on 04 January 2001. The project in making since 1983 has, after a troubled history, been able to pack the LCA engine. India's Gas Turbine with a state-of-the-art aircraft technology which would make it one of the most advanced fighters in its league. Although the official statement by New Delhi regarding the technological excellence of the aircraft is indeed debatable, the LCA production by itself indicates a great tric's F404-F2J3) it is going to be the first Asian aircraft to be subsequently fitted with locally produced Research Establishment was entrusted with the task of designing the engine for LCA back in 1989, Christened Kaveri GTX-35VS, the local engine expected to be in use next year will be more powerful than some of the imported engines.

The demonstrations on January 4 contemporary aircraft of its class.

When the mood was still celebratory over the LCA's success, coming tary achievements, India has also close in its heel had been a remarkable breakthrough in India's towards developing and projecting missilogy. Alittle over a week later on her defence capabilities and build-17 January Agni II, India's first inter- ing strategic alliances to boost its mediate range ballistic missile image as a regional power. For the accurately hit its target in the Bay of purpose she also held the Interna-Bengal. After having overcome the tional Fleet Review (IFR) in Mumbai shortcomings observed in earlier in February, 2001 and Millenium tests since 1989 the Agni was now. Airpower show during the same

Alongside these significant milibeen systematically working display the LCA that carried out its first flight on 4 January.

India's first Geo-synchronous Satellite Launch Vehicle (GSLV) successfully lifted off its launching pad this month although the mission was aborted last month in its first attempt. The 3-stage GSIV in which India, for the first time, used cryogenic engine was the culmination of a 10-year long project. It cost the exchequer Rs 1400 crore. Its successful launch would now enable India to enter the elite space market and join the US, European Union, Russia, Japan and China which already crossed geostationary launch milestone. The military implication of the venture is also no less significant. Given the technological status of India's space programme in developing the technologies of Polar Satellite Launch Vehicle (PSLV), Augmented Satellite Launch Vehicle (ASIV) and now Geo-Synchronous Launch Vehicle (GSLV) she is well poised to proceed to the next goal of achieving Inter-Continental Ballistic Missile (ICBM) capability. There are reports that the work on an ICBM 'Surva' with a range of 5000 km is already in an advanced stage.

In analysing these developments of India's recent military achievements, one must not isolate the technological advancements from New Delhi's ambitions to grow into a world class power. The BJP government wants to transmit the message across the world that India is in no way behind China in defence technology which is well recognised in the west. Beijing's technological advancements have received considerable attention of the international community. Obviously, similar technological developments on the part of India go hand in hand with New Delhi's rich strategic

PERSPECTIVES

In analysing the developments of India's recent military achievements, one must not isolate the technological advancements from New Delhi's ambitions to grow into a world class power. The BJP government wants to transmit the message across the world that India is in no way behind China in defence technology which is well recognised in the west.

achievement for India. The develop- were not however final. There are a class. When it becomes fully opera-ment, design and production of the lot of development works that are LCA by an indigenous team has still in the planning stage for the definitely put India in an exclusive LCA. In the meantime, the detractors both at home and abroad are tional the LCA would make India - critical that the aircraft is not cost only among the eight countries in effective. But the LCA project that It has been justly rated as a landmark have greater spin-offs. For example, such as the engine and radar will launched missile system. On the LCA's successful test flight boost a variety of industrial and finally 'operationalised'. It was month, Each of these events conannounced to be inducted as a tributed towards New Delhi's image major strategic delivery system in and power posture. The IFR was Indian Army. The significance of the comprised of two main party i.e. a successful development of Agni II - fleet review and a symposium under lay in the fact that India had now the title, building bridges of frienddeveloped a 'credible minimum ship'. The stated objective of the the world to have the capacity to consists of public and private sector nuclear deterrence' the corner- grand exercise was to enhance develop supersonic fighter aircraft. collaboration on the other hand, will stone of India's draft nuclear doc- friendly relations between India and trine. It constituted an important other nations. Also in the past India in the history of Indian aviation the development of sub-systems part of the triad of land, air and sea had such event but this time it was

