

Violence causes deaths of 14pc expectant mothers'

BSS, Dhaka

At least 14 per cent pregnant women's deaths are caused by violence in the country. The incidents of maternal mortality are decreasing while violence against women is rising.

Dr Momena Khatun, Deputy Director and Programme Manager (Maternal Health Services), disclosed this information while presenting the "National Maternal Health Strategy" at National Consensus Workshop at BIAM auditorium in the city yesterday.

Advisor for Health and Family Welfare Brigadier (Retd) MA Malik was the chief guest at the workshop.

Prof TA Chowdhury, Kayode S Oyejobite and Salma Khan took part in the discussions. Health Secretary Fazlur Rahman was also present.

Brigadier Malik said the maternal health situation is still alarming. "Unless we move forward with a strategic vision, the situation might become more complex for us," he said.

Dr Momena Khatun said most of the problems relevant to maternal health in Bangladesh arise from the social standing of the girl child and women.

Skilled of attendants attend only 13 per cent of the births and 87 per cent of births are taking place at home. The same women who contribute 42 per cent of the labour force of the country face death and disability in the very process that brings forth life, she said.

"Most population based studies show that abortion complications are responsible for nearly a quarter of deaths of the mothers," she added.

The discussants said present health and family planning system is not upto the mark and far short of expectation. It cannot meet the goal of Health and Population Sector Program (HPSPP), so there is the need for reappraisal of intervention, they said.
