Wildlife experts slam zoo's attempt to crossbreed lion with tiger

MOSHED ALI KHAN

The National Zoo at Mirpur has launched a controversial project to crossbreed an Indian lion with an Indian tiger. The project aims to produce a "show animal" called Litigon.

The Alipur Zoo in India has carried out a similar "experiment," said one zoo official. Had the male partner been a tiger, the infertile offspring would have been called a Tigon, he added.

However, the two felines, kept in a single cage, have so far had several rounds of violent encounters.

Meanwhile, wildlife experts have strongly criticised the crossbreeding project, terming it "unnecessary and aimless scheme against the nature".

"What Alipur zoo produced looked neither like a tiger nor a lion and the animal looked pale and deformed," said one wildlife expert, who has visited the Alipur Zoo.

Autonomy of electronic media Sayeed defends draft bills, blasts press

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

State Minister for Information Prof. Abu Sayeed has defended the draft laws seeking autonomy of the state-run radio and television, saying proper implementation of the laws would ensure the long-felt need.

Highlighting the key provisions in the proposed laws at a news conference at his office yesterday, the minister bitterly criticised newspaper reports, commentaries and editorials about the cabinet move, which he said were not authentic.

"The newspaper write-ups were not based on facts. Most of the writers wrote without knowing what was there in the draft laws," visibly perturbed Sayeed said. He also blasted others opposing the government move without knowing or understanding the issue well.

The laws were drafted in the light of the autonomy commission's report and on examination of the status of autonomous electronic media in seven countries, he informed reporters.

The information minister replied to every point so far raised in the

Low-lying areas in Ctg inundated

Rains paralyse normal life

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Ctg

Torrential rain yesterday triggered flash flood in the low-lying areas of the port city, mounting sufferings of the residents of those areas.

Met office here recorded 184 mm rainfall in the past three days. It forecast more rains today and also in the next few days.

The downpour also caused a dislocation in delivery of goods to and from Chittagong port yesterday, port officials said.

Due to dislocation in delivery of goods, the port faced space problems at its yards and sheds as cargo continued to get dumped, the officials said.

Vice chairman of Bangladesh Master Stevedores Association (BMSA) Munirul Hoque Chowdhury told this correspondent that incessant rains had hampered loading and unloading work in the foreign cargo ships staying at Chittagong port.

"Besides, the stevedores are forced to pay double wages to the workers for working in the rains," Chowdhury said.

Chittagong airport sources said flight operation was delayed due to rains accompanied with gusty wind yesterday.

A schedule flight of Bangladesh Biman that left for Dhaka from Chittagong airport at 10:35 am yesterday was forced to return, sources added.

On the other hand, residents in the city's low-lying areas including Bahadurhat, Chawkbazar, Sholakbazar, Halishahar, Nasirabad, Bibirhat and Chakta, remained stranded till filing of this report at 5:45 pm yesterday.

Traffic on the city roads was thin due to torrential rain.

We want to resolve all issues with India through discussion: PM

UNB, Dhaka

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina yesterday said Bangladesh stands for resolving all issues including the border problem with India through discussion.

"We don't want any conflict, we want resolution of problems through discussion," she said at a meeting with foreign ministry officials at the ministry.

Referring to recent border clashes between BDR and BSF, the prime minister said when she took power, about 150 miles of border was undemarcated but now only 6.5-km border and enclaves remained to be settled.

She hoped that two task forces of the two countries would settle the unresolved issues.

About opposition criticism over the issue, Hasina said in such a national crisis all parties should get together, but unfortunately the opposition did not extend any cooperation, rather, the opposition and fundamentalist groups tried to

Soccer stampede leaves 120 dead in Ghana

Worst tragedy ever in Africa; third in a month

REUTERS, Accra

Africa suffered its worst football disaster ever, and its third in a month, when at least 120 people were killed in a stampede at a soccer match in Ghana.

Spectators said the crowd stampeded when police fired teargas after fans hurled missiles near the end of a game on Wednesday between Accra team Hearts of Oak and arch-rivals Asante Kotoko from the central town of Kumasi.

"Some died of suffocation but the majority seem to have been killed by being crushed," said Brigadier Daniel Twum of the military hospital where most of the dead and injured were taken after the stampede.

