Experts at BUET seminar say Voltage instability affects electronic gadgets

BSS, Dhaka

The system voltage at different parts of the country, especially in the capital city, reduces drastically during the peak hours and consumers receive very poor quality voltage supply which makes their electronic gadgets vulnerable to damage, power system experts of BUET said yesterday.

They were discussing the on-going low voltage situation in the metropolis at a seminar on "Load management and low-voltage problem" jointly organised by the Department of Electrical and Electronic Engineering and Bangladesh chapter of IEEE at Council Bhaban of BUET this morning.

Vice Chancellor of BUET Professor Dr Nooruddin Ahmed, PDB chairman Brigadier General M A Malek Mollah, DESA Chairman S M Shamsul Alam, Prof Shahidul Islam Khan, Prof Dr S M Lutful Kabir and Prof Rezwan Khan, among others, spoke on the occasion.

Professor Nooruddin Ahmed said efforts are underway to procure a two to three megawatt independent power plant for BUET as most of the electronic gadgets and resources of the university are encountering visible damage due to low-voltage and other power problems.

He said serious endeavours are needed in this sector as most of the small generators create severe noise pollution along with emitting toxic gases like carbon monooxide or carbon di-oxide and the city has very few oxygen producing trees to balance the situation.

Prof Dr S M Lutful Kabir, a leading power system researcher of BUET, said in a bid to improve the low voltage level of the distribution system, the 132/33kv and 33/11kv transformers have been made to operate at their high tap settings. Unfortunately, he noted that, this arrangement has not been providing significant improvement on the voltage level during peak hours.

"It creates a new problem during light load situation," he said.

Quoting a recent observation of the Supervisory Control and Data Acquisition (SCADA) centre of Dhaka Electric Supply Authority (DESA), he said that due to high tap settings the voltages at 33kv and 11kv level become as high as 39kv and 12.5kv respectively in some substations during small hours of the day like 3 am to 4 am when the load is minimum.