Air Chief Marshal AV Tipnis assessed technological sectors. This may be the country's ability to assemble the world participating in it. The it to be "the advanced technology," one of the reasons that a jubilant delivery system for its nuclear war- event clearly reflected on India's single seat, single engine, super- George Fernendez, the former heads. Agni II a surface to surface desire to project itself as a regional sonic, light weight, all weather, defence minister of India told the missile will be part of India's land power or a country to be taken multirole, air superiority fighter ADA (Aeronautical Development based nuclear deterrant and is seriously, One of the underlying designed for air to air, air to ground Agency) team on the day of the capable of carrying warheads and objectives of the IFR was also to and air to sea role". It's most remark- demonstration, "There is only going hitting targets deep within China exhibit Indian Navy's capability to able feature is that it was entirely an forward from here we should not and Pakistan the countries with the world especially the participatindigenous effort and not an assem- worry about the critics." Each LCA whom India is now engaged in ingcountries. The second important bly work of imported components: would now cost Rs 80 crore instead reconstructing relationship. The eventile, the air show was not the air arranged at an international level The success of Agni II firmed up with several dozens of the navies of squadrons as the workhorse of Although the LCA is currently using of Rs 10 crore estimated earlier. Agni Il greatly adds to India's second show per se. Its vital feature was to agenda.

A crisis is an opportunity and party president is filmed dis- decided to link the Tehelka exposé. Neither the ascent nor the preserva- who has been loyal to you. This sage to that complex web of institu-

M.J. AKBAR

THAT is the difference between a crisis and an opportunity? The correct answer of course is none. A crisis is an opportunity.

A good political leader uses the pressures of a crisis to rearrange the internal balance of power and redirect the current of popular opinion, both necessary and both difficult in normal conditions.

Remarkably, both the ruling party and the Opposition are unaware of this equation. The government faced a crisis and converted it into an opportunity for the Congress. The Congress got the opportunity and used it to create a crisis for

There was no logic, apart from the compulsions of a leader's selfinterest, in the Congress quid proquo for letting Parliament function: the party demanded a commitment from the government that there would be no investigation by the CBI into certain charges made by Dr Subramanian Swamy against Mrs Sonia Gandhi. The linkage was selfdefeating and smelt of fear when the and posted them to the government operational mood should have been long before Tehelka made its turbuone of confident aggression.

Opposition more open space for assault. The Tehelka tapes show the took his allegations seriously inipresident of the BJP take a wad of tially. The Prime Minister marked notes across a table: the memory of them on to his minister for personthose swarthy fingers closing over nel, which is par for the course; and currency notes has become an the minister marked it to the police. abiding and defining image of which is also usual. To dismiss any Indian politics. Defence minister such charge out of hand would have of the government after using Parlia- exonerate her. She cannot afford to meeting overflowing with saffron:

ment to hammer the last nails into a run away from the charge. She is in cussing the quantum of a bribe from to the Swamy allegation, and tion is easy; he has made both look rationale holds for Brajesh Mishra tions that interlinks in the mesh of an arms dealer and directing the brought it into the news, At least one deceptively comfortable. Within two but not for N.K. Singh. N.K. Singh is the Indian economy. The governmoney towards a colleague. This is a charge in the Swamy list seems years he has turned an improbable not loyal to the Prime Minister; his ment of India, and the Prime Minister. scenario made in some Congress serious and must either be proved or coalition into a working reality, and loyalty is to the owners of India's terin particular, has in his dispensaheaven. Any Congress leader would thrown out. It cannot be left created a constituency for himself most powerful corporate house, the fron the most powerful jobs in bankhave demanded that Parliament be unchecked. Dr Swamy alleges that that cuts across party lines and Ambanis. This is not a secret. N.K. convened in case it was in recess for Mrs Sonia Gandhi took KGB money moves towards that broad mental. Singh himself would be touthe to business family that can claim. a full debate in front of the world's at some point. If Mrs Gandhi is in the space called liberal India. Remem-deny it. When word spread a couple television cameras on Tehelka, and clear then she should demand a ber that his starting point was the of weeks ago that N.K. Singh was perhaps demanded the resignation time-bound investigation that will RSS, as he occasionally reminds any going to be at long last prised out of ahead of the game. The perception

the Prime Minister's Office, one of An uncertain leader's mistakes the Ambani sons flew down to Delhi

ing and financial institutions. Any justifiably or otherwise, that it can influence decisions is significantly becomes more important than the reality. It must be said to the credit of the Ambanis that they do not allow a mere trifle like a change of government to cloud this perception. Their N.K. Singhs would do equally well in aCongress government.