President John Kufuor, clearly very shaken by the tragedy during a visit to the injured, told this news agency simply "this is really sad". One of his officials said Kufuor screamed when he first heard the news.

Kufuor summoned his cabinet for an emergency meeting later on Thursday and his aides said that a period of national mourning would be declared.

Twum said 102 dead were brought to the military hospital and officials at two other hospitals confirmed a further 18 dead. He said another 50 people had been injured, but most were not in a serious condition.

"All the victims will have to be identified, and then we will do post mortems," Twum said.

Witnesses said that with Hearts of Oak leading 2-1 after two quick goals near the end of the game, Asante Kotoko fans began tearing up plastic chairs and throwing chunks onto the pitch. Police reacted by firing teargas into the packed stadium which has a capacity of 50,000.

"There was a mad rush out of the stadium," spectator Mohamed Anwar told Reuters.

"There was smoke and there was debris, and I counted at least 15 people lying on the floor in one part of the stadium. Some were injured and apparently some were dead."

"People who fell were lying on the floor. You could see that they were clearly dead."

Wails of anguish echoed around the stadium as scores of bodies piled up from Africa's third football disaster in the last month and the worst in its history.

On April 11, 43 soccer fans were crushed to death when fans tried to force their way into Johannesburg's huge Ellis Park stadium midway through a top South African league match.

At least seven people were killed and 51 seriously injured in an April 30 stampede in the Democratic Republic of Congo after police moved to break up rioting at a match in Lubumbashi.

BJP braces for the worst

PALLAB BHATTACHARYA, New Delhi

As five Indian states, including West Bengal, went to assembly polls yesterday, India's ruling BJP took a defensive posture, keeping in view the possibility of setbacks for its allies DMK and AGP in Tamil Nadu and Assam respectively and gains for the main opposition Congress.

In the last few days, Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee himself said at election rallies more than once that result of the assembly polls in West Bengal, Assam, Tamil Nadu, Kerala and Pondicherry would not be a referendum on the policies of his government. And yesterday, he told a separate gathering - not an election meeting - that the poll outcome would not have any bearing on his government.

The underlying message of Vajpayee's remarks to the opposition is that the latter should not create problems for his government, observers say.

The Congress publicly said two

"Those who have to lose, will lose and those who have to win, will win. But the business of governance will go on," the prime minister said.

Observers discern in these remarks a sign of worry of the country's ruling National Democratic Alliance (NDA), given the fact that various minor polls have favoured Sonia Gandhi-led Congress to regain power in Assam and Kerala. Besides, Congress could savor success in Tamil Nadu and West Bengal as the party is a constituent of the alliance with AIADMK and Trinamool Congress whose victory in those two states cannot be ruled out.

The underlying message of Vajpayee's remarks to the opposition is that the latter should not create problems for his government, observers say.

The Congress publicly said two days ago that it was not interested in toppling the BJP-led government and would rather allow it to "fall under the weight of its own contradictions."

However, the Congress did make it clear that elections in the five states are first indicator of the people's mood about the functioning of Vajpayee government after the news portal's expose on corruption in defence deals.

No doubt, BJP's strategy has been to stop Congress in the elections in the five states, especially in Assam where the saffron party went against the desire of majority in its state unit to see an alliance with ruling AGP there at the last moment. The BJP central leadership knows well

Treatment of Tipu begins in Bangkok

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The treatment of injured journalist Tipu Sultan has begun at Bumrungrad Hospital in Bangkok, Thailand.

Doctors said Tipu would have to undergo treatment for at least two weeks. According to primary assessments, he would need at least two surgical operations in his hands.

Tipu's relative told The Daily Star over phone yesterday that the team of specialists examining Tipu have instructed that he should be helped to move around instead of lying down, he added.

"The doctors said if all goes well, Tipu's treatment at the hospital should be over within two weeks. But when he goes back home, he would have to undergo long-term physiotherapy," he said.

The Bumrungrad Hospital authorities have offered Tipu a three-night stay and initial medical assessment free of cost.

Tipu was flown to Bangkok with a guardian last Tuesday for his treat
