BRAC to launch micro-credit programme for extreme poor

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (BRAC) is going to launch a new project in January next year to bring the extreme poor under the micro-credit programme with a view to alleviating poverty.

The project titled "Changing the Lives of the Extreme Poor" will start in the extreme poor area of the country.

Donors including European Union and DFID have provided 48 million US dollars for the project in its first phase.

This was disclosed at a workshop on "Changing the Lives of the Extreme Poor: What We Know and What We Need to Know" held at the BRAC University building in the city yesterday.

Participants at the workshop discussed a study titled "The Extreme Poor and Their Development Needs: An Exploratory Study in Bangladesh" which was conducted for the BRAC's new project.

Presenting the findings of the research study, Dr. Shantana R Halder, senior research economist of BRAC, said that the main objective of the study is to gain an understanding about the socio-economic characteristics of the extreme poor, their development needs and expectations.

She noted that main causes of poverty in Bangladesh are the land redistribution, the family breakup, inherited poverty and incidental crisis or diseases.

The BRAC has defined the extreme poor as "those who send their children to work as domestic help, day labourer, etc. to support the family instead of sending them to school and those who depended upon seasonal wage employment, domestic work or begging."

Chaired by Dr. Salahuddin Ahmed, the workshop was addressed by Dr. AMR Chowdhury, Dr. Hossain Zillur Rahman, Dr. Binayak Sen and Dr. Humaira Islam.

Among others, Faisal Hossain, Ranjan F Rozario, Mohammad Hasan Ali, Md. Hasan Khaled, Abul Hasib Khan and Rabeya Yasmin took part in the open discussion and shared their experiences on working with the extreme poor.