What is a well-advertised Reliance man doing in Mr Vajpayee's

Atal Behari Vajpayee does not have to reinvent himself, but he does have to reinvent his environment. There are empty spaces which important colleagues once occupied; there is a credibility gap in his personal office. The Prime Minister probably has less to fear from a confused Opposition than from whispermongers on his own side who are widening the credibility gap to include him. Mr Vajpayee has chosen his opponents with care, but they too are searching for weaknesses on his side. There is more than one crisis afoot. Proven corruption is only the obvious one; there is also the breakdown of confidence in the economy; the unnecessary stagnation after a positive start in Kashmir; the deterioration in relations with neighbours to a point where a commander in Bangladesh can step across and occupy disputed territory... However excellent his personal abilities might be, Jaswani Singh cannot manage two large and critical ministries. Drift and inaction will not address these problems, A Cabinet reshullle and expansion is a compulsion now, not an option. This has to be followed by a revamped

If the Prime Minister does not act.

Mr Vajpayee has chosen his opponents with care, but they too are searching for weaknesses on his side. There is more than one crisis afoot. Proven corruption is only the obvious one; there is also the breakdown of confidence in the economy; the unnecessary stagnation after a positive start in Kashmir; the deterioration in relations with neighbours debate? Because she does not know how to debate in the House, as is

If this position is extraordinary then there are no words in any dictionary to describe the supplementary Congress demand. How can you have accountability for the Prime Minister but a blank cheque for the leader of the Opposition? Is Mrs Sonia Gandhi beyond the scrutiny of mere mortals?

Dr Swamy made his allegations lent appearance. Since time has No government has given its diminished the good Doctor Swamy's credibility, very few people George Fernandes' personal friend been unusual. The Congress very well-constructed coffin. public life now, and allegations tend are explicable. Mr Vajpayee's mis- and lobbied with anyone who would Instead the Congress wants a judg- to become mud that sticks unless it ment before a debate. Why have is washed away by an independent Parliament at all in that case? Is this investigation. Instead, the Congress when Tehelka broke. Decisions that because the leader of the Congress officially stops Parliament from should have been taken within Mrs Sonia Gandhi is terrified of a functioning because it wants no twenty-fourhours, and which would investigation whatsoever! This thereby have had a positive impact seems to indicate that the party is were cursed by suspicious delay. If terrified that Mrs Sonia Gandhi will be found guilty. Or that Mrs Gandhi is terrified even if her party is privately more sanguine about such a

> Hence the view held by the cynical element in the Congress: the have been controlled. The Prime Congress was started by a foreigner; it will also be ended by a foreigner. Unless of course it is rescued by the BIP, which is always a possibility.

Mr Atal Behari Vajpavee has one enormous advantage over both his friends and his foes: he is very easily underestimated. This tends to make In the end the Prime Minister was his foes complacent and his friends forced to take all these steps, but he confused, particularly those friends took too long and walked with a who want his job. The Prime Minister's affable manner and measured happening with what might be style disguise the careful craft of a called the tail end of the Tehelka dog. man who has watched the politics of It is impossible to understand what sharp contemporaries and risen keeps a bureaucrat like N.K. Singh in get what they want, and get it brathrough the political mist to sit on the Prime Minister's Office. It is not a zenly. Such exercise of power by a the chair of everyone's dreams. simple matter of loyalty to a man business family sends its own mestakes perplex. Why is he stumbling when he could run? He started badly Bangaru Laxman (president, in the words of a fellow columnist, of the New Year Party of India) and George Fernandes had been forced to resign, and an enquiry ordered within 24 hours, the damage could Minister might have in passing suggested that he did not necessarily approve of all kinds of journalism, but who was he to pass judgement: he could name at least one former journalist on his own side who had tried the same techniques. confused limp. The same thing is listen to drum up support for N.K. Singh. This is a fact, in the knowledge of the men and women of Delhi's ruling class. It is extraordinary that a bureaucrat with such proven links to a corporate house should be appointed to the PMO in the first place; it is appalling that he should remain there despite allegations made by the president of the BJP, and while the process of enquiry is on. The PMO is not an ordinary of fice; the Ambanis would not want their man in an office that was ordinary. They need information about government decisions at the highest level. It is fair to add that N.K. Singh is not their only loyalist; it would probably be accurate to state that he is their most important one.

The Ambanis need influence in government; all corporate interests need it, and the Ambanis are only better at this game than their competitors. The issue is not what an ambitious business family wants: the question is why the Prime Minister of India has permitted them to information including date, place and significance of subject matter. Pictures received will not be returned.

PHOTORIAL

STAR PHOTO A K M MOHSIN

Stop this mess

Even the surface of the moon is more conducive to the eye. The Karwan Bazaar-Hotel Sonargaon road, which is already pock marked and bumpy, is now being 'excavated' by one of the city's many works departments. This is one of the most congested thoroughfares in Dhaka. With the first rains expected any time, surely the authorities could have found a more appropriate time to add to our woes?

Misleading caption

This refers to a photograph printed on 21 April, in the back page of your daily along with the caption. "Although a weekly holiday, classes in many departments of Dhaka University were held yesterday to make up the losses due to hartals. Photo shows first year English (Honours) students attending class." Both the photograph and the caption are misleading. The students I am shown teaching in the photograph belong to the Intensive Course in Basic English, and not to first year (Honours) in English. The I am compelled to reply to the letter Intensive Courses in Basic English from the True Indian (April 23). His are being offered at the Department virulent comments, scoffing and of English, Dhaka University, for the scorning Bangladeshi characterislast 17 years. The Basic English tics have revealed his true self and Language Course classes on Fridays raised our hackles. More than half a are nothing new because since the century has passed since Mahatma inception of this short intensive. Gandhi was brutally killed, and later course the classes are being held on - Indira Gandhi, the daughter of the the weekends. When a young man great leader, lawaharlal Nehru was accompanying the photographer. who took some photographs of the paradise if one assumes that India diers have been killed mercilessly students of the class in progress, was the ingenuous messiah of our asked me about the class level, I liberation war, without thinking of intrudes into our country, kidnaps clearly told him that it was a special its own interest. We have made full our citizens and plunders our wonder if there had been any communication gap and the wrong caption was given inadvertently.

opportunity. Dr. Sadrul Amin Professor of English

Department of English, Dhaka

The error is regretted .-- Editor

Border tension

ent educational backgrounds. I form of treaties and trade. As for the law, in spite of all these losses, we do begging and stealing by Bangladeshi not support the killing of BSF sol- bomb explosion at Ramna Batamul citizen in India, it is India who has to diers. And in any case, according to which claimed valuable fives. This is be blamed entirely. As a result of the media, the skirmish took place one of a number of bomb explosions I would appreciate if your daily Indian goods being sent through our when the BSI attacked our soldiers. that point to a failure by the adminacknowledges the error, and let the borders, the local industries are in Our BDR moved to save themselves istration. How could the governreaders know about it at the earliest total ruin with itinerant and unemployed masses.

> ACitizen Chittagong.

This is in response to the True Indian' (April 23). The writer has dismissed us as beggars and thieves. I cannot imagine how anyone can scold and scoff a neighbouring country. We love our country no less than they love theirs . I admit that the writer must have patriotism for India, but why deviate from humanitarian grounds and disrespect others' feelings?

The True Indian is shocked by the killing of 18 BSF soldiers, But we' have been bearing the same pain for also assasinated. One is in a fools the last 30 years as many BDR solduring this period. BSF often class comprising students of differ- restitution for what we owe, in the wealth, disobeying international Mujib, has the writer forgotten the inquiry? killing of Mahatma Gandhi , Indira Gandhi and Rajiv Gandhi? First look her finger at those quarters that she at your own face in the mirror, then terms 'anti-sovereign' and 'com-criticize others. friend. The way India is ripping off Bangladesh from a fair share of the Ganges waters indicates its attitude towards us .1 suggest that the writer does not encourage a master-slave relation between two neighbouring countries. This will bring nothing good for them as well as for us .1 suggest that the writer think seriously before commenting on a serious issue.

Saifullah BUET

Pahela Baishakh

The Prime Minister has indirectly made the opposition and other 'Islamic groups' responsible for the

and the accident occurred then . ment blame any quarter prema-About the assassination of Sheikh turely? Wouldn't it influence the The Prime Minister also pointed munal' forces. Her address has India has failed to prove to be our highlighted two distinct characteristics among the existing political and non-political groups of our country. One is 'anti-sovereign', 'communal' and the other is 'patriotic' and () 'culturally awakened'. Let us be rational about these allegations.

Could any Islamic group afford to be anti-sovereign, to bring back Pakistan? No. not at all. Yes they may be communal, but it is far-fetched to term them anti-sovereign. On the confrary the groups who believe we have the same culture as neighbouring West Bengal, are they not communal? They have all the possibilities of bifurcated lovalry.

Minash